M'NULTA TALKS FIGHT

Will Hold Whiskey Trust Property at Any Cost.

Decision of the Supreme Court Sustaining the Judgment of Ouster Does Not Weaken Him—Guards Increased—Skyrockets To Be Used for Signals in Case of Attack.

Chicago, June 14.—Shortly after the decision of the supreme court in the case of the People vs. the Distilling & Cattle Feeding company, sustaining the judgment of ouster, was received, receiver John McNulta was seen by a reporter. He was not inclined to discuss the decision, but asserted his intention to hold the trust's property at any cost.

Additional Guards on Duty.

Last night he suggested to Marshal Arnold that additional deputies should be sworn in and distributed among the local distilleries and the marshal began enrolling the required number of men. During the evening they were parcelled out, the greater number going to Riverdale, which place it was rumored was to be attacked.

Skyrockets for Alarm Signals.

Four big boxes labelled skyrockets and directed to Mr. McNulta were carried into the marshal's office and were distributed among the distilleries last evening. They are to be used as alarm signals at night if the telephone wires are cut.

THE CORNELL HENLEY CREW.

Comments of English Papers Concerning Its Performance.

London, June 14.—The Pall Mall Gazette, commenting upon the performances of the Cornell crew since it has been in training on the Thames for the Henley regatta, expresses the opinion that more than one English crew will meet with little difficulty in defeating the oarsmen from Ithaca. English oarsmen, it is said, do not believe that the Cornell crew can row a stroke of forty-six to the minute without loss of form.

Their Work Criticised.

The Echo, referring to the same subject, says that it is not anticipated that the Cornell crew will seriously threaten the English crews, adding: "They row a tremenduously fast stroke, but they fail to catch the water with effect. The men sitting in a direct line cause the craft to hang between strokes. Several changes have been made in the crew and there appears to be difficulty in seating the men right."

SEALSKINS WILL BE DEAR.

The Animals Are Less Numerous This Year Than Ever Before.

Washington, June 14.—Preliminary reports received at the treasury department from the United States government agents in Behring sea state that seals are less numerous this season than ever before. This is attributed to pelagic sealing, where the proportion of seal skins secured to seals slaughtered is said to be less than one in ten. From present indications the North American Commercial company, which has the contract with the United States government for taking seals on the Pribyloff islands, will not be allowed to take more than its minimum catch, which was fixed by Secretary Carlisle at 7,500 skins.

CHINA AND FORMOSA.

Opposition to Japanese Occupation. The Attacks on Missions.

London, June 14.—A dispatch from Shanghai says that a remnant of the famous Black Flags is entrenched at Chung-Wa, island of Formosa, and that they are expected to make a determined stand against the Japanese, who are taking possession of that island according to the terms of the treaty of peace. The dispatch says that a British gunboat has been ordered to the Yang-tse-Kiang to protect British interests in case of trouble. The Chinese ministers at Pekin hold the officials of Chengtu responsible for a part of the outrages against the foreign missions there.

The Brockton Shoe Strike.

Brockton, Mass., June 14.—The strike at the Herrod shoe factory continues today. Some seventy-eight hands came out yesterday, including lasters, edge setters and sole fasteners, and one branch of the International union. It is expected that other branches may be ordered out to-morrow. Pickets guard the approaches to the factory.

Seven Years for Stealing $95,000.

Charlotte, N. C., June 14.—J. R. Holland, the defaulting cashier of the Merchants and Farmers' National bank of this city, has been sentenced in the United States district court here by Judge Dick to seven years in Albany, N. Y., penitentiary. Holland's defalcation amounted to $95,000.

To Remove Old War Monitors.

Washington, June 14.—The navy department has under consideration a plan for the removal of old war monitors which are lying in the James river below Richmand, Va. It is believed that the vessels will be taken to Philadelphia, though the project is yet but in contemplation.

Attempt To Wreck a Pay Train.

Cincinnati, June 14.—An attempt was made to wreck the Louisville & Nashville pay train containing $50,000 near Visalia, Ky., yesterday. Ties were placed across the rails near a high trestle. The train ran into the obstruction but fortunately escaped derailment.

Archdeacon of Buffalo District.

Buffalo, June 14.—Bishop Coxe has appointed Rev. Dr. Lobdell, of Trinity church this city, archdeacon for the Buffalo district, which comprises the counties of Niagara, Wyoming, Allegany, Cattaraugus and Chautauqua.

Meadville Theological School.

Meadville, Pa., June 14.—The annual commencement exercises of the Meadville Theological school were held yesterday in the Unitarian church. The graduating class numbered twelve.

Free Trade in New South Wales.

Sydney, N. S. W., June 14.—The assembly has passed, on its second reading, the customs bill which abolishes the duties imposed in 1891, and virtually establishes free trade.

MINISTER TO VENEZUELA.

Consul at La Guayra, Allen Thomas, Promoted to the Position.

Washington, June 14.—The president has appointed Allen Thomas, who since January, 1894, has been consul at La Guayra, to be United States minister at Venezuela. Mr. Thomas was appointed consul almost without political support or recommendation and his selection as minister from a number of applicants is solely due to the president's confidence in his fitness, largely based upon the acceptable manner in which he has performed his consulalte duties.

Efforts To Improve the Service.

This appointment is in line with the efforts made to improve the diplomatic and consular service, not only by a careful selection of those entering the service, but by the promotion of those who have demonstrated fitness and a disposition to be useful at less important posts. The president has also appointed Emory F. Post of the District of Columbia to be an assistant commissioner of the land office, vice Ed A. Browers, resigned.

ORDERED TO HONOLULU.

Commander Pigman Will Relieve Commander Thomas.

Washington, June 14.—Commander C. M. Thomas, of the Bennington, will be relieved of the command of that vessel, which is now presumably the only naval ship at Honolulu, and given three months leave as soon as his successor, Commander G. N. Pigman, who was named yesterday, reaches Hawaii by merchant steamer from San Francisco. Commander Thomas made a famous cruise in the Bennington last year, running from Naples, Italy, straight-away to patrol duty in Behring sea. Later he was sent to protect American interests in Salvador, and through offering asylum to the president of that country involved the United States in the troublesome Ezeta incident which led to a radical change in American practice and to the decision of President Cleveland that "the right of asylum for political and other refugees has no foundation in international law."

GLADSTONE AT HAMBURG.

Some Talk of Arranging a Meeting with Bismarck.

Hamburg, June 14. — The steamer Tantallon Castle, having on board Mr. Gladstone and a party who are the guests of Sir Donald Currie, has arrived here. The party will attend the opening of the North Sea-Baltic canal. The piers and embankments were densely crowded with people who watched the arrival of the steamer and cheered lustily the ex-premier of Great Britain. There is some idea of arranging a meeting between Prince Bismarck and Mr. Gladstone, but it is improbable that it will be effected. The principal citizens of Hamburg hope to entertain Mr. Gladstone, Sir Donald Currie and the other visitors at a banquet Friday. A reception will be given on board the steamer Saturday, after which about one hundred invited guests will dine with Mr. Gladstone.

AGAINST SILVER CONFERENCE.

Replies Received from the German Federal Governments.

Berlin, June 14.—The National Zeitung says that replies have now been received by the government from the majority of the federal governments to the former's inquiry regarding the expediency of an international conference for the settlement of the currency question. While several answers do not imply opposition to the proposal, not one of them manifests a real desire for a conference. The replies, it appears, generally indicate a conviction that such a meeting would be fruitless.

DID NOT ENFORCE BLUE LAWS.

Rumored That Hoboken's Mayor Has Been Indicted.

Hoboken, N. J., June 14.—It is rumored broadly in Hoboken that Mayor Fagan has been indicted by the Hudson county grand jury now in session, and that the indictment of Chief of Police Donovan is sure to follow, because they have not insisted upon a strict observance of the old blue laws, which provides that no intoxicating liquor shall be sold on Sunday.

Four Men Astray at Sea.

Liverpool, N. S., June 14.—Gloucester schooner Robin Hood, arrived from Grand Banks to land a sick man, Stanley Regan of Shelbourne. Captain Boine reports four men getting astray from his vessel 100 miles south of St. Peters in a dense fog. Up to date the captain has heard no news of them.

New Bicycle Record.

Chicago, June 14.—The world's road record for five miles on a bicycle was broken here yesterday. Before 500 people John Lawson, "The Terrible Swede," rode five miles at Garfield park in 11 minutes and 33 2-5 seconds. The best prior record for five miles was 11:40, held by Bainbridge.

Berlin's New Prefect of Police.

Berlin, June 14.—Baron Windheim, who since April has been prefect of police at Stettin, has been appointed prefect of police here to succeed Baron Richthofen. Baron Windheim, who is only 38 years old, is a favorite of Dr. Von Koeller, Prussian minister of the interior.

Boston, June 14.—Charlie Kelly of New York has written to a friend in Boston asking for a match with any of the 110 pound men hereabouts.

HE PRAYED AND FORGED

A. S. Moore Charged with Stealing Thousands.

He Was Treasurer of a New York Silk Company, a Psychologist and Sunday School Teacher—His Stealings May Amount to $150,000. His Firm in the Sheriff's Hands.

New York, June 14.—A. S. Moore, treasurer of the East River Silk company of Astoria, was held in the Tombs police court yesterday afternoon in $10,000 bail on a charge of forgery preferred by the Union bank. The forgery on which this charge is based, is for $12,000, but it is said that Moore has gotten away with about $150,000 since November. The loss will fall entirely on the banks and the silk company, which has already gone into the sheriff's hands.

Lost One Job for Speculating.

Moore was bookkeeper for Inman, Swan & Co., in the cotton exchange building for four years up to last November, when he was discharged for speculating. There could have been no suspicion as to his honesty, for Robert Inman allowed him to become treasurer of the silk company. His books were examined as a matter of precaution but were found all right and he kept up his pleasant relations with the firm.

Dropped His Stealings in Cotton.

Moore lived in style with his wife up in Harlem, where he studied psychology, taught Sunday school and entertained liberally. He never told Mrs. Moore of his dismissal and it is believed that he was led into deeper speculation and finally forgery to keep up with his unchanged expenses. He is said to have used Inman, Swan & Co's signature for $32,000; R. W. Inman's for $30,000, and Mr. Menke's for $41,000, and is thought to have dropped all the money in cotton.

Discovered by Merest Accident.

Moore is only 34 years old and was a country schoolmaster up to six years ago. His penmanship is good, and it was by the merest accident that the Union bank discovered the forgeries. The cashier in looking over a bundle of his notes saw that Moore had an account in the Bank of America, and as the notes were steadily becoming larger in amount, he thought he would talk to the America's cashier.

Broke Down and Confessed.

Moore, it is said, broke down when confronted by Mr. Inman, and confessed all. He was arraigned this morning for examination.

ONTARIO'S STATE FUNERALS.

Opposed to Expenses Incurred in the Burial of Sir John Thompson.

Ottawa, June 14.—In the house of commons yesterday Hon. Ouimet, minister of public works, replying to a question, stated there had been three state funerals given to Canada. The first was given to Sir George E. Cartier, in 1891, the cost of which was $10,000; the second to Sir John Macdonald, costing $6,900, and the last one to Sir John Thompson, all the accounts of which were not yet audited, but it was expected the account asked for ($20,000) would be sufficient. There is likely to be some strong apposition to the appropriation of $25,000 for the latter's funeral.

WHITE CAPS' MISTAKE.

One Shot Dead and Another Probably Fatally Wounded.

Salem, Mo., June 14.—White caps visited the home of Eli M. Harvey, three miles north of here Wednesday night and were fired upon by Harvey. Joseph Nelson received a bullet in the right breast, from the effects of which he died two hours later. Another of the white caps was shot and probably fatally wounded.

New York Poolroom Raided.

New York, June 14.—A big poolroom raid was made last evening at 40 West 28th street by a squad of policemen under command Acting Inspector Brooks. Nearly 150 persons were in the room when the police made their descent and great excitement ensued. Only the proprietors and attendants were arrested. The poolroom was a gilt-edged resort.

Major Halford Transferred.

Washington, June 14.—Among the orders issued yesterday from the war department, was one transferring Major Elijah W. Halford of the pay department from Omaha, Neb., to Denver, Col. Major Halford has been stationed at Omaha since his appointment as paymaster at the close of his service as private secretary to President Harrison.

Clouds of Grasshoppers.

Elkhart, Ind., June 14.—A strange sight was witnessed here yesterday afternoon. Grasshoppers appeared in clouds and came down upon the fields of grain, corn and grass in such numbers that everything seemed to be alive with them. They ate everything green and left the fields bare and crops ruined.

Vetoed by Gov. Morton.

Albany, June 14.—Gov. Morton has vetoed Assemblyman Clarke's bill authorizing the construction and repair of lifting locks on the Erie canal, in the city of Lockport, Niagara county, and making an appropriation therefor.

Levi P. Morton is a nice man, but he is too old to become the President of the United States.

When the boy leaves school let him take up a line of work that his own inclinations recommend.

The announcement of adjournment sine die was greeted with loud applause by the members of the Legislature. This demonstrates that after all they know a good thing when they hear it.

The Legislature did at least one good thing before adjourning when they confirmed ex-Gov. George C. Ludlow as Supreme Court Judge. All other nominations made by the Governor were rejected.

It is greatly to the credit of the Republican party that it has so many men who are acknowledged to be thoroughly fitted for the presidency. A party so well supplied with first-class leaders is sure to succeed.—Courier-News.

But how about the New Jersey Republican Gubernatorial nomination.

The alleged police station in this city is a disgrace to Plainfield, and there can be no worse punishment to a violator of the laws than to lock him or her in one of its whitewashed, badly ventilated, three by six cells for a night when the thermometer is chasing the century mark.

The Prohibitionists yesterday nominated Henry W. Wilbur, of Vineland, for Governor. The platform declares for the abolition of the liquor traffic, in favor of woman's suffrage and arbitration between employes and employers, and then unmercifully scores the outgoing Legislature as one completely surfeited with corruptness.

Republican Senators opine that they can continue the special investigating committee without special authority from the body of which they are a part. Just at present the G. O. P. legislators are having everything their own way. But there is a day of reckoning coming. And it can't come too quick.

What The Daily Press recommended to those who opposed the establishment of sewer beds in this city in reference to making their objections known at the councilmanic hearing instead of on street corners, applies with equal force to boroughites with regard to the Watchung avenue opening, which will be considered by the borough council this evening.

The Common Council of New Brunswick will be unlocked next Monday, now that the bills seeking that end were passed over the veto of Gov. Werts by the Legislature. The key to this combination, gained as it was by the most flagrant partisanship and violation of the true and fundamental principles of government, will, if The Daily Press is not very much mistaken, in the end prove a disastrous thing for New Brunswick.

We acknowledge the receipt of a pretty decorated cup and saucer that holds a good big cupful as a memento from the sewer committee. Thanks.—Dunellen Call.

Unfortunately for the generosity of The Daily Press the samples of the raw sewage and its effluent from the South Framingham beds, which were the gift of Councilman Westphal, were poured into the gutter the other day. Otherwise we should have certainly invited Editor Day to bring down his "pretty decorated cup and saucer that holds a good big cupful," and imbibe some of the before and after, with the hope that such a proceeding would permit him to inculcate some practical experience into the Dunellenites.

The one hundred and nineteenth Legislature adjourned without day at 3:30 yesterday afternoon, having passed all the bills recommended by the select committee, many of them the second time despite the objections of the Governor, with the exception of the bill requiring that all applications for pardons shall be filed with the Clerk of the Court of Pardons for thirty days previous to action upon them. This bill was vetoed by the Governor, and the Republican Senators decided not to take further action. The closing scenes in the Senate took on a dramatic phase when Senator Voorhees was privileged to read a statement from the Comptroller showing what a saving had been made in the expenses of the State by the passage of the new appropriation bill. There had been so many different estimates made and so many questions asked that the statement was listened to with much interest.

The bill, as it now goes to the Governor, foots up $2,295,567, which includes all the ordinary and extraordinary expenses. In 1894 the expenditures, including ordinary, extraordinary and special appropriations, were $2,189, 184.75. A dozen different estimates have been made of the effect of the bill upon the States finances.

EIGHT MEN BREAK JAIL.

Desperate Men Get Away From Middlesex County Jail.

New Brunswick, N. J., June 14.—Eight desperate men, one of them an alleged murderer, escaped from the county jail here at two o'clock this morning.

All the available police in the county are after them on foot and on horseback, but up to noon none had been captured.

George Stefanko, who is under indictment for killing Stephen Nagy, at Perth Amboy, is the most dangerous man in the lot, and it is not believed that he will be taken alive.

The others who escaped are: Thomas Kinsly, John Murphy, John Clark and Costello, all of Perth Amboy, in jail awaiting trial for highway robbery on April 17th last, and Joseph Kelly, Louis Fisher and Frank Williams, who are charged with being members of the notorious gang of incendiaries which have been implicated in the destruction of much property in New Brunswick.

The escape was due, it is claimed, to the carelessness of the jailer, David Messler, who secured the position about a month ago, displacing James Grady.

Thirty-Four Killed.

Fall River, Mass., June 14th.—The worst catastrophe that has visited the city since the Granite mill fire occurred this morning at the Langley loom harness shop on County street. A new boiler of the Kendall make exploded in the basement of the two-story wooden building, blowing out the entire end of the building, knocking the supports from the side and allowing the upper floors to settle in the ruins. There were forty-five persons at work in the shop, and only eleven are known to have escaped.

THE SECRET ORDERS.

Arrangements were made at the meeting of Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U. A. M., last evening to have the good and welfare committee look after the entertainment of all visiting councils on July Fourth.

The Oriental baseball club will play the Rahway team tomorrow at Rahway.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Harvey Thorn expects to ride his wheel to Windsor, in the southern part of the State tomorrow.

David Krymer and Harry Marshall are both well pleased with Keating wheels, purchased of Charles Lister.

The Victor Wheelmen met last evening and audited their accounts. Capt. Israel Jones will represent the club on the run from Newark to Newburgh, which was spoken of in The Daily Press yesterday.

George T. Stebbins, who is chairman of the Brooklyn Good Roads Association Committee arranging for the monster bicycle parade to be held in Brooklyn on Saturday, announces that in the event of rain the parade will be postponed until Saturday, June 22d. Every club within a radius of 100 miles has signified its intention to be represented, and it is expected that over 10,000 riders will be in line. No decorated wheels will be allowed in the parade.

There are friends of cycling who fear that the craze of today will be followed by a reaction that will cause the sport to follow in the path of roller skating. "The examples," says The Wheel, "are not analogous." Roller skating was purely a craze; it had not one redeeming feature as a pastime; it added nothing to the health or happiness of those who followed it; it begat viciousness and coarseness; it had run its race and was finished even before the pulpit began to preach its funeral sermon. Roller skating died a natural death. Cycling existed and prospered before it became a craze, and it will continue so to do even after its unsought-for, frenzied popularity has gone and been forgotten. As a practical means of cheap and pleasant transportation, as a health-giving, clean and widespread pastime, cycling has won for itself a place in the hearts of all classes of people, such as the roller skate never could have attained. The place cycling has won cannot be taken from it by any of the kind lately aimed at it.

Rev. J. O. McKelvey who was recently presented with a purse of money to purchase a bicycle, decided after looking at the many different makes to ride a Cleveland Swell Special, which was furnished by the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

Aaron M. Powell returned home yesterday from the South.

George S. Brown, of Everett, on Puget Sound, is now visiting Plainfield on his wedding trip with his bride, formerly Miss Foster, of Netherwood.

Satin Bows for Cuffs.

Leaders of men's fashions in London decided over six months ago that the cuff button, the time honored, ornamental yet useful cuff button, must go. Prince George, of the royal household, came out on Rotten Row one day with the liberal cuffs which he always wears tied together with an inch wide black satin ribbon made into a bow, and the ends dangling four inches from his wrists in a most ladylike manner. Within twenty-four hours the Prince's set had discarded the creations of gold, silver and precious stones, with which their cuffs had been held together, and appeared on "The Row" with dangling satin ribbons at their wrists. The departure was, of course, promptly adopted by the ultra-fashionable dudes of London Town, then by the would-be fashionables, and in less than six months the ridiculous and effeminate style has become so common as to attract but the most passing attention.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destored forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

SIX DAYS IN A TRANCE.

Alfred Wootton Was Put to Sleep and Watched by Doctors.

A dramatic illustration of hypnotism accompanied by many gruesome features has been given in London by Prof. Morritt, who seems to possess extraordinary powers of a mysterious nature. He put a man to sleep in a coffin shaped glass case and kept him there nearly a week, and at the end of that time awakened him in the presence of a large number of witnesses.

The victim of this achievement, one Alfred Wootton, is a stained glass worker, thirty-five years of age. During the whole of the time he was asleep or in a trance he was exhibited in a public hall. When the experiment was ready to begin on Monday he had readily climbed into the coffin shaped case and many people watched the hypnotizer as he proceeded to exercise his mysterious power.

Holding Wootton by the forehead and chin, the hypnotizer gazed steadily into his eyes. He then made a few downward passes from above the eyes along the side of the face, from time to time examining the pupils of the eyes. The man, it was found, had by this time become rigid. One minute after the experiment began the hypnotizer asked Dr. Forbes Winslow to examine the man.

He was found to be thoroughly unconscious. His pulse was 96, the exact number of beats it registered before he became unconscious. His respiration was about 16, the breathing chiefly abdominal. The temperature was 98.2, or normal. The pupils of the eyes were contracted almost to disappearance.

During the following days the respiration, temperature and pulse changed slightly, but the man remained in the trance condition. His beard continued to grow. When he was awakened by Prof. Morritt the following Saturday evening he could not be convinced that he had been in a hypnotic trance for nearly a week until he felt the thick growth of beard on his face. He said it seemed to him that he had only been asleep for a few minutes.

It did not take longer than a minute to wake him up. The professor made a few passes of his hand across the man's face and lifted his head and shoulders from the coffin shaped case. Wootton then opened his eyes and instantly recognized friends in the crowd about him, with whom he began to converse. The only notable sensation he experienced upon waking, he said, was that of hunger. A short time after being awakened he put on his overcoat and walked out of the building with his friends. He had been constantly watched during the whole time he was in the trance and evinced much interest in the records of the doctors.

Prof. Morritt had previously tried a similar experiment with one Henry Nolan, but the doctors who were watching his case expressed the opinion that Nolan was not physically strong enough to undergo the ordeal.

An Obedient Boy.

A friend of mine has a little boy called Robbie, and Robbie is not at all an angel child. He is, in fact, the terror of the neighborhood. Not long ago his father bought him a bicycle, and Robbie was more an object of dread to the neighbors than ever. One day he was detected in some particularly outrageous act, and his father, to punish him, forbade him to ride the bicycle for a whole week. Robbie promised, but as his father neared the home next day he saw his son whirling along on the wheel.

"Robbie," he said, more in sorrow than in anger, "didn't I tell you you were not to ride your wheel for a week?"

"Yes, sir," said Robbie, cheerfully, "and I'm not going to disobey you. This isn't my wheel. It's one I borrowed."—Washington Post.

Lemonade Hygienically Approved.

Lemonade drinking is to be encouraged, according to the Journal of Hygiene, which asserts that it is the most perfect of drinks and should be substituted for tea, coffee and alcohol. To make it properly and hygienically this method should be followed: For a quart, take the juice of three lemons, using the rind of one of them. Carefully peel the rind very thin, getting just the yellow outside. This cut into pieces and put with the juice and powdered sugar, of which use two ounces to the quart, in a jug or jar with a cover. When the water is at boiling point, pour it over the lemon and sugar; cover at once and allow to cool.

YOUR SCALP! During the heats of summer does it become irritated and invite an occasional friendly scratch? To wash it is well, but not too often, lest your hair become "brash" and stiff. But treat it twice or thrice a week with our Petroleum Hair Tonic—a little rubbed in with your finger ends, and you will find the feeling of comfort and coolness truly delightful. Positively nothing equals it as a balm for the woes of your scalp. Sprinkler bottles 50c. Only at Old People.

Old people who require medicine to regulate the bowels and kidneys will find the true remedy in Electric Bitters. This medicine does not stimulate and contains no whiskey nor other intoxicant, but acts as a tonic and alterative. It acts mildly on the stomach and bowels, adding strength and giving tone to the organs, thereby aiding nature in the performance of the functions. Electric Bitters is an excellent appetizer and aids digestion. Old people find it just exactly what they need. Price 50c a bottle at L.W. Randolph's drug store.

While at Peekskill, N. Y., Mr. J. A. Scriven, a prominent manufacturer of New York City, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Such good results were obtained from its use that he sent back to the druggist from whom he had obtained it for two more bottles of the same remedy. When you have a cough or cold give this preparation a trial and like Mr. Scriven you will want it when again in need of such a medicine. It is a remedy of great worth and merit. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

I have two little grandchildren who are teething this hot summer weather and are troubled with bowel complaint. I give them Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and it acts like a charm. I earnestly recommend it for children with bowel troubles. I was myself taken with a severe attack of bloody flux, with cramps and pains in my stomach, one-third of a bottle of this remedy cured me. Within twenty-four hours I was out of bed and doing my housework. Mrs. W. L. Dunagan, Bonaqua, Hickman Co., Tenn.

For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves.. T.S. Armstrong, Manager.

While in Topeka last March, E. T. Barber, a prominent newspaper man of La Cygne, Kansas, was taken with cholera morbus very severely. The night clerk at the hotel where he was stopping happened to have a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and gave him three doses which relieved him and he thinks saved his life. Every family should keep this remedy in their home at all times. No one can tell how soon it may be needed. It costs but a trifle and may be the means of saving much suffering and perhaps the life of some member of the family. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

GEN. GRANT'S SUCCESS.

The Indomitable Energy of the Pilgrims Crystallized in the Hero.

In a retrospective glance at the remarkable and comparatively brief career of Grant, the basis of his surpassing success may be found in the sturdy quality of his Puritan ancestors, their lofty moral principles and unflinching, aggressive resoluteness of action even in the humblest issues of colonial life. It was from such stock that came the indomitable energy in surmounting all obstacles that this great leader showed from the first moment he was given opportunity. "I propose to move on your works immediately," was his terse answer to the temporizing Buckner. The fall of Fort Donelson and the first hope that dawned upon the Federal arms verified the confidence of the almost untried general and marked the path that his unerring genius had already outlined.

His own personal record in the dark days of the sad ending of his life in physical anguish and material privation was in touch with the lofty and flawlessly honorable dictum of his memorable inaugural. In the supreme moment of a financial disaster in which he was the innocent victim of a designing associate, he gave his all to keep his bond, and went forth in the winter of his life penniless, but with an unsullied name. Then came the never-to-be-forgotten closing battle with the grim destroyer, in which the great hero, while vanquished at last, yet triumphed in the noble contest he waged to leave his family protected from grim poverty by his later victory with the pen. Well may the great leader's comrades in the field welcome the day to commemorate the glory of a great general and a great patriot.

Wife—My dear, I need a little more of this stuff and some trimming to match. I wish you would drop into Bigg, Sale & Co.'s and get it.

Husband (a smart fellow)—Let me see. Oh, I know. That's the store where they have so many pretty girls, isn't it?

"Y-e-s."

"Yes, I remember. That blond girl at the trimming counter knows your tastes and will doubtless select just the sort of trimming you want—I mean the girl with the golden hair, alabaster skin, blue eyes and sweet little—"

"There are a number of things I want down town. Never mind, dear. I'll go and get them myself."—New York Weekly.

ROBBING A STATE.

DISCLOSURES BY AN INVESTIGATING COMMITTEE IN NEW JERSEY.

Some State Officers Regarded Public Office as a Private Snap and Evidently Worked Along That Line of Reasoning. An Astonishing Condition of Rottenness.

The report of the New Jersey Senate investigating committee, which was making inquiries into the frauds and extravagancies of the State Government and into the doings of the Board of Pardons, records some queer transactions.

"Of the ninety-seven witnesses examined," the report says, "by far the greater number have testified under compulsion, and little information has been volunteered. Enough, however, has been disclosed to indicate the course of events in recent years at the State House, and to suggest legislation for guarding against a recurrence of similar irregularities."

Concerning the cost of caring for the Capitol the report says the expense increased from $25,000 in 1889 to $71,030 in 1894, but this latter sum by no means covered the cost for repairs, maintenance and furnishing. Concerning the sale of the old and the purchase of the new furniture for the Capitol between 1889 and 1894, the report says some parts of the building were furnished twice. Some of the money realized from the old furniture has never been paid into the treasury. "In the making of this substitution the State was cheated and betrayed. The prices were exorbitant, being often double the usual retail price of the goods. Bills were falsified in quantities and prices. Large bonuses and commissions were paid to State officers. Furniture and carpets paid for by the State were sent to persons holding offices under the State for their private use.

"In the furnishing of coal, lumber and other supplies for the State House, there was deliberate systematic swindling. By the collusion of a State Comptroller, and in the face of the protest of other State officers against the waste, the State paid $21,847 for the construction of pigeon holes and similar appliances which could readily have been obtained for $7,500. More than $10,000 was paid to one painter upon bills wherein false entries of labor and material had been made, the price likewise being exorbitant, the peculation being probably $4,000.

Ventilating apparatus cost $25,896, a full price for which would have been $13,923; a similar apparatus in the Senate Chamber cost $21,625, a full price for which would have been $11,102.

"Where gross overcharges and false charges occur," the report says, "the evidence warrants the belief that it was always by the collusion or acquiescence of some State officer or employe."

The report says the ordinary expenses of the State have grown from about $800,000 in 1875 to $1,653,000 in 1894. The increase is largely due to the multiplication of State officers and State boards, the expense of maintaining the Capitol, and the increased cost of the courts and of maintaining the militia. Including the ordinary and extraordinary expenditures, the public debt payments and the amount raised for the support of the public schools ($2,196,240), the entire sum expended in 1894 was $4,126,495.

The increase of the expenses of the Legislature from $53,578 in 1875 to $125,249 in 1893 is explained mainly by increase of officers and reckless extravagance in purchasing legislative supplies.

Concerning the methods adopted by Col. Van Cleef, the Secretary of the Board of Assessors, in his map transactions, the report says that no more than 8,600 maps were furnished, although the State paid for 41,000. "These facts show deliberate fraud by the Secretary, great carelessness on the part of the members of the Board and their other employes, and careless conduct on the part of the printers who year after year presented to the State sworn bills for maps which they had neither furnished nor seen."

The Court of Pardons gets more space than any other topic in the report. The committee's conclusion is that "the Board of Pardons has lost the confidence of the people, and it is scarcely too much to say that some of its actions in recent years are a public scandal."

The Evangeline Hamilton case, it declares, was scandalous, and the releases of thirty-two of the convicted election officers of Hudson county in 1892, the four Clifton race track men in 1893 and the Big Four of Guttenburg recently, are quoted, with some other cases, as outrages upon the common sense and decency of the community.

Leaps of a Mountain Sheep.

No; the mountain sheep does not leap from great heights, and land either upon his horns or his feet. He knows the strength of his materials too well to try it. His horns and skull might successfully withstand the shock, but the weight of his body would break his spinal column in two or three places, to say the least of it.

It is true that when hard pressed a heard will sometimes plunge down a terrible steep incline, sliding and bounding from point to point, until they plough into the "slide rock" below; but as to leaping over a sheer precipice, I have never saw anyone who claimed to have ever seen such a thing.

The old rams often fight by butting each other terifically, and often splinter or sometimes break off the ends of their horns that way.—St. Nicholas.

GRANT'S DAUGHTER NELLIE.

A Beautiful Story Illustrating the General's Attachment for Her.

The rumored engagement of Nellie Grant Sartoris to Gen. Kyd Douglas recalls to the public mind the beautifully tender attachment which General Grant manifested for his daughter. The union with Sartoris was opposed to the limit by the young lady's parents; subsequent events prove all too clearly that the old folk's estimate of Sartoris' character had been correct. Sartoris was a drunkard, and there is probably no language adequate to portray the misery and humiliation to which he subjected his wife. To add to the wretchedness of her life, the family of the drunken husband utterly declined to receive the young wife, or to accord her that recognition to which, as the daughter of Gen. Grant, she had been accustomed and was entitled. Mrs. Sartoris may have kept silent; her womanly pride probably prevented her from telling her parents of the dreadful mistake she had made. But rumors of her misery came from over the sea, and they caused Gen. Grant constant solicitude.

One time Hugh Hastings went down to Long Branch to visit the Grants. He was told that the general was sitting on the rocks overlooking the sea, and surely enough he presently discovered Grant perched on the rocks and gazing in apparent abstraction over the waters. Hastings stole softly up and put his hands over Grant's eyes, saying:

"Now, guess who it is!"

But Hastings drew his hands back almost immediately; they were wet with tears; Grant was weeping.

Hastings was too surprised to say anything. Grant looked up.

"Hullo, Hughy," said Grant kindly.

"You are crying, general! What has happened? What is the matter?" demanded Hastings.

Grant came pretty near breaking down, but by a heroic effort he pulled himself together.

"We get bad news from England," said he. "Nellie is unhappy, and I can't help thinking about it—thinking about it all the time! I am in trouble, Hughy, the greatest trouble of my life!"

It were difficult, perhaps impossible, to fancy a more beautifully pathetic picture than that of this foremost man of his time stealing away by himself and communing with his love for that daughter so many, very many leagues away. It appeals more directly and it means more to humanity than a thousand Vicksburgs, a thousand Corinths, a thousand Appomattoxes!—Chicago Herald.

Why the Zunis Fear the Rainbow.

Capt. Trevitt W. Okey, of Los Angeles, Cal., for many years stationed in Arizona and New Mexico with the regular army, told about the myths and superstitions of the Zunis Indians to a group of friends the other evening.

"In the Zuni mind," said he, "the rainbow has ever been a deified animal, having the attributes of a human being and also the body and some of the functions of a measuring worm. Obviously the striped back and arched attitude of the measuring worm, its sudden appearance and disappearance among the leaves of the plants which it inhabits are the analogies upon which this personification is based. As the measuring worm consumes the herbage of the plants and causes them to dry up, so the rainbow, which appears only after the rain, is supposed by the simple minded Indians to cause a cessation of rain, and consequently to be the originator of droughts, under the influence of which plants wither away, as they do under the ravages of the measuring worm.

"It will be seen that the visible phenomenon called the rainbow gets by analogy the personality of the measuring worm, while from the worm in turn the rainbow gets its function as a god. Of this the cessation of the rain on the appearance of the rainbow is adduced as proof. The fading of the flowers is attributed to the rainbow, which, consuming their imperceptible existences, thus derives its brilliant coloring, just as it is believed that the measuring worm gets its green, yellow and red stripes from the leaves and flowers which it devours."—Chicago Times-Herald.

The Past Week at Calcasieu.

Our good Prof. John S. Jones invited us to the residence of Charlie Hunter to see something new. What was it? says one. Well, we'll tell you next time. No, no; right now! Well, here she goes—to see his new "Prince Albert"; and more to see how he looked standing on the floor by his best girl, M. P. Go it, Jones; we've been through the mill.

C. M. Mitchell and Garrison Jackson will be on the night watch at the "coal chute" this month. S. P. engines cannot go by now without getting their full share of the "black diamonds." "Jack and Mitch" make a fine team wherever you put them.

A little stranger arrived at the residence of J. J. Moulton last Thursday and deposited his bag and baggage without leave. Hello! What is it? Fine boy, cries our friend. Ah there! J. J., we'll take one on you.

Sickness in the editor's family accounts for our lack of news this week. As our wife is reported better we may be able to "swing around the circle" next week.

Who can guess why Mr. H. Porche refuses to drink beer. He claims it is a refreshing beverage, yet refuses to drink it himself. We have our suspicions.—Calcasieu (La.) Blade.

IN THIS WOMAN'S CASE.

Mrs. Campbell Wishes Her Letter Published so that the Truth May Be Known.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS]

Of the thousands of letters received from women all over the world by Mrs. Pinkham, not one is given to the public unless by the wish of the writer. Thus absolute confidence is established between Mrs. Pinkham and her army of patients; and she freely solicits a letter from any woman rich or poor, who is in ill health or ailing.

In the case of Mary E. Campbell, of Albion, Noble Co., Ind., her suffering was so severe, her relief so suddenly realized, and her gratitude so great, that she wishes the circumstances published, in the hope that others may be benefited thereby. She says:—

"My physician told me I had dropsy and falling of the womb. My stomach and bowels were so bloated I could not get a full breath. My face and hands were bloated badly. I had that dreadful bearing-down pain, backache, palpitation of the heart, and nervousness.

"One of my physicians told me I had something growing in my stomach; and the medicine that I took gave me relief only for a short time. I thought I must die. I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it worked like a charm. After taking the first bottle I could walk across the street, now I am well. I advise all my friends to take it."—MARY E. CAMPBELL, Albion, Noble Co.

A CAT THAT FOOLED THEM.

Bryan G. Hughes, who entered the "brindled Dublin tom cat Nicodemus" in the recent New York cat show, with a big pedigree attached to him, showing that he was descended from a cat the mummy of which was found in an Egyptian tomb, and putting the price of $1,000 on him, has confessed that the cat for which he has had offers of $2,000 is a fraud.

A few days before the cat show Mr. Hughes was sitting in a bootblack's chair on the Bowery, when a colored boy sauntered up and said:

"Say, boss, do you want to buy a cat?"

Mr. Hughes remembered that mice had been eating up his paper boxes, and he gave the boy 10 cents to take the cat down to his factory and show the animal where the mice could be found.

But the cat was too silly to be of any use as a mouser.

"I guess he must be an ornamental cat," said Mr. Hughes to his brother. "At any rate, he isn't useful. Perhaps he's meant to be looked at. Let's enter him at the Cat Show."

And so they paid the $1 entrance fee and made up a long pedigree for him, put some flowers on the cage and tagged him as for sale at $1,000.

"The names in the pedigree sounded fine," said Mr. Hughes. "We made it up as we went along. All the experts crowded round the cage and admired him. They put their heads on one side and said, knowingly: 'Yes, I see his granddam was Coleslaw, out of Cabbage, and you can't beat that blood, my boy.' Of course Coleslaw and Cabbage were names we invented. Then they came around and wanted to buy the cat, and he was awarded a third prize.

"Since the show closed I have been bothered to death with offers for him. I have had checks for $1,000 and $1,500 thrust in my face. I have refused them all, because I am not in the bunco business and don't propose to cheat any one. At the same time I was a little modest about confessing that I had fooled every one, for I don't want to be made unnecessarily unpopular.

"All I want is permission to live a quiet life in my own simple way. I want the cat experts, the cat mongers and the cat fanciers to leave me alone. I'm an honest man, and they can't have my ten-cent cat for $2,000. That is final. If any more people come around bothering me with their old money I shall not be responsible for the consequences.

"This is a full and complete 'own up,' and it is final. I want it to be believed. Any one who questions my veracity must take the consequences.

"It seems to me, though, from the offers I've had, that there must be a cat famine in New York and a chance for some one to go into the cat business."

FAREWELL TO FURBELOWS.

The Latest Lamp Shades Are Models of Simplicity and Safety.

The over elaborate lamp shade has had its day. Fashion now decrees a shade simple to severity, whose contracted dimensions are in quaint contrast to the widespread flounces and furbelows of its predecessors. The new shades are of paper or silk plainly drawn over a smooth surface, and are hand painted. They are finished at the top and bottom with a prim quilling of narrow satin ribbon, and look precise and Quakerfield to a degree, after all the laces, chiffons and flower wreaths which have clustered about lamps for the last few seasons.

Ambassador Bayard's Tip.

A dozen newspaper men went down to quarantine to meet Ambassador Bayard. The newspaper men decided not to frighten him by a combined onslaught, and appointed one of their number to do the interviewing. The delegate, it happened, bears the time honored name of Smith. Calling one of the junior assistant stewards, Mr. Smith handed him his card, with the request to take it to Mr. Bayard, at the same time dropping a dime and a nickel as a tip into the boy's outstretched hand.

The lad hurried away, while the reporters awaited the issue with complacency. In a few minutes he returned and extended the card and the money with these words:

"Mr. Bayard sends his compliments to Mr. Smith, and desires to state that while he has the honor of the acquaintance of many Mr. Smiths, he does not remember any Mr. Smith who owes him 15 cents."

"W—what!" demanded the newsgatherers in a body. "What in the name of Horace Greeley have you done?"

"Why, I gave Mr. Bayard the card and the 15 cents as you told me to do, and told him that you sent them. That's all," replied the boy calmly.

Not in a Position to Offer Inducements.

Soon after the outbreak of the Cuban insurrection an American newspaper determined, as did some others, to send a special correspondent to the seat of war. The journal in question had been getting some live reports from its regular correspondent at a point in Florida, and the special correspondent was ordered to stop at this point and take the Floridian to Cuba with him. In a day or two the telegraph editor received the following message from the special:

"Our correspondent here seems very much disinclined to go to Cuba with me."

The editor was determined not to have his plans balked, and sent this:

"Our Florida correspondent must obey orders and go to Cuba with you. Offer any reasonable inducements."

Not long afterward the following reply, which disturbed the equilibrium of the office for a week, was received:

"Our correspondent here refuses point blank to go to Cuba with me except upon one condition, and that is, that I marry her. I have one wife already and I am afraid the war will be over before I can get a divorce. Answer quick."

A COLLEGE COURSE.

ITS VALUE TO YOUNG MEN DISCUSSED BY DR. DEPEW.

He Believes It a Good Thing, Though Not Essential to Business Success. College Men Have Qualifications, However, Rarely Attained in Other Pursuits.

How much of practical value is to be got from a college course by a young man about to engage in business or a profession has always been, and will continue to be, a mooted question.

It is generally understood that Chauncey M. Depew believes in the modern university, and that he is in about as close sympathy with the college student to-day as when he was himself a student at Yale. But while Mr. Depew believes that the college bred young man has much the better chance in the race of life, still he does not consider the college training of these times altogether faultless.

In a recent interview in the New York Herald Mr. Depew says:

"In one respect the graduates of 1895 are far behind those of 1855. Few of the boys who will leave college this year will be good talkers. They may be as good thinkers as those who were graduated four decades ago—better, for all I know. They may be able to grasp business and scientific problems as readily, but they will not be nearly so capable of telling what they know or what they think as the older chaps. Why? Because of the decline of the debate as a means of training. There were debating societies in college when I was a student, and all the brightest men belonged and took part in the discussions. Nowadays few college students would think of stooping so low as to belong to a debating society or of engaging in a set discussion of any problem. I regard this as a national calamity, which, however, is mitigated to some extent by the fact that, while the debating club has been practically abandoned by the college boy, it has been taken up by the workingman, who by its use, as he could by no other means, is clarifying his mental vision as to certain matters.

"As to the advantage of a college training in actual everyday business and professional life," Mr. Depew went on, "there is to say: Some exceptionally strong men there be, in the aggregate, indeed, a great many of them, who seem to get through life as well without the knowledge and training acquired at a college as if a full course had been taken. Yet it is my opinion that these men, even those of marked success, would have done better had they been college trained. They might not have risen higher, but the rise would probably have been easier, and, on the whole, more satisfactory to them. To the average man the college course is extremely valuable. It teaches him how to use his mental powers; how to reason from cause to effect and back again; how to concentrate his energies; how to adapt himself quickly to suddenly changed conditions. Whoever would succeed in real life must get this training somehow, and in my judgment it is better to get it in college than while 'sweeping out the office.' If the 'sweeper out' gets ahead of the college boy in business, in his profession, or in public affairs, depend upon it, is because of superior native ability, harder work or greater endurance. It is in spite of the lack of college training, not because of it. I know that as a rule the great corporations of to-day choose heads of departments mostly from the ranks of college graduates holding subordinate places, not because of the mere possession of diplomas by the graduates, but because the college man so often displays more ability, sounder reasoning, better judgment and quicker decision. But the young man who cannot get to college should not be discouraged by this state of things—he should work and study all the harder.

"As a matter of fact," continued the speaker, "almost any young man who really wishes to do so can go to college. It is as easy to work your way through now as it ever was.

"Physical training? I do not believe it is overdone except in a few cases—so few, indeed, as to be hardly worth considering. There are some in every college class who carry athletics and gymnastics to the extreme. But for the mass, I believe the present system has wrought wonders. When I went to college few students took physical exercise at all, and beyond an occasional farmer's son, who had developed his body by pitching hay and walking in the furrow behind the plough, most students were Bible-backed and hollow-chested. Now, however, it is not so. The average college graduate of to-day has a broad and deep chest and plenty of muscle, and stands up straight. He is physically superior to most men he meets, and his extra bodily strength will be found to be of substantial advantage through life. If the young college man of to-day only knew how to talk he would be invincible."

Mr. Grogan Explains It.

"Daddy," asked little Danny Grogan, "what is this new woman business, anyhow?"

"It means," said Mr. Grogan, after a moment's thought, "thod instid av a man an' his wife bein' wan anny moore, thot now he is one man an' she is another, bedad."—Cincinnati Tribune.

PINNED UNDER AN ENGINE.

Nervy Engineer Liebensberger Bosses His Own Rescue.

Engineer Jacob Liebensburger of the Lehigh Valley freight train that was wrecked on the outskirts of Newark died at the St. Francis Hospital, Jersey City, of contusions received in the back, chest and head.

He was one more example of the plucky men that have charge of locomotives. For four hours he lay with one leg pinned between the cab of his engine and a railroad tie and with a fire raging in a huge pile of freight cars within a few feet of him and threatening each moment to reach him. Yet he remained cool and collected all that time in spite of his suffering and directed the work of the men who were striving with might and main to release him. Although his leg was tightly pinned the bone was not crushed.

When the train struck the open switch it was running over thirty miles an hour. As the heavy engine struck the soft earth its drivers sank deep into the soil, and with a lurch it toppled over on its right side. The train of twenty-nine cars, heavily laden with meat, hay and lard, rushed on it, and eleven of them formed a high pile over the tender. There was a rush of scalding steam, the red hot coals of the firebox were scattered through the heap of smashed cars and in a minute they were in flames.

As the engine left the track, Fireman Runyon jumped and escaped with nothing more serious than painful injuries.

Engineer Liebensberger also jumped, but the engine fell over on its side and he was caught fast as he fell. Benjamin Bartholomew, the flagman and a brakeman named Duffner, were in the caboose in the rear and were not hurt.

A train bound from Elizabeth to Newark on the Central Railroad, which crosses the Lehigh just below the place where the wreck was, came along shortly after the accident and Conductor Robert Prall stopped it long enough to send over all the buckets and tools he had on board.

In the mean time the fire was swiftly nearing the engineer. Something had to be done and quickly.

"Keep off the fire, boys," said Leibensberger. "Keep off the fire and get a jack screw and try to lift up the engine a bit so that I can get my leg out."

The men went to work with a will. From all the houses within a mile buckets were brought. An alarm of fire had been sent in and four fire companies started for the wreck, but could not get their apparatus nearer than half a mile owing to the softness of the meadow. They brought their buckets, however, and soon a bucket brigade, 400 strong, was passing water from a nearby ditch to the burning wreck.

The flames went higher and higher, lighting up the flat, wet meadows for miles around, and in the light could be seen the dusky figures of the crowd working with their buckets to save a man's life. In spite of their efforts, every now and then a great volume of flame, fed by the lard, would roll out as if to destroy the men at one stroke. Each time the fire was driven back as if by main force.

A number of men got a light jack screw and tried to raise the huge mass of metal. They might as well have tried to raise a mountain with it.

All this time Leibensberger lay and superintended the work. He was cooler and more collected than any of the men about him.

"Get shovels and picks, boys," he ordered, "and dig this tie from under my leg; then I can get out."

The rescuers seized on the idea and began to work with renewed hope. But fate was against them. The fire got beyond the control of the bucket brigade and drove them away by its intense heat. Again all hands turned to fight the fire and again, after a hard struggle, it was beaten back.

The wreck had occurred at 10:30, and it was now after half past 1. Three hours had passed, quick enough to those at work, but like eternity to the man that was pinned to the earth, who was getting weaker and weaker. Still he kept his wonderful nerve.

"It's no good boys," he said, "get a surgeon and have him cut off my leg. I can't stay here to be burned."

"Brace up, old man," cried men in the crowd cheerily, "we'll have you out before long. The wreckers are due here every minute."

Finally Leibensberger fainted dead away. Dr. Hopkins, a Newark physician gave him stimulants. When he revived, he looked up and said with a little smile:

"I can't stand this much longer. You must hurry."

About 2 o'clock the fire again got the better of the brigade, and it seemed as if the man was doomed. A call was sent in to Newark for more aid, and a fire engine was taken to the railroad and preparations made to put it on a flat car and carry it to the wreck, but before that was done the wrecking train had come and there was no need of it.

It was sharp, short work when the wreckers got there. The tie under Leibensberger's leg was got out, and at 2:30, just four hours after the accident occurred, amid great cheering, the nervy engineer was pulled out.

He was put on a train and taken to Jersey City and put in St. Francis Hospital. His leg was badly marked, but the injuries about the head and chest were so severe that, with the terrible strain he had undergone, they caused his death.

Lost Man's Lane.

BY ANNA KATHERINE GREEN.

[COPYRIGHT, 1895.]

I.

My destination was Cushing, a small town some fifteen miles from Hartford, and my errand there can be best explained by the following letter received at Police Headquarters in the latter town:

"Gentlemen: Three men have disappeared lately in our parts. Two of them were strangers, and one a well-known, half-witted peddler, accustomed for several years to wander from house to house in this vicinity. As this district is a lonely one and not in immediate connection with any railroad, the matter has not attracted much attention outside of this place. But here there is much excitement, and if you think it worth while to send us a detective, I shall be glad to give him such details as may further his investigations. Obediently yours,

"OBADIAH TROHM."

The last charge which my superior had given me was to move warily in this affair. I therefore concealed my identity and entered the tavern in Cushing with a surveyor's instruments in my hand.

My first talk was with mine host, a kind-faced, jovial man, whose look inspired confidence both in his honesty and discretion. The topic which I naturally chose was Mr. Trohm. Was he an accessible man and was he likely to have any property to sell suitable for a large manufacturing plant? Mr. Simmons (for that was my good host's name) opened his eyes in amazement. "Well, no," said he; "he isn't." And then he explained to me that Mr. Trohm owned no land save that on which his house was built, and that, for one who had neither wife nor child, he loved his home and clung to the few acres surrounding it, with a pertinacity more marked than was shown by anyone else in the community.

"Never mind," said I, "I am going to see him. Perhaps he can point out to me some available property in the vicinity."

"Perhaps," rejoined the other. And not being of a suspicious temperament, the good man went on talking about Mr. Trohm till I had learned enough to be satisfied that I should have no trouble in approaching this gentleman, as he was one of the most genial and hospitable of men. "Though he keeps no servant, he makes everybody welcome," was Mr. Simmons' assurance, "and for a bachelor, makes them mighty comfortable, too."

As all this showed a certain amount of esteem for the man, I felt my confidence in him increasing, and prepared at once to visit him. But when I asked the landlord where Mr. Trohm lived and if it was within walking distance, a very decided change passed over the good man's face.

"Do you want to go there now?" he asked. "If so I will see if I can find one of my men to accompany you."

"But is that necessary? Cannot I find the house alone?"

"Why, yes," he answered, cheerfully, but still with a vague tone of alarm in his voice; "but it's out of the way like, and I have known fellows, no bigger than you, who don't like the woods."

"O, it's in the woods?"

"Yes, that is, the road winds through the woods, and it is a little dismal, you know. But Mr. Trohm's place is very pleasant, very pleasant, indeed. Only I wouldn't go any further than his front gate, if I were you. The road is a long one and—well, you had better come back the way you go."

This was all very suggestive to my curiosity and highly provocative of a number of questions, but I was determined to get my first information from Mr Trohm, and so passed the matter off as a kindly hint, which I secretly did not mean to take.

The landlord seemed satisfied with my manner, and seeing I did not want a companion, did not urge his offer further. I accordingly started out alone, after receiving minute directions as to the course I should take.

Cushing has but one street, but half way down this, a road branches off in a wide curve and on this road Mr. Trohm lived. The trees which were sparse near the village increased in number rapidly as I advanced, and by the time I had gone a quarter of a mile, I found myself in a veritable wood. Not a cheerful one, either. There was marsh under foot and withered boughs overhead, producing an effect that was anything but cheerful, although the sun shone brightly and the air was balmy. I was therefore both surprised and gratified to see the chimneys of a bright and most attractive-looking old house rise suddenly before me, with a charm about its trim door-step and flower-bordered walks that is only to be found in very old places that have been appreciatively cared for. A fence painted white enclosed a lawn like velvet, and the house itself, shining with a fresh coat of yellow paint, bore signs of comfort in its white-curtained windows not usually to be found in the solitary dwelling of a bachelor Would the man correspond to his home? As if in answer to this inward query, the door before me swung open and I saw in the gap thus made the tall and smiling figure of a man, older than I had anticipated, but with full as much dignity as his letter had led me to expect.

"Has Providence been so good as to bring me a guest this fine morning?" was his amiable greeting. "I am sure if you have come to relieve me of a rather tedious half hour, you are very welcome. But is it Obadiah Trohm you have come to see?"

"It is," I returned, bowing with all the respect his appearance called forth. "And if I need any introduction myself, let this letter answer for me." And I handed him the epistle signed by his own name which he had sent to the office in Hartford.

The smile with which he had regarded me from the first, changed from the mere conventional expression to one of heart-felt satisfaction.

"I am glad to see you," he gravely remarked, his eye wandering from my face to the beauties of the garden beside us. "Will you come in or will you sit down here?" he asked, pointing to two seats on each side of the porch, on which we stood. "You will find either place equally secure from interruption. I keep no servants and whether out or in find myself wholly at home."

From the look which I have just mentioned—a peculiar look full of the gloating delight of possession—I judged that he would rather remain within view of his flower-beds. And indeed I afterward heard that he was seldom found in doors. I therefore answered his genial invitation by sitting down on one of the seats before us. He immediately took possession of the other, and with an expectant air waited my questions.

"I REMEMBER TWO OTHER CASES."

"And so these woods hide a mystery?" I boldly ventured, with a gesture toward the east where the trees stood thickest. "Have the disappearances of which you have written occured lately?"

"One of them took place about Christmas time, the other two but a few weeks back. The first one attracted no attention, nor the second, I may say; but when that poor boy, silly Rufus, dropped out of sight and sound, people began to wonder and recall the fact that the two strangers I have mentioned had also vanished from our midst in a very queer and unexplained manner. And I," here the old gentleman became impressive, even going to the point of laying his hand on my knee, "and I remember two other cases, a year aback, of persons who came into this road who were never seen to issue from it, or at least I am assured by an old friend of mine who lives just where this road runs into the main one. But whether all this means crime I cannot tell. Can you?"

The question came so suddenly I started. "It certainly has that look," I remarked. "Are there any doubtful characters in this neighborhood?"

"No," he answered, brooding a minute over my words. "Has any one in the village—you have spoken to the folks there of course—mentioned any name with suspicion?"

"I have not talked about it. I preferred to broach the subject at once to you."

He seemed surprised, but showed his recognition of my courtesy by a bow. "I supposed you would have first wished to have obtained a confirmation of my statement from the general gossip of the town. But it is of no consequence; you can hear them talk later." And he again let his eye roam appreciatively over his flowers and shrubs. "Have you any plan of procedure?" he suddenly asked.

"I must first find out if there has been any crime," I replied, letting my eye follow his over the top of a long well-sweep that was one of the chief ornaments of the place to that dismal turn in the road, which I had been warned from pursuing.

"Are there any other houses on this road besides yours?" I now put in, recalling his glance back to myself by a gesture.

He looked at me seriously, if not anxiously, for a moment, and then said almost too indifferently for the temporary embarrassment he had shown:

"Oh, I don't hold a monopoly of this by-way. There is another dwelling on it some half mile further on. An equally old dwelling with this, but more fully occupied," he smiled. "A brother and two sisters remain to the Knollys family, while I am the single representative of the Trohms."

"A brother and two sisters!" I repeated, astonished at his visibly nervous manner. "How old a brother and what kind of sister, I pray?"

"Oh, young Knollys is about 24; a stupid fellow, but good, I suppose; while the girls—what shall I call the girls?" he mused, with an evident air of wishing to strike the happy medium between justice and candor. "Nice girls, of course, well educated, refined and all that, but queer—yes, queer, as girls are apt to be who live in a den like that."

"Den," I repeated, wondering as much at his manner as his words.

"Oh, any house is a den where flowers don't grow," he laughed, leaning over to pluck a spray of honeysuckle from the vine that curled about the columns of the porch. "I like sunshine, beds of roses, fountains, and a sweep of lawn like that we see before us."

"And the Misses Knollys have no such adornments to their house?"

He shrugged his shoulders. "Why talk about the Knollys. The subject you have come to discuss is much more interesting. It is two weeks now since I saw silly Rufus leaning over the fence there, counting the blossoms on my oleander. When I looked again a minutes later he was gone, and the last that any of us know of him."

"He might have strayed into the woods," I suggested.

"We have searched the woods. Silly Rufus was a favorite in these parts, and his fate has aroused much interest. Oh, we have looked for him far and near, but we have not found him and never will. I am thinking."

"But what motive——" I began.

But suddenly Mr. Trohm's eyes had become impenetrable, and I saw there was some underlying reason on his part for preserving a certain reticence concerning his suspicions. Could they have reference to the Knollys family? It seemed a preposterous supposition, and yet I felt impelled to change my question into the remark:

"Perfect frankness on your part would be of great assistance to me. The least clue is valuable in such cases. A doubt, a surmise even, yes, whether it be true or false, will often put a detective on the right track. I should be obliged to you if you told me why you so often glance down the road towards the east."

"Well, to be frank," he laughed, "I cannot tell you. It is involuntary on my part, perhaps because I am as much perplexed as you. I feel that death and danger lurk in this neighborhood, but I cannot locate where. Perhaps you can; at all events that will be your business for the next few days."

Seeing by this he had reached his limit, I rose. Instantly the hospitality of the man asserted itself. "You must not go without some refreshment," he said. "Will you step into the house and have a glass of wine or—I see your eyes roaming longingly towards my old-fashioned well—would you like a draught of water fresh from the bucket?"

I assured him I did not drink wine—at which I thought his eyes brightened—but that neither did I indulge in water when in a heat, as at present, at which he looked disappointed, and rose quite irritably from his chair. But he recovered himself in a moment and accompanied me to the gate with every appearance of cordiality. But when he saw me turn resolutely toward the east, he called out quite imperatively:

"Where are you going? Don't go that way; the other way, my good fellow, the other way."

"But my duty leads me east," I called back.

"Then you shall not go alone. Wait a moment and I will accompany you."

"THEN YOU SHALL NOT GO ALONE."

But I declined this attention, which would have greatly hampered me, and tapping my breast significantly, I cried:

"Oh, I am not alone," and bowing a last farewell, hastened on, leaving him frowning at the gateway.

BOROUGH COUNCIL BUSINESS.

WATCHUNG AVENUE EXTENSION POSTPONED AGAIN.

Duer Street Residents Petition the council to Open That Thoroughfare—Dog Pound Established.

An adjourned meeting of the borough council was held last evening, all the members being present. In the absence of Mayor Hegeman, president of the council, H. B. Lounsbury, acted as chairman.

Clerk Arnold read a communication from Horace J. Martin, township clerk, which stated that the township was now ready to meet the council and make the division of the money which is now held by them. The council set Monday evening, June 24th, and instructed the clerk to notify the township.

A petition was received from W. H. Brokaw asking for the opening of Duer street; also one from the following property owners: John Vetterlein, J. H. VanWinkle, A. W. Johnson, J. S. Armstrong, J. A. Thickstun, W. F. Cadmus, A. L. Force, Robert Love, J. H. Whitenack, T. S. Rose, D. VanWinkle, G. F. Edwards, A. M. Vanderbeek, P. M. French, A. V. D. Honeyman, E. C. Varney, W. H. Shotwell, Wilbur W. F. Randolph, F. E. Woodruff, D. L. Gulick.

The petitions were referred to the committee on streets and public health.

A bill of $103.10 in favor of the pay roll was presented by Collector H. N. Spencer and later ordered paid.

Mr. Peck stated that a new supply of hose was needed for the fire department as there was only 1,200 feet in good order and they were unable to dry it properly. Bids had been asked for and at the next meeting he hoped to be able to report something definite. He also recommended the appointment of an assistant chief, and in a resolution suggested the name of J. J. Stahl to the position without compensation. The matter was laid over till the mayor returns. Mr. Peck also offered a resolution that Rudolph Speigel be confirmed a member of Warren Engine Company, which was done.

Mr. Smith reported that he had been unable to secure the services of a surveyor until it was known exactly what work was to be done. Mr. Lounsbury suggested that the advice of the borough counsel be secured before any action was taken.

In accordance with a resolution passed at the last meeting a dog pound was secured, and the law on dogs was ordered advertised. It was read last night and appears in another column of The Press.

Mr. Peck said that the harness used on the engine horses of the fire department was worn out, and that it was absolutely necessary to secure a new harness, which he did at a cost of $120, and he offered a resolution that the Council authorize the commitee to purchase the same, which was done.

Mr. Lounsbury stated that he had seen the borough counsel, and the latter told him that the council was obliged to send J. P. Humble a notice to appear personally, and state his objections to opening Watchung avenue, and that it would be bettter to lay the matter over till that time. It was so decided.

Council then adjourned to Friday evening, June 28th.

SAYS HE IS AN IMPOSTOR.

George Wilson Accused By the Newark Associated Charities.

A man answering the description of George Wilson, a blind man, who was steward of the Home for the Destitute Blind, which was opened on Washington avenue, in Elizabeth, in 1889, has been soliciting for a "Home" at Lyons Farms, and the superintendent of the Newark Bureau of Associated Charities says that he is an impostor. No such institution now exists in the State. The home which was started in 1889, did not last long. Two or three inmates, including Wilson and his wife, comprised the entire number of beneficiaries. At no time were there more than five who sought the benefit of the home.

To Address the Students.

Dr. Barnes' pulpit will occupied by Rev. Wm. Walton, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Bordentown.

—Lieutenant Trevett, of New York, and several other visitors will be in attendance at the Salvation Army meeting tonight and all day tomorrow.

JOCULARITY WAS DOMINANT.

SMITH FAMILY HAVE COME, MADE FUN, AND GONE.

Miss Petrie Made a Successful Advance Agent—Why the Courier Was Left—The Characters.

If you wanted to laugh last night you missed it by not attending the entertainment given by the famous Smith family in the First Presbyterian church. The family consists of a large curtain on which are painted the various characters with openings for face and hands which are filled by the living participants. The parts were taken as follows:

Pa Smith.....Harry Williams
Ma Smith.....Bessie Blair
Uncle John.....George O. Stevens
Aunt Jemima.....Katheryne Overton
Sissy Smith.....Edith Lane
Sonny Smith.....John Petrie
Infant Prodigy.....Lottie Messersmith
Baby Smith.....Charles Hazeltine

The entertainment opened with introductory remarks of a very humorous nature by Miss Florence Petrie, the advance agent of the Smith family, who also read an account supposed to have been published in last evening's Daily Press, telling of the arrival of the Smiths and the excitement of the town over their arrival. The Common Council, she said, promised to extend the trolley line to the church if they would only postpone their coming for ten years.

The attempts of many well-known people to meet the Smiths were very laughable, especially when Miss Petrie read that the reason that the Courier published no account of the great arrival was that the reporter of that paper, being in such a hurry to arrive at the station, had attempted to jump the sewer ditch on his wheel and had landed in the mud at the bottom with his heels pointing heavenward, where he remained, as everybody was too busy to pull him out.

The curtain was then drawn, and the Smith family appeared. Their selections were: Family chorus, "Our Family Name is Smith"; "Down by the Riverside," solo by Ma Smith; "Old John Brown, He had a Little Injun," Smith Family; "We Mourn All Day, We Mourn All Night," solo by Aunt Jemina; "'Blige the Lady," solo by Uncle John; "The Parrot Said," solo by Sonny Smith; "The Boy Across the Way," solo by Sissy Smith; "Wake up, Gabriel, Ma Smith and the family; "Old Rags." a round by the family; "You Can't Play in my Yard," solo by Infant Prodigy; "Little Alabama Coon," solo by Uncle John.

During the intermission which followed the last number, Miss Grace E. Overton recited "The Judgment Day" in a most delightful manner. Miss Overton has talent in that direction, and her recitations are always looked forward to and enjoyed by all.

The programme was then continued as follows:

"Listen to the Mocking Bird," solo by Baby Smith, whistling accompaniment by Uncle John; "Hiding from Papa," solo by Pa Smith; "Sweet Alice," solo by Sonny Smith; medley by the Smith family; Good Night by the Smith family.

There is only one George Stevens and he was at his best. His two selections were very amusing and his way of joining in the chorus brought down the house. John Petrie made a perfect Sonny Smith and kept the audience in a continual roar.

The Baby, Charles Hazeltine, was also up to all the tricks, while Harry Williams smiled benignly down upon his family. Ma Smith, Miss Bessie Blair, stood beside him and smiled indulgently at the antics of Uncle John and the children. Miss Overton played the mourning aunt to perfection, and her sorrowful condition proved very effective. The Infant Prodigy, Miss Messersmith, was a good little girl, and behaved herself in a more seemly manner than her brothers or her sister, Miss Edith Lane, who enjoyed her share of the fun.

Miss Florence Petrie deserves great credit for her successful impersonation of the manager and advance agent of the family, and for her many witty remarks during the evening.

Great Invention.

A townsman of great ability has hit upon a scheme of lighting the district by means of lightning bugs attached to cats' tails. He is so modest that he has forbidden the publication of his name, which we much regret. He says genial town clerk Robinson is also going into the business and has effected a "corner" in cats. There is no truth, however, in this statement. Mr. Robinson proposes having light thrown upon a very interesting matter, but he is not in the cat business, and the bug light would be too feeble for his purpose.—Metuchen Courier.

—Pargiter's model fancy dry goods store was opened today.

YOUNG BOYS WHO ARE APT.

What Mr. Dalziel's Teaching Does For His Students.

Perseverance is the true road to success, and an apt illustration of this is shown in John Dalziel's Manual Training school which held its commencement exercises yesterday afternoon. Parents and friends of the pupils filled the rooms on East Front street to overflowing. The programme consisted of an introductory talk by Mr. Dalziel, the principal, and the reading of the following original essays by their writers:

Paul C. Haynes, Funguous Disease of Plants; James Arnold, Drawing; G. D. Kyte, Manual Training; E. J. Smalley, Wild Flowers; D. S. Pond, Geography; W. F. Opdyke, Birds; H. R. Woltmann, A Glance at Geology; John G. Dalziel, Forest Trees.

Col. John Deitrich made an address to the students, recommending them to cultivate honesty and integrity as the only way to true manliness.

D. W. Pond then rose in his seat and said that although he had looked at the school with a most critical eye, all his objections had been done away with and he had nothing left except the most unqualified praise.

After the programme was over the visitors were invited to look over the work executed by the pupils, which was on exhibition. The carpenter work on one side of the room was very good. Perfect little models of a door, a window and two flights of stairs were especially praiseworthy.

In a room adjoining the lathe work was on exhibition, and a number of pretty designs were shown. In another room, work in clay modeling was exhibited, the head of a negro calling forth praise.

YOUNG AND OLD MINGLE.

Pleasant Sociable of Trinity Christian Endeavorers.

The social committee of the Christian Endeavor society of Trinity Reformed church arranged a pleasant social which was enjoyed last evening in the Sunday-school room of the church. The Junior society of the church and the society from the German Reformed church were invited, but on account of it being the regular prayer meeting night for the latter, they were unable to be present.

The programme opened with a vocal solo by Wm. Holmes, which was an enjoyable feature. This was followed with a violin and piano duet by Miss Sadie Hand and Miss Mary Berg, that received hearty applause. A soprano solo by Miss Swain was appreciated, as was also another violin and piano duet. Mr. Holmes was prevailed upon to sing again. For the Junior society, Dora Wilson rendered a vocal solo, and Miss Isabella Edwards a piano solo.

Those present then joined in sociability, and the committee served all with excellent refreshments.

The little folks enjoyed themselves immensely and the older ones were pleased to have them present.

A Battle Royal.

Thursday afternoon a disgraceful fight occurred in front of the news stand at Cranford in which one of the participants nearly had one of his fingers bitten off. Lewis Swendson, the expressman, stood in front of the news stand, when James Taylor, the hackdriver, it is said, began fooling with him, slapping him in the face. The Hewlett brothers, colored, stood near by, and told Taylor that he ought to be ashamed of himself striking a man much smaller than himself. At this Taylor sprang at the man of his size, Hewlett, and a regular scuffle took place A few moments later Dick Connors stepped between the men to separate them, when the other Hewlett brother pitched into Connors. For at least ten minutes the four men fought like Indians, and it was not safe for anyone to interfere. Connors' middle finger on his right hand was badly bitten by Hewlett, which seemed to quiet the disturbance. No arrests were made.

To Sell the Rockaway Valley Road.

The Farmers' Loan and Trust Company has foreclosed a mortgage against the Rockaway Valley Railroad Company, and United States Marshal Linsley Howe has served notice that he will sell at public auction July 15th the property and franchises of the company. The railroad runs through sections of Morris, Somerset and Hunterdon counties.

To Shoot the Dogs.

The mayor of South Amboy has issued a proclamation enforcing the ordinance concerning dogs running at large. Owners are warned that all unlicensed dogs running about the streets without a muzzle will be shot after ten days' notice. The marshal shall be compelled to enforce the law.

GAINED BY HARD EFFORT.

Women Advocates Worked Hard and Were Successful.

Plainfield has reason to congratulate herself over the passage by the Legislature of the amendment to the Constitution, restoring school suffrage to the women of the State, as this desirable result was largely brought about by the exertions of her citizens. The amendment must be submitted to the Legislature next to be chosen, and ratified by the people of the State, before it becomes a law, but there is every reason to hope that this desirable result will be accomplished.

The ladies of the committee returned from their last trip to Trenton on Thursday, much gratified with the result of their efforts. There was almost no opposition to the bill in itself, but the great difficulty lay in the fact that the Legislature had voted to undertake no new business at this special session. The ladies of the committee arranged matters so that some of their members were present each day of the present session—six days in all. They obtained three hearings from committees, besides many invertiews with individual legislators.

Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of this city, and Dr. Mary D. Hussy, of East Orange, were present when the bill finally passed the Assembly, thirty-six ayes being recorded for it, and only one nay. Senator Voorhees, of Union county, Rogers, of Camden, Shiren, of Mercer, and Assemblymen Drake, of Jersey City, Codding, of Westfield, Robertson, of Paterson, Skinner, of Belleville, lent valuable aid in passing the measure.

Among those who signed the petition in this city were: Mayor Gilbert, ex-Mayor L. V. F. Randolph, A. D. Shepard, Roswell G. Hoar, Craig A. Marsh, E. W. Perkins, D. W. Pond, Isaac L. Miller, Mrs. Isaac L. Miller, Miss Kenyon, Miss Adeline Newton, Miss Julia Scribner, Dean Rodman, Dr. A. H. Lewis, Rev. Hobart Clark, Prof. H. M. Maxson, (superintendent of schools), Prof. Travell, Miss Harriet E. Delano, Miss S. Lena Bass, Miss A. M. Whitney, Miss Carrie B. Runyon, Miss Lena Tomlinson, Miss Caroline A. Barber, Miss Kate H. Marsh, Miss Julia A. Barber, Miss Ellen E. Niles, Miss Maria H. Eaton, Mrs. Charles Ryder, J. B. Bonnell, John L. Ludlum, Rev. Lee Ashley Grace, Mrs. Ruth Penfield, David Prescott Hall, Aaron M. Powell and many others.

Prof. Poland, State superintendent of schools, believes freely in the measure.

NEEDED NO URGING.

Participants Willingly Respond at the Voluntary Sociable.

The parlors of the Congregational church presented a very pleasing appearance last evening, at the sociable given by the Ladies Aid Society.

The decorations consisted chiefly of roses, artistically arranged. An enjoyable programme was given, but instead of having the numbers announced, those who had been asked to assist in the entertainment came forward one after another, apparently quite voluntarily, and in a pleasant and informal way added their part to the evenings enjoyment.

The first number was a piano duet by Mrs. B. T. Barnes and Mrs. M. E. Dwight, Overture, "Egmont," by Mozart, which was very tastefully played, and much enjoyed. Little Miss Amiee Emmons came next, with a pleasing recitation, "Little Gustava." Miss Julia M. Bellnap played with much expression Thomi's plaintive "Simple Aveu," after which Miss Fannie Demorest gave a recitation, "Thora," with much spirit.

Miss Katherine Dwight followed with another recitation, entitled "Mary Ann," which greatly pleased the audience, and the programme was completed by another piano duet by Mrs. Barnes and Mrs. Dwight, a "Nocturne" from Mendelssohn's "Midsummer Night's Dream.

At the close of the entertainment ice-cream and cake were served by a bevy of white-robed young girls, while a busy hum of voices proved that the term "sociable" was no misnomer.

BACK FROM A BRIDAL TOUR.

REV. MR. NEWELL AND WIFE WELCOMED TO HOPE CHAPEL.

Mr. Newell Presented With a Bicycle and Mrs. Newell With a Handsome Tea Set.

Never before in its history was Hope chapel more beautitul than it was last evening. The occasion was the reception given to Rev. G. Kennedy Newell and his wife by the members of the congregation. On entering the edifice the sight was gorgeous. Along the walls hung the Stars and Stripes, mingled in with flowers here and there, while the chandeliers, with their gay colors, looked very pretty. At the extreme end of the chapel was an arch, tastefully decorated with varied flowers and potted plants, in the centre of which was the following inscription: "Welcome to the Hearts and Homes of Hope Chapel People." Although no programme had been prepared, still those who were called upon to say a few words, sing a song or give a recitation, did so in a willing and obliging manner.

The programme was as follows: Piano solo, Mrs. S. R. Struthers; duet, Messrs. F. Wharton, T. Cummerford; violin solo, James H. Gray; recitation, Geo. Lees; piano solo, Mrs. Fred Canfield. Then short addresses were made by Rev. W. R. Richards, Rev. J. O. McKelvey, H. C. Squires, and Rev. Mr. Erdman. The presentation speech was read by Dr. Richards, and was in part as follows:

The congregation of Hope chapel take this opportunity of briefly reviewing the history of its people. Five years ago we had a large Sunday-school and weekly prayer meeting. About that time Rev. G. K. Newell had graduated from the Union Theological Seminary, and immediately after the church session of the Crescent Avenue church called him to the pastorate of Hope chapel—at that time without a single member on its church roll. But it had a name, Hope chapel, and our pastor must have had a large share of hope in what God had in store for him here, when he accepted that call. On December 14th, 1890, the first communion service was held in Hope chapel, when in addition to those who had transferred from the Crescent Avenue church, 45 new members joined. Since then the membership has grown steadily. Today the membership numbers 240. Two hundred of whom are active, available members, and also a large number who join regularly with us in worshiping God in this chapel. And we respectively beg to acknowledge that a large share of our prosperity as a congregation, is the direct result of the labors of our pastor.

Mr. Newell, it is almost superfluous to add that during your sojourn with us you have made a host of friends not only in Hope chapel, but in Plainfield at large. It could not be otherwise, as you have been with us in our sorrows and our joys, in our prosperity and adversity, and during the hard times just passed the details of your labors among us will never be known. And considering the amount of territory covered by the membership, we, the congregation of Hope chapel, respectfully beg to present you with this bicycle as a means to better enable you to carry out the good work amongst us.

Mrs. Newell, in the words of our motto "We welcome you to the hearts and homes of Hope Chapel people," trusting that the new sphere of life you have just entered upon may be one of unclouded happiness. As a token of our love and respect, we ask you to accept this tea set as a present at our hands.

After the reading of the speech the pastor made a few appropriate remarks.

The following committee had charge of the reception: D. McInnes, chairman, R. Gow, secretary, P. Rosebery, F. Pearse, Mrs. McInnes, Neal Head, A. Jackson, Mrs. Steward, Mrs. Hall, Mrs. Bushby, and Mrs. Hanson.

INS AND OUTS.

David Bodine, of Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., together with several other members of the joint-committee of Somerset Council, No. 104, and the former Council, will go to East Millstone this afternoon to secure the attendance of the Millstone Council in Plainfield on the Fourth of July.

THE MODERN IDEA GIRL.

MISS BOWEN READS AN ESSAY ON WOMAN'S WORK.

Closing Exercises of Misses Scribner's and Newton's School—An Entertaining Programme Rendered.

The commencement exercises of Miss Scribner's and Miss Newton's school were held in the school building on LaGrande avenue yesterday afternoon. The programme opened with calisthenic exercises with clubs and wands, followed by a pleasing piano solo, "By the Brookside," by Miss Agnes Langhorne.

Miss Josephine Fitz Randolph read a very ingenious and original little essay, which rather partook of the character of a romance, on "The Man in the Moon."

Miss Ada D. Bartling followed with a recitation, "A Maying," a delicate bit of romance, which she rendered with sympathy, as did Miss Katharine Reinhart her humorous selection, "The Broomstick Train, or the Return of the Witches."

Essays by the graduates, Miss Marion Plummer Bowen and Miss Annie Kip Miller, were naturally the feature of the occasion. Miss Miller's subject was historical, "The Monastery the Symbol of Culture; the Castle the Symbol of Power." She drew a vivid picture of a mediaeval castle and of the contrast between the turmoil and ferocity of a feudal baron's life and the quiet of the cloister, where literature was nurtured and books preserved from the ravages of a turbulent age.

Miss Bowen discussed some of the problems of today under the title of "Shall Woman Go Out to Earn Her Bread or Shall She Stay at Home and Make It?" A woman's "vocation" in the old-time religious sense of the term, its modern usage, the college settlements; the important standing of the washing woman, whether in business or professional life, the compatibility of womanliness and independence, the reliability of women in business and the services rendered by working women's clubs, were some of the points touched upon.

The essayist duly honored the domestic side of woman's nature, expressing the opinion that woman should be able to make her bread as well as to earn it, and concluded that a girl's education should be broad in the truest sense, imbuing high intellectual culture and practical matters as well.

Between the essays a little music in the form of a violin solo was well rendered by Miss Blossom Fitz Randolph. The presentation of diplomas, by Miss Newton, followed.

Calisthenic exercises with dumbbells closed the first part of the programme, which concluded with a French play "La Latterie de Frankfort," with the following cast:

Felicite Hoffen, aubergiste...Harriet Goddard
Rosette, cousine de Felicite.Margaret Goddard
Perine, vielle servante.....Sara Richards
La Marquise d'Oberstadt,
Mary Anderson Reinhart
Amanda, femme de chambre de la Marquise,
Bertha Zerega

The parts of the ambitious mistress of the inn and the somewhat overbearing Marquise were very well sustained, as were the less important, but amusing roles of Rosette, Perine and Amanda.

The young ladies who graduated expect to continue their studies during the next year in preparation for college.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mrs. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else, then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottle at Randolph's drug store. Regular size, 50c and $1.

SAYS HE WAS PUNISHED

British Naval Journal on the Meade Case.

Our Friendship for England, the Paper Says, Is Shown in the Treatment of the Admiral—Suggests That England, To Return a Gracious Act, Ask for His Reinstatement.

Washington, June 15.—The case of Admiral Meade which ceases to attract much attention in naval circles here, being generally considered a closed incident, has begun to receive comment among naval officers abroad, and in the June 1st issue of the Broad Arrow, the naval and military gazette of Great Britain, which has just reached the navy department, the leading editorial is devoted to the subject. Even Admiral Meade, who is quietly summering in this city, having taken to exercising on a bicycle, will be surprised at the news contained in the editorial, which is as follows:

Says Meade Was Punished.

"The American government has shown its good will to England, not only by its amicable attitude over the Nicaraguan difficulty, but also by its suppression of Rear Admiral Meade in command of the American squadron which was present on the Nicaraguan coast. Admiral Meade, with an indiscretion which is as painful to Englishmen as it is foolish, expressed his regret that his government had not allowed him to act with vigor against us. He was anxious to support the Nicaraguans in their farcical resistance to our just demands, and for this he has been punished.

Deplore the Unfriendly Attitude.

"We cannot but deplore the unfriendly attitude which certain American naval officers occasionally assume towards us. We have in our mind Admiral Belknap's pronouncement that the Japanese could easily whip the Britishers as the British navy was quite an inefficient force. Such talk does an immensity of harm when the two branches of our race are drawing closer together. Captain Mahan and Admiral Esten (Erben) did not think or speak in this way, and on this side of the Atlantic there is nothing but the friendliest interest in the new American navy. We do not grudge our cousins their greatness; we do not interfere with their foreign policy and we look forward with hope to a future possibility of an alliance, which would be the only really popular alliance in England."

Suggests Reinstatement.

The Spectator makes a suggestion which it says might be acted upon by our government. "The United States has shown its friendliness by removing Admiral Meade; let us do an equally gracious act by asking that he may be reinstated in his command. It would certainly promote a kindlier feeling towards us amongst the officers of the American navy, and might even make Admiral Meade himself think that the Britishers are not such terrible villians after all."

The boiler about a year ago was under the care of the Hartford Boiler Inspection company and at that time was rated to be in first-class condition.

Hamburg, June 15.—Mr. Gladstone, who arrived here yesterday on the steamer Tantallon Castle as a guest of Sir Donald Currie, a well known British shipowner, to witness the opening of the North Sea canal, was entertained last evening at a fete at the Zoological gardens. He had been invited to afterwards attend a banquet given by the Hamburg senate and prominent merchants of the city, but he wrote that he greatly regretted not being able to be present. He said he feared that if he attended the banquet it might bring about a renewal of the bronchical troubles which had confined him to his bed for nine days before he left England.

The leading shippers and merchants of the city were present at the banquet. Sir Donald Currie made a speech in which he denounced the proposed new rules of the road at sea as extremely dangerous. COMMENT ON CORNELL CREW.

Field Says Their Style Has Not Created a Favorable Impression.

London, June 15.—The Field will today say that the Cornell crew are muscular and in good condition. Perhaps they appear stronger than they really are. They swing very straight, without any screwing. Their end-on appearance is very neat. Their style is quite opposed to what is considered correct here. It shows no improvement over that of previous American crews who have visited England. The paper adds that there does not seem to be any great amount of pace on the American's boat, which does not run especially well. The leg work of the crew is good, as is also their sliding, though the latter is rather short. The general style of the oarsmen has not created a very favorable impression.

WATER WAS SCARCE

Duke of Fife's Highland Residence Burned.

Everything Destroyed Except the Tennis Court and Diary—Most of the Furniture and Pictures Saved. Fire Spread to the Woods—Queen Victoria Witnessed the Blaze.

Edinburgh, June 15.—Mar Lodge, Braemer, Aberdeenshire, the highland residence of the Duke of Fife, son-in-law of the Prince of Wales, was burned yesterday. The fire broke out in the duke's private room. Owing to the scarcity of water the efforts made to extinguish the flames were unavailing. The fire spread to an adjacent wood which burned fiercely.

Queen Victoria Witnessed the Fire.

A great number of men were put to work cutting down trees to prevent the fire communicating to the great ballroom and tennis court in the vicinity. Among those who witnessed the destruction of the ducal residence was Queen Victoria, who, as soon as she heard of the fire, drove to the scene from Balmoral.

Furniture and Pictures Saved.

The felling of the trees stopped the spread of the fire, but not until all the buildings except the tennis court and dairy had been burned. Most of the furniture and pictures in the lodge were saved. The property was insured.

BAYARD STARTS FOR KIEL.

The Ambassador Leaves England on the Yacht Mirror.

London, June 15.—The Hon. Thomas F. Bayard, the American ambassador, stared for Kiel to-day to attend the ceremonies attendant upon the opening of the North Sea-Baltic canal. It was the original intention that Mr. Bayard and the other guests of Sir John Pender should make the trip in the latter's steam yacht Electra, but it was decided a few days ago that the party should go on the yacht Mirror. During Mr. Bayard's absence, J. Roosevelt-Roosevelt, secretary of the embassy, will act as charge d'affaires.

COCHRAN IMPROVING.

The Wounded Student May Be Taken to His Home Next Week.

Princeton, N. Garret Cochran was able to sit up a few minutes this morning and talked to the physician and attendants. Dr. Denton thinks that if no unfavorable symptoms are manifested by Monday or Tuesday Cochran can be taken to his home at Williamsport, Pa.

INDICTMENTS AT TRENTON.

Several Handed in Against State Politicians.

Trenton, June 15.—The Mercer county grand jury completed its labors yesterday and filed into court in the afternoon. Foreman Howe delivered to Justice Gummere a large batch of indictments. Among them, it is understood, were true bills against several state politicians exposed by the Voorhees investigating committee. While refusing to give the names of the state officials who had been indicted, Prosecutor Stockton admitted that secretary of state Henry C. Kelsey had not been indicted.

Names of Those Indicted.

It was stated on good authority this morning that the persons indicted are Bernard Ford, the fugitive ex-superintendent of the capitol; John Van Cleef, ex-chief clerk of the board of assessors; John Mullins, the Jersey City furniture dealer, from whom vast quantities of goods were bought to furnish the state house, and John L. Kuser, ex-business manager of the Newark Freie Zeitung, who is accused of having bribed several printers in contracts for German state printing. These printers, it is rumored, have also been indicted.

BROOKLYN POLICE SHAKE-UP.

Twenty of the Twenty-five Captains Transferred This Morning.

New York, June 15.—The Brooklyn police department has received the most general shaking up that has been known in its history. Twenty of twenty-five captains in the city were transferred this morning at 8 o'clock. The shake-up is the result of the crusade of the Law Enforcement society against the keeping of saloons open on Sunday, although the only reason for the wholesale changes, as given by Commissioner Willis, was "for the good of the force." The five captains who were not affected are—Capt. Short, of the fifth precinct; Rhodes, of the seventh; O'Reilly, of the eighth; Dyer, of the twelfth, and Clayton of the twenty-fourth (Coney Island).

WORLD'S GOLD PRODUCTION.

Revised Estimates of the Director of the Mint.

Washington, June 15.—Director of the Mint Preston will give to the press to-day a copy of his revision of his estimates of the world's production of gold and silver during the year 1894. His figures are conservative and he is confident that if there should be found any inaccuracy in them it will be that he has slightly understated rather than overstated the amount of production. According to his statement the gold production amounted to $181,500,000 worth, an increase of $23,000,000 over 1893. The silver production amounted to $214,000,000 worth, an increase of $1,000,000 over 1893.

GEN. CAMPOS IS CRUEL

Spanish Soldiers Die in the Streets of Cuba.

No Rest for the Troops, They Die of Hunger, Fever and Dysentery—The War Costing Spain $250,000 a Day—The Insurgents Land Several Armed Bands.

Tampa, Fla., June 15.—A proclamation signed by the revolutionary committee of Havana has just been received from Cuba. It says: "Maximo Gomez is in command with 2,000 men. The Marquis of Santa Lucia has joined him with 1,500 men.

Insurgents Land Troops.

"Remedios has protected the landing of Roloff and his 280 men. He brings munitions of war and 5,000 pounds of dynamite. The landing of Yero and Seraphin Sanchez is confirmed. Sancta Spiritus has seven armed bands. General Maceo with his 6,000 Machetoros is destroying and burning everything which he finds in his way.

Campos a Cruel General.

"If Spain had hunted for a general whose mission was to annihilate the Spanish army, no one would have been better suited than Martinez Campos, who does not let poor and tired soldiers have any rest. They die of hunger, for they are without food or clothes, under burning sun, in this deadly climate. The daily expenses of Spaniards runs up to $250,000. Martinez Campos has already 10,000 men.

Soldiers Dying in the Streets.

"Soldiers in the city of Manzanillo die in the streets of fever and dysentery. Famine spreads through the province of Cuba. In Baracoa and Guantanamo there are 18,000 insurgents in arms. Cuban advises received here are to the effect that 11,000 Spanish troops will land at Neuvitas, on the northern coast of Cuba yesterday, being the second instalment of troops dispatched to Campos by the home government."

CHINA IS WARNED.

Must Not Rely on the Powers; They Were Only Acting for Peace.

Victoria, B. C., June 15.—Letters to the King Tai company from Shanghai give the news that the Russian, German and French ministers in Pekin paid a joint visit to the tsung li yamen on May 23 and presented the following statement:

Must Not Be Misunderstood.

"The course taken by the three powers in giving advice to Japan by suggesting she should not permanently occupy the Liao Tung peninsula was dictated merely by the desire of those powers for a lasting peace in the orient, not to promote any interest of the Chinese government or to indicate their sympathy with China. The Chinese government is therefore warned not to misunderstand the object of the three powers and thus to rely upon them in the future in connection with affairs whose settlement is now pending."

WAR DEPLETED HER TREASURY

Colombia Forced To Place an Import Duty on Coffee.

Washington, June 15.—Consul Clifford Smyth, at Cartagena, Colombia, reports to the department of state the imposition of a tax of $1.60 on every 100 pounds of coffee exported for Colombia. The tax was made necessary by the depleted condition of the treasury, impoverished by the heavy expenses of the war. In addition to this tax, all exporters have to pay $10.00 in "stamps" for every manifest of shipment—a rule which, it is said, will decrease the number of shipments of coffee, while leaving the annual aggregate amount exported about the same. These increased taxes are the result of recent revolutionary disturbances.

The report comes from New Brunswick that county officials are making a thorough investigation of the jail delivery which took place yesterday. It would have been to the credit of the officials if they had made the investigation long ago.

The credit of securing the passage of a joint resolution in the Legislature whereby women expect eventually to secure the extension of ballot in school elections is largely due to the efforts of Plainfield women, who have worked persistently and logically in forming public sentiment in that direction.

It is a great thing to be a country editor this time of the year, when it is remembered that he is made the judge of "John Jones' first peas raised in his own garden," Peter Pumpkins early potatoes, and, in fact, all of the early vegetables of the neighborhood of which he may be the mental sponsor.

John Riges contemplates studying law in Somerville.

Mrs. Higgins, formerly of Greenbrook school, will teach in the Valley next term.

THE SECRET ORDERS.

Chairman V. W. Nash, of the Fourth of July Committee, spoke at the meeting of Miantanomah Tribe, I. O. R. M., last night.

Robert Connolly, formerly of Plainfield, is about to institute a council of the Jr. O. U. A. M. at Southampton, L. I. He will endeavor to have it named after Franklin Council of this city.

Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order of Foresters, met last night and initiated one candidate. The committee on the Fourth of July celebration reported and after a long discussion it was deemed best not to participate in the parade, as two thirds of the members expressed themselves as going to turn out with other orders.

Somerset Council, No. 104, Jr. O. U. A. M., celebrated its fourth anniversary last evening in their rooms in the Babcock building, a large number of Juniors being present from Somerville, Bound Brook, Dunellen and Plainfield. After two candidates were initiated the balance of the evening was given to sociability, during which remarks were made by the visiting brethren. At th close all adjourned to the banquet room where sandwiches, cake and ice-cream were served.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—The case of Sebring against Allen was adjourned in Justice Crosley's court this morning for thirty days.

—Eugene Hoerster, of Somerset stree, is building an addition to his wine store. It will be used for bottling purposes.

—A. Lusardi is the leading fruit dealer of this city as is evidenced in the big exhibit of bananas which he makes today in front of his North avenue place of business.

—The City Council of Lambertville, to abate the tramp nuisance there, have ordered that all tramps applying for relief shall be confined in the city jail five days and fed on bread and water.

—William E. Brock, of Mountain avenue, has greatly improved his property by the addition of a large two-story veranda, and a bow-window, besides other minor improvements. Mr. Brock keeps up with the times.

—The penalty for tearing down posters of any kind that have been lawfully posted, before the expiration of the date thereon stated, is $500 fine or three months' imprisonment. It is well to remember this, for there are transgressors in that line who would find it very inconvenient to raise $500 on sight.

—The song entitled "And The Cat Came Back" has always been supposed to be more fact than fiction. But the manner in which Annie Burke at the City Hotel has been disposing of the felines the past few days proves that as a song the composition is a success, but as an example of truth it is a woeful failure.

CHURCH CHIMES.

The reception to Rev. Mr. O'Donnell, of the Monroe Avenue chapel, which was announced for Tuesday evening, will be held Monday evening instead.

Among those expecting to attend the Christian Endeavor convention at Boston next month are Mrs. Harry Marshall, Miss Benedict and Miss Jennie Quick, of the Trinity Reformed church society. Miss Lizzie Dunn is the appointed delegate from the above society. They will probably accompany a party of thirty which is being arranged by Rev. Mr. Davis of Bound Brook.

Hamilton Turner, the transportation manager for the New Jersey Christian Endeavor Union, has issued an itinerary of the New Jersey delegation to the Boston Convention. It is a neat pamphlet of twelve pages, and sets forth all the information needful. The side trips are outlined. The expenses of the trip to the convention is estimated at $24.50; this estimate is for the "Hotel Bartol." Delegates should send their applications to Mr. Turner as soon as possible. He puts in a plea for all to go with the State excursion. Mr. Turner reports that he has received 300 applications so far, and that they are coming in at the rate of about ten a day. The prospects are that there will be more than 500 from New Jersey. One of the features of the trip on the "City of Boston" will be the programme being prepared by President French. A beautiful map of Boston has been prepared by the committee of arrangements for the use of delegates. This will prove of great help to those who are not acquainted in the Hub City, in making their way to it. Mr. Turner will furnish these maps to delegates. The State headquarters of the New Jersey delegation have been assigned in the Mechanics hall, in a most desirable position. The Boston convention programme contains the names of the following Jerseymen: Rev. Isaac W. Gowen, New Durham, will lead the denominational rally of the Reformed Church in America; Rev. Francis L. Patton, D. D., president of Princeton College, will give an address upon "The Attractions of the Ministry to Educated Young Men;" and on Saturday, Bishop Alexander Walters, D. D., of Jersey City, will give an address upon "The Responsibility of the Afro-American Race in America."

To Destroy the Beetles.

John R. Smith, professor of entomology at Rutgers college, and entomological expert of the State Board of Agriculture, located at Rutgers college, was in consultation on Tuesday at the Board of Works rooms, Newark, with Commissioner Joralemon.

The idea of the consultation was to devise a plan for saving the elm trees of Newark from the ravages of the elm leaf beetle, which has already begun its destructive work. Prof. Smith's plan consists in spraying the trees with a solution of arsenate of lead, made up of four ounces of arsenate of soda and eleven ounces of acetate of lead to 100 gallons of water, the whole forming an arsenate of lead which is said to destroy the insects.

The prescribed quantity, 100 gallons, Professor Smith said would be sufficient to spray four or five of the largest trees, and that it could be made at a cost of about twenty cents. The apparatus for spraying consists of a platform wagon, a number of barrels so arranged as to permit the use of a force pump with double nozzle discharge. The whole outfit can be provided for about $100, Mr. Smith said, and required three men to work it.

A Good Suggestion.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—John Davies of this city, took a severe cold and suffered pain through the back and kidneys. His physician pronounced his case gravel, and failed to help him. Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy was recommended, and after taking two bottles he considered himself cured. It has never failed in this or urinary troubles.

YOUR SCALP! During the heats of summer does it become irritated and invite an occasional friendly scratch? To wash it is well, but not too often, lest your hair become "brash" and stiff. But treat it twice or thrice a week with our Petroleum Hair Tonic—a little rubbed in with your finger ends, and you will find the feeling of comfort and coolness truly delightful. Positively nothing equals it as a balm for the woes of your scalp. Sprinkler bottles 50c. Only at

REYNOLDS'S PHARMACY, PARK AND NORTH AVENUES.

DUNELLEN.

David C. Campbell, of Fairmount, is visiting friends in town.

Old People.

Old people who require medicine to regulate the bowels and kidneys will find the true remedy in Electric Bitters. This medicine does not stimulate and contains no whiskey nor other intoxicant, but acts as a tonic and alterative. It acts mildly on the stomach and bowels, adding strength and giving tone to the organs, thereby aiding nature in the performance of the functions. Electric Bitters is an excellent appetizer and aids digestion. Old people find it just exactly what they need. Price 50c a bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

While at Peekskill, N. Y., Mr. J. A. Scriven, a prominent manufacturer of New York City, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Such good results were obtained from its use that he sent back to the druggist from whom he had obtained it for two more bottles of the same remedy. When you have a cough or cold give this preparation a trial and like Mr. Scriven you will want it when again in need of such a medicine. It is a remedy of great worth and merit. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

Sometime ago I was troubled with an attack of rheumatism. I used Chamberlain's Pain Balm and was completely cured. I have since advised many of my friends and customers to try the remedy and all speak highly of it. Simon Goldbaum, San Luis Rey, Cal. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. I have two little grandchildren who are teething this hot summer weather and are troubled with bowel complaint. I give them Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and it acts like a charm. I earnestly recommend it for children with bowel troubles. I was myself taken with a severe attack of bloody flux, with cramps and pains in my stomach, one-third of a bottle of this remedy cured me. Within twenty-four hours I was out of bed and doing my housework. Mrs. W. L. Dunagan, Bonaqua, Hickman Co., Tenn.

While in Topeka last March, E. T. Barber, a prominent newspaper man of La Cygne, Kansas, was taken with cholera morbus very severely. The night clerk at the hotel where he was stopping happened to have a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and gave him three doses which relieved him and he thinks saved his life. Every family should keep this remedy in their home at all times. No one can tell how soon it may be needed. It costs but a trifle and may be the means of saving much suffering and perhaps the life of some member of the family. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. JOSEPH MADE RULER OF SPAIN.

Divorce of Jerome and Elizabeth Patterson—Roman States Wrested From the Pope—Austrians Crushed at Wagram. Spanish Army Annihilated.

[Copyright, 1895, by John Clark Ridpath.]

XVIII.—FROM BAYONNE TO WAGRAM.

In Paris and the environs of Paris Napoleon had five residences. The magnificent Tuileries—so-called from being the site of an old tile-factory of the Middle Ages—came to him with the reminiscences of Bourbonism. Though it was the public seat of the Empire, it was never a favorite residence. The palace of the Elysee was the private city-home of the Emperor. Here he resided when the war fever was not on. Fontainebleau, thirty-seven miles from the city, was the home in which Napoleon found himself at greatest ease. The palace of St. Cloud was on the left bank of the Seine, a mile and a-half from the city ramparts. Malmaison was the home and property of the Empress Josephine, given to her by her husband. Here Napoleon's domestic life shone in fitful gleams of happiness; but the days were not unclouded.

It was at Fontainebleau that, on the 27th of October, 1807, the secret treaty was concluded between the Emperor and Godoy, so-called "Prince of the Peace," acting for Charles IV. of Spain. The motif of the business was the closing of the long sea-coast from the Bay of Biscay to the Gulf of Rosas against the commerce and incursions of England. Napoleon easily brought the Spanish minister and his master under his influence. It was agreed that the compact between them should be confirmed by a partition of Portugal. Godoy received his bribe of 15,000,000 francs!

Marshal Junot was sent with an army corps to Portugal, and on the 30th of November, 1807, he entered Lisbon. Maria I. and the prince regent John and the royal family, taking to flight, found refuge in Brazil. Junot published his master's celebrated proclamation to the effect that the House of Braganca had ceased to reign. For the time it appeared that the reformation of ancient kingdoms might be effected with pen-stroke and proclamation.

The Spanish Bourbons had fallen into an imbroglio that might well excuse the interference of a foreign power. Charles IV. was virtually a fool. The queen, who ruled him, was devoid of virtue. Godoy, her favorite, who ruled her, was a conspirator. Don Ferdinand, prince of Asturias and heir to the crown, intrigued to take his father's life! The king, to save Godoy, was induced by a mob to resign the throne to his loving son, who took the title of Ferdinand VII. Charles, however, instead of embarking for America, according to the compact, soon sought to recover his crown, and appealed to Napoleon to assist him.

It was the appeal of a sick sheep to a healthy lion! The lion invited the sheep and the household of the sheep to meet him at Bayonne, on the frontier. There, in the first week in May, 1808, was held the conference of the lion and the sheep. The lion said that they should all resign their claims to him! Ferdinand should have the kingdom of Etruria. Charles should receive the castle and parks of Chambord, and a pension of 6,000,000 francs. The rest should be cared for. Ferdinand remonstrated, and ventured on a rupture, for which he and Don Carlos were imprisoned at Valencai. A proclamation was issued that the House of Bourbon had ceased to reign. A Junta was convened in Castile; a new constitution was formed, and on the 6th of June, 1808, Joseph Bonaparte was declared king of Spain and the Indies.

The pacification of the peninsula was assigned to Murat, who succeeded in reducing the royalists. He would himself fain be king of Spain; but Napoleon preferred his brother for that important trust. Murat must content himself with the crown of the Two Sicilies and the title of Joachim I.

Joseph on his arrival at Madrid found himself among a hostile people. He perceived that he was regarded as an alien and usurper, and that his following—though it embraced the ablest leaders and a majority of the urban population—was interested and deceptious.

Personal forces now again appeared contending with the absolute. Jerome Bonaparte, youngest brother of Napoleon, being at Washington, was introduced to the Pattersons of Baltimore. At the age of nineteen he took Elizabeth Patterson for his wife. The marriage was solemnized by Bishop Carroll. Jerome desired to return with his American bride to France; but his mother declared the marriage invalid, on account of the son's minority. An Imperial edict was issued to that effect. The Emperor forbade his brother to bring his wife to France, and called on the Pope to annul the marriage.

Pius VII. refused to grant the divorce. From 1805 to 1807 Jerome and his beautiful wife were kept aloof. Meanwhile, on both sea and land, he displayed greater talents than were shown by any other Bonaparte save only the Great One. The Emperor wanted his brilliant youngest brother—who in case of failure of heirs to himself was declared successor to the Empire—to be king of Westphalia. He ordered him to take in marriage the princess Catharine of Wurtemberg. The wishes of Jerome and the despair of his wife were put aside as sentimental trifles, and the new political marriage was confirmed in August of 1807.

He who had crowned Napoleon in Notre Dame now broke with him—and broke himself against him. In February of 1808 the angry Emperor ordered General Miollis to occupy Rome. He proceeded to punish the Holy Father by taking away the provinces of Ancona, Macerata, Fermo and Urbino, and annexing them to the kingdom of Italy. Still the Pope would not recede. The dispute became hot, and the Emperor wrested from the supreme pontiff the remainder of the Roman States. The Pope, in June of 1809, hurled back his defiance in a bull of excommunication. On the 6th of July, the French took possession of the Quirinal palace, gently seized the Holy Father, and conveyed him prisoner, first to Grenoble, and finally to Fontainebleau.

The Spanish people were the humblest of Catholics. The accession of Joseph Bonaparte as king was strongly opposed by a counter revolution. The patriots who favored the restoration of Ferdinand VII. were headed by the Junta of Seville, and their party was inflamed not a little by religious rancor on account of the indignities to the Pope. Nearly a half million soldiers were put into the field, and in support of these came into Spain English armies under Sir John Moore, Sir David Baird and Lieutenant-General Arthur Wellesley. English influence had long been predominant in Portugal, and the British lion now sought to lay his paw on Spain.

Critics have regarded the treaty of Bayonne and the rupture with the Pope as the beginning of Waterloo. The romancer—looking only at the dramatis personæ—might well begin his story of the overthrow of the First French Empire with the pretty face and soft hands of Elizabeth Patterson! But History, deeper than marriages and divorces, deeper than emperors and popes, sees rather the lines of eternal causation stretching through the dust and turmoil, and the mere persons of the play darting hither and yon like ephemera!

Napoleon's banner still rose and floated, for a while, in the highest sky. On the Continent none could resist him further. He sealed all harbors until the trade between London and Hamburg was carried on by way of Constantinople! The German princes, against all prejudices of race and tradition, sought eagerly to enter the Confederation of the Rhine. The displacement of the Spanish Bourbons seemed to conclude the career of that race. The old monarchy had become spectral. Louis XVIII.—so-called by the phantasmal past, fared on through the dim world. Refused an asylum in Italy, in Austria, in Saxony, in Prussia, he had found a brief respite at Mittau and Warsaw; but after Tilsit he must on and on, ever fatter in body and leaner in hope, to that ultimate hospital of obesity and despair—England.

The years 1808-9 had this complexion for Napoleon—that he might regard the past as finished. As to the future, he saw that shining like a sun through the east-windows of the Tuileries. Nevertheless there was peace nowhere. If the past was finished, the present was chaos and the future merely pregnant. His "Continental System"—by which Great Britain was to be left rotting on the sea—roused all the remaining rancor of races and nations. Sweden leagued with England. The Muscovite enthusiasm for France emitted at intervals sulphur instead of incense. The Czar was for Napoleon; but the Russians were not for the French. The Congress of Erfurt, in October of 1808, was hollow. Alexander and Napoleon were there; also the kings of Saxony, Wurtemberg and Westphalia; also the minor princes. The state of Europe was confirmed. The Czar should have Finland, Wallachia and Moldavia. A paper was sent to the demented king of England proffering peace—to which the duke of Portland replied that there could be no peace because the House of Bourbon had not been at Erfurt. He might as well have answered that there could be no more sunshine in the meadows of Europe until Geoffrey of Monmouth should be chancellor of daybreak!

While Napoleon was busy with the complications of 1807-8, Austria had been covertly arming for the renewal of war. The British ministry gave Francis II. four million pounds to break the peace! The early spring of 1809 found the Archduke Charles in Bavaria with a tremendous army. Napoleon heard the noise afar. Leaving Soult to finish the Spanish business, he hastened to Paris. By the 16th of April he was at Stuttgart. On the 18th, his headquarters were at Ingolstadt. Out of Wurtemberg and Baden, by the swiftest couriers, he evoked an army. He threw himself like a tornado on the Austrians, and hurled them back towards Bohemia. Vienna was uncovered, and on the 12th of May surrendered to the French.

On the 21st and 22nd of that month occurred the indecisive battles of Aspern and Essling. In June the progress of the French seemed to be delayed by the very excess of their advances and victories. On the 5th and 6th of July was fought the famous and sanguinary battle of Wagram, in which the Austrians were routed with a loss of fully 25,000 men. The Hapsburg Empire was as completely prostrated as Prussia had been after Jena. The humbled Francis came to a conference with Napoleon at Schonbrunn. He was obliged to purchase peace by the cession of the provinces of Dalmatia and Istria. Austrian Poland was divided between the Czar and the king of Saxony. Salzburg was given to Bavaria. Francis pledged his honor to renounce his alliance with England, and to uphold the continental system of Napoleon.

Meanwhile Soult, in command of the second corps in Spain, had on the 10th of November, 1808, annihilated the Spanish army at Burgos. He had wrested Corunna, Ferrol and Oporto from the English. But the tide turned in Northern Portugal, and the French were driven back by Wellington. A division under Marshal Moncey, marching on Valencia, was defeated, as was also General Dupont, in the battle of Baylen, in Andalusia, where the French losses amounted to nearly 20,000. In August of 1808 occurred the siege of Saragossa, memorable alike in history and poesy. Not until February of the following year was the stronghold surrendered to the French, whose losses during the siege are said to have exceeded 50,000!

It was just after these events that the hollow congress was held at Erfurt. By the first week of December, 1809, Napoleon had returned to Paris. During his recent stay in Vienna—perhaps in his conferences with Emperor Francis at Schonbrunn—he had had a thought. There was at that time in the palace of the Hapsburgs a girl just eighteen years of age. Josephine was forty-six and a-half!

Free Medical Aid For State Servants.

M. Felix Faure has decided that all the state and other domestics at the Elysee and their families are to receive medical assistance gratis. The cost is to be paid out of his own purse. All the ushers and other servants employed there by the state have been nearly 30 years at the Elysee. Since influenza visited Paris, in 1889, they have often suffered from that illness, and being old had often to seek medical assistance. As their salaries are not high, they thought this was hard, and so also thinks the president.

OLD FASHIONED GIRLS.

Mrs. Parkhurst Believes in Domestic Home Training.

Let us draw a word picture of an old fashioned girl, such as there used to be before a woman's college was conceived of. She received a good education in the common branches; after that she very likely went to a boarding school and was taught some of the accomplishments. When she came home her wise mother inducted her into the mysteries of home-making in all its departments. She must know how to cook and mend, she must be able to show an ignorant servant how to do her work, and when, as is often the case, there is no servant at hand she must do the work herself. A girl with such a training is a host in herself. No domestic cyclone can disturb her serenity. Knowledge is power. She feels that home is her sphere, and wields her scepter with dignity.

There is another picture at hand. It is of the girl of the period. She is not content with such an education as her mother received. A college training is the fad now, and go to college she must. With a three years' preparatory course and four years in college, she comes out a thoroughly educated girl, as far as books go.

Sometimes her knowledge so sets her above her mother and the home that she is utterly dissatisfied with the old surroundings. She must make a way for herself. Various avenues are open to her, but she has to push and jostle her way to success, for it means competition with men as well as with women.

This develops an aggressive and self-assertive spirit in which the womanly qualities are lost, or, if not lost, so buried as to need a resurrection trump to bring them to life again. Many avenues whereby women may support themselves are open to the sex now, but as said before, success in these lines means struggle, and struggle develops aggressive qualities.

It cannot be otherwise. And that aggressiveness asserts itself in the home. The mother is old fashioned in her ideas. The daughter has the fresher, newer knowledge, and is apt to think she knows more than her mother.

I do not wish to be understood as depreciating college training: but training should not end there. I remember hearing a lady in a noted college town say that she thought the college course should be supplemented by a two years' course in domestic training, and that by another two years in a school for manners; for the average college girl had no home training and very bad manners. Upon that remark I set myself to watch the college girls, and I must say her last remark at any rate was true.

It may be that the intense aggressiveness and the free and easy manners of the girl of to-day are only a swing of the pendulum from the kept-at-home and mothered girl of the former period. And perhaps the extreme to which the pendulum swings will be its own corrective, but the mothers cannot afford to ignore the present tendency.

It may not be time for a revolt, but it certainly is a time to look carefully at the tendency, and see if a wise detaining hand and a little careful direction cannot supplement the college training and turn the restless, aggressive energy into the legitimate lines of home-making and keeping.

A friend has said, "College training gives women broader views and takes them outside the petty cares and frictions of life." But the petty cares of life are the lot of many women. If college training will help them in the discharge of their duties and make them better equal to the emergencies of life then let us encourage it. But at the same time, the old fashioned mothers must assert their old fashioned ideas and insist upon home training and home culture to be as necessary as the college curriculum.

If mothers will take that position and maintain it there will be no need of revolt. Mothers still have power enough if they will use it, and a larger, wider culture, embracing the intellect and the heart, the head and the hands, will be the result. NELLIE B. PARKHURST.

Did Columbus Do It?

Did Columbus really discover America? For a century his claim to this honor has stood secure and unimpeached. But quite recently an English royal geographer unearthed an old map in the Ambrosian Library at Milan, drawn by one Andrea Bianco, of Venice, in the year 1448. Bianco is known as probably the most famous cartographer of his time, and the map is pronounced the clearest and most accurately drawn of that century, so far as the European and African coasts are concerned. Carefully and distinctly presented on its outer edge is a bit of South American coast line, indicating that some navigator must have crossed the Atlantic forty-five years before Columbus first sailed from Palos.

A Pathetic Appeal.

A blind beggar exhibited a card inscribed as follows:

"Kind, charitable souls, don't be ashamed of giving me a half penny; I am blind."

W. W. Astor and Kate Field seem to be equally independent in their ideas of suspending their weeklies. Mr. Astor's Pall Mall Budget seemed to be successful, and he dropped it. Kate Field's Washington did not owe a dollar, and she stopped it. Miss Field may go on again, but in the meantime she is contesting her aunt's will, and that may prove more profitable than editing

II.

My feelings as I left Mr. Trohm and entered the darker portions of the road were confused and varied. I was not afraid, nor was I exactly easy, though I carried a pistol, half-cocked, in my side pocket. I expected to encounter some one or something out of the ordinary, and moved hurriedly on, though with great circumspection.

It was a bright day, as I have said, and in another mood I would have enjoyed the scenery. Now, however, I was on the lookout for the Knollys mansion and took no time to observe the wild beauties about me. Finally without premonition or adventure of any kind I came upon it, a great, gaunt, neglected building of colonial time, whose first appearance awoke a tremor, and from which on closer inspection no suggestion came save that which breathed of decay and death. Yet it was a home, as more than one indication showed, and once had been a courtly one, with possibilities of aristocratic splendor.

A grove of half-decayed trees separated it from the road, and the effect produced from these may have partially accounted for the special aspect I have mentioned. At least I was willing to think so, and was about to seek a way through the tangled underbrush which everywhere hindered my steps, when I heard a sharp whistle, and, looking up, saw a young man emerge from the open doorway. He was calling to some dogs, who immediately appeared and began to leap about him, and as he did not see me, though the dogs did, I had ample opportunity to study his face.

It was a good-natured but wholly commonplace one, and from the fact that he did not note the distraction apparent in his dogs I drew the conclusion that he was not overburdened with acuteness. Had the sisters, then, all the brains of the family? I was determined to find out as soon as I should encounter any one more willing to talk about them than Mr. Trohm.

Meantime the young man had remained impassive and the dogs merely restive; and, strange as it may appear, I experienced a vague disappointment at being allowed to pass the gate of this house, and eventually to leave it far behind [illegible] to warn [illegible] by my [illegible] the mysteries [illegible]

On my return to the tavern I made Mr. Simmons my confidant and was astonished at the effect which was produced upon him by the name of Knollys. Though he tried to hide it, there was evidently some reason in his own mind for not being startled by this association of their name with the possible crimes I was investigating; and when I urged him to be frank he allowed, with an impulsive burst of feeling, that there had always been something wrong with the Knollys; and, urged still further, brought out a letter he had received some few months since from his daughter, who was a hospital nurse in Denver, and laid it before me.

"There," said he. "Sophia won't like it, but such facts as you will find written there ought not to be kept secret. I thought so at the time and I think so all the more now, that these disappearances have accumulated in our town till we are afraid to move through our own woods after dark."

Astonished to be offered a clue in a letter written from Denver, I did not reply to this burst, but hastened to open the folded sheets before me and to read the following remarkable lines:

Dear Father—I have just heard a perfectly unexplainable thing about the Knollys. The person who told me was a Miss Grant, who visited them about Christmas time. She is a patient of mine, and when she heard I was from Cushing was so startled, and showed so much agitation, that I insisted upon knowing why, when she related the following story:

Her father and the Knollys' father had been life-long friends, and though the young people had never met there had always been an understanding between them that Miss Grant should sometimes make a visit to Cushing. This was brought about last December, and Miss Grant, with the full knowledge of the Knollys girls, arrived in town early one Wednesday afternoon and was driven directly to their door. She expected a cordial welcome, but she noticed before she was half way up the steps that something was amiss. One sister only was in the hall to greet her, and that sister was abstracted and pale, and looked oftener behind her and up the stairs than at her newly arrived guest. Miss Grant was not even asked to take off her wraps, till overcome by the heat of the sitting-room into which they had stepped, she herself loosened her furs, at which Lucetta—I think it was Lucetta who received her—seemed to recover her wits and tried to play the hospitable hostess, but with such ill success that Miss Grant was almost tempted to resume her furs and return to Fulmingham Station. Something, however, in her young hostess' eye restrained her, and endeavoring not to notice the other's preoccupation she talked rapidly on every available topic till the other sister came in. Miss Knollys, as you know, is a grave person, but very pleasing and attractive. She won upon Miss Grant at once, but for all that her presence did not greatly relieve the situation, for her first glance was directed toward her sister, who instantly bounded up and left the room, and not till they were alone did she seem to notice her guest, whom she then greeted warmly, but with that same air of abstraction and constraint which had been so painfully observable in Lucetta.

Miss Grant had expected that she would now be taken to her room, but on the contrary Miss Knollys sat down, and with an apologetic air informed her of how sorry she felt that she could not show her the precise attentions she wished. Circumstances, she said, over which they had no control had made it impossible for them to offer her the guest chamber, but if she would be so good as to accept another for that one night they would try and accommodate her more properly thereafter.

Miss Grant, who had noticed the poverty evident in the house, broke in with the generous assurance that any room would be acceptable to her, and still expecting to be taken up stairs, began to gather up her wraps. But Miss Knollys again surprised her by saying that her room was not ready, that they had not been able to complete all their arrangements and prayed that she would make herself at home where she was till evening. More and more astonished and disconcerted, but hiding it bravely, for the sake of the pitiful look in the girl's eye, Miss Grant laid down her furs again and endeavored to make the best of the somewhat trying situation. She talked and she laughed, though she met with but little response, noting all that was odd in her unaccountable reception, but giving no evidence of her concern or secret indignation. But let me tell the rest in her own words as I remember them.

The peculiarities observable in my reception continued all day, said Miss Grant. When one sister came in, the other went out, and when dinner time arrived and I was ushered down the bare and dismal hall into an equally bare and unattractive dining room, it was to find Lucetta only, seated at the head of the board. She made some apology for the fact, but it was so evidently an evasive one that I scarcely heard it and kept looking at the empty place where the brother should sit, wondering if he was at the bottom of my strange reception, But as if to dispel this supposition he presently came in, and though it was my first meeting with the nominal head of the house, Lucetta waited for a short nod from him before giving me the necessary introductions.

He is a lumbering fellow and had I not been intent upon solving the mystery of their actions I should have taken little if any interest in him. As it was I watched him for what he might do or say, but learned nothing save that he was [illegible]ively stupid.

[illegible]noon, was [illegible] one of the sisters. One event alone is worth recording. I had become excessively tired of a conversation that always languished, no matter on what topic it was started, and observing an old piano in one corner, I sat down before it and impulsively struck a few chords from the yellow keys. Instantly Lucetta—it was Lucetta who was with me then—bounded to my side with a look of horror on her face.

"Don't do that!" she cried, laying her hand on mine to stop me. Then seeing me recoil at her touch which was icy cold, she added with an appealing smile, "I beg pardon, but every sound goes through me to-night."

"Are you not well?" I asked.

"I am never very well," she returned; and we went back to the sofa and renewed our forced and pitiful conversation.

Promptly at nine o'clock Miss Knollys came in. She was very pale and cast as usual a sad and uneasy look at her sister before she spoke to me. Immediately Lucetta rose, and becoming very pale herself, was hurrying toward the door when her sister stopped her.

"THE SOUND WAS QUICKLY SMOTHERED."

"You have forgotten," she said, to say good night to our guest."

Instantly Lucetta turned and, with a sudden, uncontrollable impulse, seized my hand and pressed it convulsively.

"Good night," she cried, "I hope you will sleep well," and was gone before I could say a word in response.

"Why does Lucetta go out of the room when you come in?" I asked, determined to know the reason for this peculiar conduct. "Have you any other guests in the house?"

The reply came with unexpected vehemence. "No," she cried, "why should you think so? There is no one here but the family." And she turned away with a certain dignity which cut short all further remarks. "You must be very tired," she said. "If you please we will go now to your room."

I rose at once, glad of the prospect of being relieved from these forced attentions. She took my wraps on her arm and we passed immediately into the hall. As we did so I heard voices, one of them shrill and full of distress, but the sound was so quickly smothered by a closing door that I failed to discover whether that tone of suffering proceeded from a man or a woman.

Miss Knollys, who was preceding me, glanced back in some alarm. But as I gave no token of having noticed anything out of the ordinary, she speedily resumed her way upstairs. As the sounds I had heard had proceeded from above I did not follow her with much alacrity. But reflecting that whatever was going on in this house, it could by no possibility have any reference to myself, I resumed my courage, which, however, perceptibly weakened when I found myself passing door after door down a long hall to a room as remote as possible from what seemed to be the living portion of the house.

"Won't I have any one near me," I began, as my young hostess paused and waited for me to join her on the threshold of the most forbidding room it had ever been my fortune to enter.

"Oh," she smiled, "you need not be afraid. Nothing can happen to you here; I am only sorry that we are obliged to offer you such mean lodging. But all our other rooms are—are out of order," she explained, firmly, "and to our great regret you will have to sleep in this one for to-night."

"But cannot I sleep with one of you?" I persisted. "I won't put you to any inconvenience. I am not accustomed to be put off by myself."

"I am sorry," she again repeated, "but it is quite impossible. If I could give you the comforts you are accustomed to, I should be glad. But we are unfortunate, we girls, and——" She said no more, but began to busy herself about the room, which I tried to see in as favorable a light as I could. Perhaps she saw my failure—in my face perhaps she felt herself the dreariness of the gray discolored walls, which the fire that had been lit on the hearth did not serve to lighten, for she pointed to a bell-rope near the head of the bed and kindly remarked:

"If anything disturbs you, pull that. It communicates with my room, and I will come at once and speak to you."

I glanced up at the rope, ran my eye along the wire communicating with it and saw that it was broken sheer off before it even entered into the wall.

"I am afraid you will not hear me," I answered, pointing to the break.

She flushed a deep scarlet, and for a moment looked as embarrassed as ever her sister had done.

"I did not know," she murmured. "The house is so old, everything is more or less out of repair." And she made haste to quit the room.

I ran after her in alarm.

"But there is no key to the door," I objected.

She came back with a look almost like anger on her stern face.

"What do you fear?" she cried. "Is this a public house where you would be liable to intrusion. You are in a private dwelling, my dear, and—good night," she murmured, beneath her breath, but now so low but that my excited sense caught the words she uttered. "Can she have heard anything? Has the reputation of this place gone abroad? Miss Grant," she repeated more loudly, "you are as safe here as a babe on its mother's knee. Nothing threatens you, nor need you have the least fear whether the night passes in quiet or whether it is broken by unaccustomed sounds. They will have no reference to you."

Her look, her manner were encouraging and for a moment I felt ashamed of my foolish tremors. What if I were banished to a remote corner in a dismal and strangely ordered house! Was I not under the protection of two amiable girls, daughters of my father's oldest friend? Certainly my conduct was ridiculous and could but add to Miss Knollys' trouble.

Taking her by the hand, I craved her pardon, and begging her to have no more concern about me, I returned to my room and carefully closed the door. But no sooner did I find myself thus shut in than all my vague doubts returned and I would have given anything for the meanest and smallest apartment in a crowded country tavern with normal commonplace people.

But my fate was to be shut in, in this den of darkness and discomfort, and I forced myself to make the best of it.

The candle which she had brought with her and set down on a small table by the hearth was too short to last long—another circumstance which did not add to my happiness; while the fire was one of those light and flashy ones meant only to burn till bed is reached, and there was no wood to add to it. So that I had before me the prospect of a dark and cold room, if my foolish fears triumphed over my fatigue and kept me awake. So it evidently became my duty to sleep, and recognizing this fact, I looked to see how a sense of security could be obtained. The bed was light and could be pulled in front of the door; the windows—but there was but one and that was heavily draped with thick dark stuff. Going to it, I dragged the heavy folds aside and looked out. A multitude of wintry boughs overshadowed a stretch of unbroken snow, met my eyes, repelling me by its lonesomeness. I let the curtain fall again, and allowing my good sense to reassert itself, I prepared myself for the night, merely yielding enough to my fears to pull the bed in front of the door; then I lay down, and with the light still burning, fell fast asleep.

It must have been after midnight that I awoke in a violent tremble, and with the perspiration streaming from every pore. Someone or something was at my door. I heard the stealthy step, the swishing dress, which proved the intruder to be a woman, and then the quiet, almost noiseless insertion of a key into the lock, followed by the quick turn which made me a prisoner. Bounding to the floor, I gasped out Miss Knolly's name, but no answer came in reply to my smothered appeal, and next moment I heard the step gliding softly away, filling me with so much alarm that I should certainly have shrieked aloud if at that moment there had not risen from somewhere in the house a cry so much more wild and unearthly than any I could have uttered that my own tongue became paralyzed and I sank to the ground in terror.

A murmur of voices quickly suppressed followed, but no second cry, and presently all was as still as if no sound had arisen to disturb the midnight. I cowered, however, for many minutes longer against the floor, and then, stiff with the cold and blinded by the darkness, for my candle had long ago burned out, I groped my way to the chair where I had laid my clothes and began with trembling fingers to dress myself.

As I did so I paused every now and then to listen, but beyond the faint fall of a distant footstep, or the smothered sound of whispering voices, I heard nothing, though every fibre in my body told me that some dreadful thing had happened, and that that event, whatever it was, had been a premeditated one, or why had my door been locked.

Alive to my helplessness, and recalling for my comfort the parting assurance of Miss Knollys that nothing which might occur would have any reference to myself, I sat down in my clothes and waited with mingled hope and dread for daybreak.

But I had miscalculated my amount of nerve. I could not sit thus passively for hours, and jumping up at last, I pushed my bed aside and laid my hand on the knob of my door to see if the latter was really fastened. I found that it was, and not knowing what to do with myself I leaned against the lintel and listened, counting my own heart beats and vaguely hoping that somewhere in the house a clock would soon strike, telling me the hour.

But no such relief came; on the contrary, the leaden moments went by without a sound to relieve them, and I was beginning to query whether it would not be better for me to avail myself of the warmth of my bed than to stand any longer shivering on the bare floor, when a faint noise, the first I had heard in some time, came from without, and the stealthy footfall returned to my door, paused a moment, during which I held my breath and almost stopped my heart's beating; then the key was again inserted, turned and drawn out, leaving me again in communication with the family.

Catarrh starts in the nasal passages, affecting eyes, ears and throat, and is in fact, the great enemy of the mucous membrane. Neglected colds in the head almost invariably precede catarrh, causing an excessive flow of of mucous, and if the mucous discharge becomes interrupted the disagreeable results of catarra will follow, such as bad breath, severe pain across forehead and about the eyes, a roaring and buzzing sound in the ears and oftentimes a very offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles.

SECOND SUMMER.

Most Critical Year in the Baby's Existence.

At No Time So Liable to Sudden Intestinal Disorders.

The Earliest Victims to Cholera Infantum.

EXTRAORDINARY CARE WITH BABY'S FOOD ESSENTIAL.

Weaning baby in summer is attended with peril when heat and improper feeding conspire to derange the sensitive stomach.

As warm weather comes on, children require the most wholesome nourishing and palatable diet possible, and lactated food should be in the hands of every mother. Sudden changes of the atmosphere are dangerous above all things to infants whose digestive apparatus is out of order, and the use of lactated food is especially to be commended because of its corrective influence in cases of irritability of the stomach

Then, too, the mother who has tried hard to nurse her child, but growing weak and losing her own appetite until she is nearly worn out, and finds now that she must wean her infant while the days and nights are growing hotter and more and more debilitating can do so, as thousands of mothers have done before, upon lactated food.

The infant will like it and grow strong and happy upon it. The composition of lactated food is simply this: Its basis is sugar of milk; with it is combined the digestive elements of wheat, barley and oats, producing a pure food which meets every requirement of the growing child.

There is no secret about it. It is the food physicians use in their own families and most generally prescribe.

Thousands of mothers have testified to the fact that lactated food has done what nothing else could do—saved the lives of their little ones.

No better evidence can be offered of its superiority than the many instances in which fretful, peevish and sleepless babies, as soon as put on lactated food, sleep all night and wake up laughing. The happy change, physicians say is solely due to the superior nourishing and satisfying qualities of this best of foods.

It must be borne in mind that lactated food is so inexpensive that it is within the reach of every family.

FUMBLING FINGERS LOST.

A BALL GAME FULL OF ERRORS AND MISTAKES.

The Plainfield and Orange Y. M. C. A. Teams Contest, With the Result of the Local Team Losing—The Score.

The Y. M. C. A. ball team outbatted and outfielded their opponents, the Orange Y. M. C. A., and yet were defeated by one run Saturday afternoon. A very slim crowd made its way to the Crescent Oval to witness a game full of errors and mistakes. The Plainfield boys did not put up their usual game, but became unaccountably rattled.

In the first inning a base on balls to Townley and a two-base hit by Schoonmaker brought in one run, and an error by an Orange infielder allowed Schoonmaker to score. The second inning was a most disastrous one to Plainfield. Two base hits started the ball rolling, and before the home team could realize it six men had trotted across the plate. The next two innings netted six runs for Plainfield and two goose eggs for Orange, making the score 8 to 6 in Plainfield's favor. But soon the luck turned, and Orange gathered in five more runs to none for Plainfield. At the end of the eighth inning the score stood 12 to 11 in favor of Orange, and the Plainfield boys made a last effort for victory. Wyckoff got his first on an error by the third baseman, and on wild throws by left field and pitcher finished the circle of the bases. This tied the score, but two easy flies and a strike out closed the inning. Smith struck out for the visitors, but a clean hit sent Page to first. He took second on an error, and Codey secured his base on balls. A passed ball advanced each man a base. Page attempted to get home but was given out at the plate, although the catcher did not touch him. A grounder by Beyer ended the game by bringing in Codey.

Corey occupied the pitcher's box for Plainfield for the first five innings, after which he was removed and Burt substituted. Lack of practice made Burt a little wild, but that he is a coming pitcher was shown by his striking out the first four men in succession. He will be of great value to the Y. M. C. A. during the summer. Dupee, at left, made some very pretty plays, capturing several flies after a hard run and making two beautiful hits between first and second. Schoonmaker did not play his usual game at third, but showed his batting abilities by three hits, two of which brought him to the second bag.

The score by innings was as follows:

Orange	0	6	0	0	2	3	1	0	1—13
Plainfield	2	0	3	3	0	0	0	3	1—12

The tabulated score was:

A RESTFUL SPOT.

Hotel Netherwood Opened With Prospects of a Successful Season.

The Hotel Netherwood was opened last Saturday under the management of John Spitler, who has had extensive experience in catering to the summer trade of first-class houses in Saratoga and elsewhere. The house has been thoroughly renovated and repaired throughout, and now presents a handsome appearance with all the improvements of a modern hotel.

The lawns and surrounding shrubberry afford much shade and give a charming aspect of rural beauty. While the house will be free from the busy and noisy turmoil of the sea shore hotels there will be just enough social gaiety with the weekly hops which Mr. Spitler intends inaugurating to relieve the monotony that might otherwise ensue. The music will be furnished by Prof. Gioscia's orchestra, who will give recitals each day.

CRIED LIKE A CHILD.

The Friendless Foreigner Broke Down When Sentenced.

The Elizabeth Journal of Saturday published the following account of proceedings in court when John Bulamski, of this city, was given two years in State prison for assault on his wife:

John Bulamski was tried on an allegation of assault and battery on his wife. She testified that he knocked her down, beat her, and threatened her life. Bulamski was convicted. He made no defense, but expressed a desire to have the court immediately grant her a divorce. Chief Grant, of Plainfield, testified that Mrs. Bulamski was a young woman of good character and that she was in constant fear of her life. Bulamski was sentenced to State prison for two years. When the interpreter announced the sentence to the prisoner he cried like a child, and was removed to his cell with much difficulty.

Miss Maxson Entertains.

Miss Mabel Maxson, of West Fourth street, entertained a few friends, Saturday evening, in honor of her cousin, Miss Dexter, of Elmira, N. Y. Dancing and games, interspersed with college songs, made up a very delightful evening. Also piano solos by the hostess were charmingly rendered and enjoyed by all. And last, but not least, were the cooling refreshments of ice-cream and cake, which were very acceptable after the pleasant but warm exercise of dancing. Among those present were: Daniel Dexter, Misses Dexter, of Elmira, N. Y., Miss Rogers, of Florida, Mrs. Maxson, Mr. and Mrs. Rogers, Mr. McClurg, Mr. Peck, Marcus Clawson, Frank J. Hubbard, Harry Maxson, Miss Bessie Titsworth and Miss Tomlinson.

Elizabeth School Children.

The school census of Elizabeth, which has just been completed, shows there are 5,333 boys and 5,259 girls of school age, or a total of 10,592 in the city. An unusual feature is that the boys lead the girls by seventy-four in the grand total, while in seven out of the twelve wards the girls are ahead. The enumerators report 421 colored children in the city. There are fifty-nine children under fifteen years of age employed in factories and five deaf mutes.

The school census of Rahway, taken by Joseph R. Rollinson and William H. Miller, show a gain of more than 100 over the attendance of last year. The total is 1,861.

Progressive Merchants.

At the meeting of the Retail Merchants' Protective Association, of New Brunswick, Friday, it was decided that every member would close his store at seven p. m. between June 20th and September 1st. They also decided to close all day on July 4th. The committe which has charge of the scheme to have a government post-office building in New Brunswick has interested several other local organizations, which will appoint committees and act jointly with the Merchants' Association in carrying out this project.

Some Montclair People Indignant.

The writ of certiorari secured by a number of Montclair people through James M. Trimble, which has resulted in work upon the roads of the town being stopped for a year at least, has created much indignation. The work was stopped in some places after the road had been dug out, preparatory to laying stone. The writ has had the effect of restraining the Assessor from placing the $10,000 bond road appropriation in this year's tax levy, and from enjoining the treasurer from paying for any work.

In the evening he officiated at vespers. Father McGinley has many friends in Plainfield, who welcomed and congratulated him, and wished him long life and a successful career in the high vocation he has chosen. Father Murphy preached a very earnest sermon at the high mass.

Because the Drummer Wouldn't Do, Mary D. Hussey Had Him Arrested.

Dr. Mary D. Hussey of East Orange, who is well known in Plainfield and who is a leader in the woman suffrage movement, feels that she has been insulted by J. V. Crane, a traveling salesman for a New York champagne house, says a New York special.

As a train from Philadelphia reached the Market Street station of the Pennsylvania Railroad in Newark Friday night, Dr. Hussey alighted and demanded the arrest of Crane, who was a passenger in the car in which she had ridden. Crane was taken to Judge Eggers' court. Miss Hussey said that the drummer traveled on the train with his coat, waistcoat and collar off. She requested him to put them on and he refused. Crane said it was exceedingly warm in the car.

"I took off my coat and vest and was about removing my collar when this woman cried 'Shame!'" said Crane.

"'Twas ungentlemanly," interrupted Miss Hussey.

"She grew too authoritative," resumed Crane, "and I simply told her to mind her own business."

"Quite right," said Judge Eggers, and he then dismissed the case.

Dr. Hussey says she proposes to have satisfaction, and is highly indignant at the court.

The chief stationed James Totten at that place yesterday and he succeeded in capturing three, who were Harry Thomas, of Saratoga, Tax Collector S. Trimmer, and John Criss, of Roselle. They were brought to the city and their wheels put in the rookery. Chief Grant acting under instructions from Judge Coddington told the men that unless they would put up security, they would have to remain over night. They, however, left the wheels as security and said they would come back today and settle, but as yet they have not made their appearance.

Conditions As Bad As Possible.

"You talk about the sweat shops and holes in the big cities, but I have seen places in villages in Wisconsin that are just as bad in every particular. In the town of Oshkosh there are more children employed in proportion to the population than in any city I have visited in the east or south, and in many factories the condition is simply awful.

Worked Eleven Hours a Day.

"Then come to the cotton mills where they employ little children and compel them to work eleven hours a day, a custom which has been abolished years ago in every other community. The factory inspection law in that state is a farce.

Children As Beer Bottlers.

At the big bottling works at Milwaukee they have 900 boys and girls, ranging in age from 11 to 19 years. The children are employed at bottling beer, and there is no limit to the amount they are allowed to drink. The language the boys and girls use to each other and the familiarity between the sexes show an abominable state of affairs. The match factories are just as bad, although, of course, the employes are not half drunk all the time. The conditions are worse in the Wisconsin factories than anywhere else I have been."

WHY?

QUESTIONS WOMEN ASK

Here Answered with Good Sound Reason.

(SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.)

Why do people say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Treatment, especially her Vegetable Compound, effects cures beyond the physician's skill?

Because of the fact that a woman best understands a woman's ills. What man ever suffered a single pang like unto woman? Man works from theory only.

Why do tens of thousands of women write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., telling their most secret thoughts?

Because they know that their letters go straight to the hands of a woman, are opened, read, and answered by a woman, who as a woman has made woman's ills a life study, and because she never fails them, and cures cases which the doctor cannot.

The lady who asks that the following letter be published, gives concisely the uniform expression of gratitude contained in thousands of other letters in Mrs. Pinkham's possession.

"For eight years I suffered with neuralgia of the womb, backache, severe pains all through my body, and kidney trouble. None of the doctors did me any good. I took twelve bottles of your Vegetable Compound, and cannot thank you enough for the relief I found.

"I am now well cured of all those pains. I should advise every woman to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound who has any female trouble. I had a friend who was to go under an operation. I advised her first to try the Compound. She did, and is now so much better and stronger she has given up all thoughts of the operation." — MRS. M. WILDE, 2137 Park St., Tioga, Pa.

SEC. MORTOM NOT TO BLAME.

A Case of Destruction of Peach Trees by the Use of London Purple.

Washington, June 17.—A paragraph telegraphed from Warsaw, Ky., to the effect that H. T. Chambers had lost an orchard of peach trees valued at $10,000 by the application of a remedy for the "borer," suggested by the experts of the agricultural department, aroused Secretary Morton's indignation. The dispatch stated that the injury to the trees was due to the advice of the department, and that suit will be brought for damages. As soon as the matter was brought to his attention Secretary Morton ordered copies of the correspondence upon the subject shown him, from which he learned the following:

Killed Four Thousand Trees.

May 7 last H. T. Chambers, a druggist of Warsaw, wrote the department for instructions as to the use of the London purple on peach trees as a preventive of the borer, and said that last fall he used it mixed with linseed oil on four thousand trees. He said the winter was unusually severe, and this spring some of his trees started to put out leaves and then died. He wanted the opinion of the department as to the cause of their death.

Effective When Properly Applied.

The entomologist replied May 13, telling him that London purple was the most valuable remedy known when properly administered. The entomologist said, however, that the application must be made in early summer when the moth begins to emerge. It should be applied in the form of whitewash with lime; the use of oil he said was open to objection, because if freely used it was apt to endanger the life of the young plant, especially if applied liberally to a considerable portion of the trunk of the tree. In that event the death of a young tree would naturally be anticipated.

No Danger From London Purple.

This, the entomologist thought, was the cause of the loss of the trees of Mr. Chambers. London purple, he said, had no injurious effects on the health of the trees, and if injury resulted it was solely from the use of the oil. Secretary Morton believes that his experts are not to blame if peach growers use a remedy about which they knew nothing and fail to ask for information until the damage is done.

HE SAVED HIS LITTLE BOY.

Then Mr. Kerr Went Down in the Presence of His Wife and Family.

Annapolis, Md., June 17.—W. H. Kerr, a wealthy resident of Catonsville, near Baltimore, was drowned yesterday under distressing circumstances. With his family and a party of friends he came to Annapolis on board his steam yacht Watanga. After spending a few hours in the city the party re-embarked, intending to return to Baltimore. Shortly after leaving the wharf Mr. Kerr's 6-year-old son fell overboard. Engineer Benton threw a life preserver to the lad but he was unable to reach it. Seeing his son struggling in the water, Mr. Kerr sprang overboard and swam to his assistance. He succeeded in holding the boy's head above water until Captain Burtis, of Annapolis, arrived in a rowboat and picked up the lad. The yacht had meanwhile drifted away and Mr. Kerr sank out of sight as his boy was rescued. After an hour's search the body of Mr. Kerr was recovered. Mrs. Kerr and her four other children were on the deck of the Watanga and witnessed the sad accident. Mr. Kerr was the son of Prof. Kerr, state geologist of North Carolina.

ANOTHER NEGRO LYNCHED.

He Frightened a White Woman and Paid the Penalty.

Dublin, Ga., June 17.—The body of a negro perforated by pistol balls and dangling from the end of a plough line tied to the limb of a tree, greeted the early travelers at the ford of Pendleton creek yesterday. George Harris was the negro. Thursday night Harris went to the house of George Beasley, a Montgomery county farmer. Beasley was away and the negro knew it. The negro went to the woods nearby, disrobed and tied a sack over his head with holes for his eyes. That was the apparition which confronted Mrs. Beasley as she opened the door of her house a few minutes later. Screaming, she fell in a swoon. The cry frightened the negro, who fled. A posse started after him and bloodhounds were put on his track. He was caught near Pendleton creek and swung to a tree, then he was perforated with bullets.

MURDERED HER DAUGHTER.

Mrs. Todd Was Jealous of Her Divorced Husband.

Hannibal, Mo., June 17.—Mrs. Clarence E. Todd, who a few months ago was divorced from her husband, murdered her daughter, Miss Hester Bethel, in this city Saturday. She used a revolver and shot three times. The cause was jealousy of the divorced husband. Mrs. Todd has been married three times and has been divorced from each of her husbands. The young lady was a daughter of her first husband, Benj. Bethel. She was 22 years old and handsome. Mrs. Todd says the shooting was accidental, but there were eye witnesses who declare to the contrary.

Will Not Be Prosecuted.

New York, June 17.—At a meeting of the executive committee of the American Church Missionary society, held in the church missions here, it was decided not to prosecute criminally Henry A. ALSATIANS PROTEST Oppose France Participating at Kiel.

Declared To Involve the Abandoning of Alsace-Lorraine—Various Meetings with the Same Patriotic Object—Fiery Speeches and a Big Procession—Vast Crowd Present.

Paris, June 17.—The Alsatian societies here met yesterday and protested against France taking part in the opening of the North Sea canal, which, it was declared, involved the abandoning of Alsace-Lorraine to the Germans. Various patriotic and revisionist societies held a meeting with the same object at the Salle Anglada.

Fiery Speeches and Big Parade.

After a number of fiery speeches had been made those present, many thousands in number, marched to the Place de la Concorde and placed a draped wreath on the Strasburg statue. Ex-Deputy Millevoye was at the head of the procession. A vast crowd, estimated at 100,000 persons, was present. Only two arrests were made.

TO RACE ON JULY 10.

A Match Between Zimmerman and Johnson Arranged at Last.

Asbury Park, N. J., June 17.—After weeks of trial the race committee having charge of the bicycle national meet at Asbury Park in July have arranged a match race between the famous professionals John S. Johnson and Arthur Zimmerman. Johnson has accepted the challenge of Zimmerman to race for $5,000 a side, the race to take place at Asbury Park on Wednesday, July 10, one day preceding the national meet events, and on the same day Walter C. Sanger and Charles Murphy will race for a $500 prize, to be given by the Asbury Park Athletic association. Mr. Eck told the committee that the National Racing board had been very severe on Johnson, and the latter did not feel like doing any racing at Asbury Park just to boom the meet. It was on this account that the committee consented to have the Johnson and Zimmerman match one day in advance of the national meet.

NEWSPAPER TRAIN WRECKED.

Bad Accident on the Consolidated at New Haven.

New Haven, Conn., June 17.—The New York Sunday newspaper train was completely wrecked in the railroad yard here. There were four cars on the train and all but the last car were derailed. The engine was turned completely about and thrown over on its side. Matthew C. Higgins, engineer, and Fireman William W. Chappell were injured Conductor Hoagland was in the rear car and escaped injury.

Speed Too Great for the Curve.

It is not known what caused the smash-up, but it is supposed that the train's speed, which is said to have been fifty-five miles an hour, was too great for the very sharp curve at the "crossover" at the point where the accident occurred. The reason the train was going so fast while nearing the depot was that the airbrakes refused to work.

Hand Brakes of No Avail.

Engineer Higgins had whistled for brakes for several hundred feet, but so great was the momentum of the train that the hand brakes were of no avail. When the crossover was reached there was a general breaking of the train. Fireman Chappell was seriously, but not dangerously bruised. Engineer Higgins' left knee cap was shattered and his left leg was broken below the knee. He sustained numerous body bruises. The tracks for three hundred feet or more were torn up, and 200 or 300 railroad laborers were at work making repairs until early this morning.

Money Loss Very Great.

There was great damage, too, to the switching system. The money loss will be very great. There was no delay to traffic, which is very slight on Sunday. It was little short of miraculous that no one was killed in the smashup.

LANDIS LEAVES WASHINGTON.

He Was Private Secretary to the Late Secretary Gresham.

Washington, June 17.—K. M. Landis, private secretary to the late Secretary Gresham, voluntarily ended his official connection with the state department Saturday night. Mr. Landis came to Washington at the earnest solicitation of Mr. Gresham, giving up his law practice to do so. His relations with his chief were of a nature more strictly confidential than is usually the case in such circumstances. Mr. Landis' legal knowledge was of material assistance in many instances, and he handled a number of delicate diplomatic cases. Since Mr. Gresham's death Mr. Landis has formed a partnership with Otto Gresham, son of the late secretary, and they will practice law in Chicago. Saturday afternoon Mr. Landis was given a cordial farewell by his associates in the state department, to whom he had become endeared by his kindness and consideration.

Drowned Trying to Rescue Girls.

Norristown, Pa., June 17.—Edward A. Shevlin, 24 years of age, of Philadelphia, was drowned in the Schuylkill river, near Shawmont, yesterday afternoon, by the upsetting of the boat in which he was rowing with Mattie Gerris and Alice Sullivan. He lost his life in trying to save the girls. The latter were rescued by several men. They were unconscious when taken out of the water.

Elizabeth is enjoying everything that goes with the trolley, even to the accidents.

Both Dunn's and Bradstreet's weekly trade reports of last week give voice to increasing prosperity throughout the country.

Senator George W. Ketcham has instituted a libel suit against the New York World, who charged him with making false returns of his taxes in Newark and New York.

The pen is no longer mightier than the sword, so it seems in the opinion of the late lawyer Legislature. They took good care not to lower the appropriations of the Judiciary, but rather to increase the same, though the appropriations for the newspapers, who are the only medium of information for the masses, was lopped off.

The Society for the Improvement of Speech should try to formulate some plan by which a man can think of a good big chunk of effective repartee at the moment when he stands in most need of it. As it is now, we think of smart things we might have said several hours after the other fellow has reached his home and gone to bed.—Evening World.

The Westfield Standard is to be edited by women for one issue on June 29th. In other places women have successfully edited papers for one day—both in a literary and financial way. But this will be the first test of woman's efforts in Union County journalism, and the Daily Press awaits the out come with some interest, as will all others who feel an interest in the coming woman.

The retail merchants of New Brunswick have decided to close their places of business at seven o'clock every evening, except Saturday, through the week. This is a move that Plainfield merchants could pattern after with credit to themselves, and, The Daily Press is glad to state, a few have already inaugurated this method of transacting business. The life of a counter-jumper is not an easy one at its best, and to give the major portion of the evenings five days in the week to them, would, if uniformly observed, entail no loss to the merchants, and would prove an appreciated favor on the part of the employes.

Everybody thinks, of course, that it is easy to run a newspaper; that is to say, everybody excepting those who have tried it. Out in Indianapolis an old newspaper worker has found time to figure out for the Sentinel how much work is done by an average writer for the daily papers. He figures that he writes a column and a-half every day, except for his Sunday paper, when he writes three columns. This makes twelve columns a week, and allowing two weeks' vacation, he has fifty weeks in a year, in which he turns out 840,000 words. An ordinary book of short stories contains about 20,000 words; therefore his year's labor is equivalent to about twenty books. At this rate of comparison the feat of Marion Crawford in publishing two books per annum does not strike the newspaper man as an incredibly hard task, even allowing for the extra amount of thought involved in story writing. Mr. Howells considers a thousand words a good day's work. Thomas Janvier is satisfied with four hundred words, or a little over a quarter of a column. So that anybody who thinks it easy to write for a newspaper should first write a medium-sized book. That would give a fair idea of the amount of work to be accomplished in a year. As to the quality of the work that's slightly different, but at the same time the stories in the newspapers are often better than a great many that appears in books.—Elizabeth Journal.

Fingers Smashed.

A young man by the name of McMurtry had his fingers smashed in a milling machiue at Scott's Printing Machine Works Saturday afternoon.

A party of wheelmen, members of the New York Produce Exchange, and business acquaintances of Thomas S. Young, of Fanwood, paid this county a visit on Sunday on their wheels. Mr. Young and his son met them at Elizabeth, and going via Springfield and Glenside Park to his house, where a rest and lunch was served. Thence through Plainfield and North Plainfield and back to Westfield, where train was taken for home. The party was enthusiastic over their day's outing, and fine roads and pleasant towns. The scenery at and around Glenside was particularly enjoyed.

AN OPEN AIR CAN-CAN.

Rutgers Students Have a Gay Time at Their Cremation.

New Brunswick, June 16. — The sophomore class of Rutgers College cremated analytics with great pomp and enthusiasm Friday night. Great bonfires were built about the field, throwing a weird and uncertain light upon the faces of the 1,000 or more people in the grand stand. The students, in grotesque costumes of gnomes and devils and ill-shaped beasts, railed with mock eloquence as the funeral pyre was built. A stuffed figure, with face made up to represent a professor who has made the tasks of the students particularly hard, was finally thrown into the fire and then there was a song of joy, and a motley mixture of queer masqueraders danced and sang with more or less harmony and unison.

Finally the premier dancers were announced. They were down on the programme as three well-known sophomores. The calcium light man put all the strength of his glare on the dancing figures. Shapely limbs in flesh-colored tights shot skyward with surprising agility and grace. The dancers were not students at all, but women, and here was an open air can-can that had all the wild abandon of sensuous Oriental dances. Many folks were shocked and a number left. The three dancers, it was ascertained, were professionals from a New York theater. There was considerable indignation among the women spectators.

INS AND OUTS.

The members of the Y. M. C. A. baseball team practice on the Crescent Oval Tuesdays and Thursdays at six o'clock p. m.

In a game of baseball between the Rutgers and the West Ends of Somerville played at New Brunswick Saturday, Captain Reed of the Rutgers collided with a West End player and fractured a leg.

The original members of the old Crescent ball team are making arrangements to play with the Y. M. C. A. team on the Crescent Oval, July 6th. This will be one of the greatest games of the season, and will carry the cranks back to the time when the Plainfield ball tossers were the leaders in Jersey.

The Arlington Athletic Club and the West Ends, both of this city, played a game of base ball Saturday afternoon on the cricket grounds. At the end of seven innings the score stood 29 to 8 in favor of the Arlingtons. The Arlingtons played a very fine fielding game, besides hitting the ball hard and often. The pitching of Sutphen for the Arlingtons was very good, only seven hits being made off his delivery. The following is the score by innings:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	R.	BH.	E.
Arlington A. C.	3	5	7	2	9	3	0	29	29	3
West Ends	2	0	0	1	3	2	0	8	7	8

Earned runs—Arlington A.C., 10; West Ends, 2; two-base hits—Owens, (Arlington), Lederer, Mumford; base on balls—By Sutphen, 3; by Cose, 1; McComas, 2; struck out—by Sutphen, 6; McComas, 3; double play—Sprowl to Firstbrook, to Owens. Umpire—Ball.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destored forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Edward White and Robert Eick rode their wheels to Long Branch yesterday.

Robert Barnes, of West Front street, rode to Staten Island on his wheel Saturday. He returned this morning.

E. T. Hand did not qualify at the races held on Manhattan track Saturday, and in consequence did not ride in any of the events.

A bicycle racer named Flack was thrown from his wheel while racing at Manhattan, Saturday, and fatally injured. He died a half hour afterward.

While Harry Vail of Duer street was returning home on his wheel last evening the rear tire burst. It was a new tire which he had just purchased on Saturday.

Bachelor Billy Campbell is the latest bicycle enthusiast. He learned to master the critter on the driveway of his residence on Rockview avenue, and will soon join the riders on the streets.

David Krymer and a friend rode their wheels to New Brunswick on Saturday and when they were about ready to return Mr. Krymer was taken ill, and was obliged to remain over night. He returned to his home today.

An adjourned meeting of the members of the Crescent Wheelmen will be held at the Club House Wednesday evening. Final arrangements for a club house will be made, and the Fourth of July celebration committee will report.

The teachers in the public schools at College Point, L. I., especially those who ride bicycles, are aroused over an order issued by the Board of Education forbidding them to ride their bicycles to school. The board declares that the minds of the teachers are concentrated more upon their wheels than upon their work at school. They further declare that wheeling tends to create immorality.

The bicycle run given by the Eagle Wheelmen of Newark yesterday to Newburg was a success, though they did not reach their objective point. About sixty started, among whom were Capt. Israel Jones and Charles Vanderveer of the Victor Wheelmen. The roads were so dusty and the hills so steep that they only reached Middletown. They returned by cars to Newark. Messrs. Jones and Vanderveer returned this morning and the others last night.

Evolution in bicycle saddle construction has developed from the unwieldy, cumbersome, coiled spring article, weighing from five to ten pounds, of a few seasons ago, to a neat pattern of saddle devoid of springs, weighing less than a pound, which, with the improved methods of using a wheel now in vogue, riding as much on the pedals as on the seat, is much more comfortable than the older styles. The surplus energy of the cyclist of today is, therefore, not devoted to carrying about a number of pounds of surplus steel, which is of no earthly use to him or her except as old iron.

As long as the rider of a bicycle is taught to depend upon the brake as a safety appliance to that machine, just so long will that rider be lacking the air of confidence and superiority of mind over matters which characterizes the graceful cyclist. Nothing is so conducive to accident as hesitancy and lack of control while awheel, and the surest way to rid one's self of those undesirable attributes is to learn to control the bicycle solely by the power of limb. Brakes are an additional weight, wear the sensitive surface of the tire when applied, making it more susceptible to puncture, and, being agents of destruction when thus considered, are items of additional expense to the user.

A great bicycle parade was held in Brooklyn Saturday, 12,000 wheelmen participating. The Good Roads Association of Brooklyn had charge of the affair, assisted by the New York State division of the League of American Wheelmen. The clubs that entered for the ride represented 18,000 wheelmen in the State. The run was to Manhattan Beach, where the new cycle race track was dedicated by contests for prizes. The ride was on the new cycle path, just completed, extending from Prospect Park to the Atlantic ocean. The prettiest feature of the run was the large number of women in line. Several hundred paraded. The clubs carried their colors and had their wheels decorated with them and with American flags. The procession was a dazzling display of bright color.

—The general Fourth of July committee will meet this evening and hear the reports from the various sub-committees.

There is but one unoccupied house in Scotch Plains.

D. J. Ackerman Coles has added to the decorations of his lawn, on Mountain avenue, a fine specimen of a stag from the foundry of Jordan L. Mott at Mott Haven.

YOUR SCALP! During the heats of summer does it become irritated and invite an occasional friendly scratch? To wash it is well, but not too often, lest your hair become "brash" and stiff. But treat it twice or thrice a week with our Petroleum Hair Tonic—a little rubbed in with your finger ends, and you will find the feeling of comfort and coolness truly delightful. Positively nothing equals it as a balm for the woes of your scalp. Sprinkler bottles 50c. Only at

IN HONOR OF AN AMERICAN.

She Is to Receive the Salutations of Many Distinguished People.

Preparations are being made for the celebration in November next of the eightieth birthday of the veteran champion of woman suffrage, Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton.

The place chosen for it is Carnegie Music Hall, and the date of it is the 12th of the month. Notable men and women from all parts of the country will come here to take part in it, and the central figure on the platform will be the heroine of the occasion.

There will be eloquence and music, flowers and flags and trophies of her life. It will be the crowning incident in the honored woman's career. She herself is aware of the preparations for the day, which she looks forward too with pleasure, wholly free from vanity. It is over half a century since Mrs. Stanton first gave her mind to the cause then known as "Woman's Rights," which afterward developed into the movement that has given full suffrage to her sex in two States, and partial suffrage in a large number of States.

It was in 1848 that the first formal claim for suffrage was made at a meeting held in her house at Seneca Falls, N. Y.; and since that time, until recently, she has been perpetually active in the promotion of the cause, as a speaker, canvasser, writer and organizer.

Mrs. Stanton is now a permanent resident of New York City. She retains the appearance which became familiar to the public long ago. Her spirits are always remarkably lively, and her mind is in the best working order, though she is a sufferer from rheumatism and unable to move about without assistance. She has a charming little home in an apartment house where she enjoys the companionship of her sons and daughters.

She is especially gratified with the reception that has been given to those parts of her "Woman's Bible" which have been published though it has not met with the approval of the theologians, Biblical critics or Hebrew scholars.

As the pioneer of the new idea of woman's rights, Mrs. Stanton was ahead of her life long friend, Miss Susan B. Anthony, though she cannot, in these days, join Miss Anthony in her campaigns.

Consequences of a Frog's Error.

Jess, the big elephant belonging to Sells & Rentfrow's circus, was slumbering quietly on the ground in the menagerie tent at Salt Lake, when a frog mistaking the nozzle of her trunk for a hole in the ground, jumped into it. Nothing so terrorizes an elephant as the presence of a live insect or animal in its trunk, and the big brute broke loose and went on a rampage.

The keepers were eating their lunch at the time and the menagerie tent was entirely deserted. A great crash was heard and the men rushed back just in time to see Jess go through the side of the tent and amble off toward the business center of the city. A scene of wreckage was presented within the tent. The big brute had broken her chain, apparently, and amused herself by tossing the cages about before leaving. Four cages were thrown over on their sides as though they were so many toys, and then the elephant walked right through the side of the tent. The cages were those containing the badgers, hedgehogs, monkeys and kangaroos, but fortunately none of the animals were injured and very little damage was done to the wagons.

Fifteen mounted men were sent in pursuit of the elephant. Jess came straight down town and astonished the few pedestrians on the street by promenading up and down Main street, occasionally striking the curb with her trunk and uttering cries of distress.

Mr. Sells was with the men who overtook her, and soon discovered the cause of her discomfort. By compressing the trunk the frog was forced down, and finally blown out by the elephant. She then became docile and was taken back to the tent.—Denver Republican.

A TRADES SCHOOL.

AN EPISCOPAL CHURCH DOES PRACTICAL WORK FOR BOYS.

Youths of St. George's College Instructed in Various Pursuits by Competent Masters. Carpenters, Printers, Plumbers and Telegraphers Display Their Skill.

The trade school of St. George's Protestant Episcopal parish, New York, is the successful evolution of an idea to keep youngsters out of mischief at night. It occurred to the rector of the church and his assistants about five years ago that it would be a good plan to arrange some form of entertainment that would attract a certain class of boys in the parish off the streets evenings. Word went forth that boys would be welcomed to the Memorial Building from seven to nine o'clock, and there in the basement the clergymen and others, who volunteered their services, gathered them together and told them stories, and read to them, and diverted them in other ways, both amusing and instructive.

From this arose the Boys' Club of St. George's. The lads took readily enough to the amusement offered, and in their enthusiasm often tried to help matters along by getting up diversions on their own account, and it was not unusual for the person reading or story telling to be interrupted by the uproar of impromptu wrestling matches suddenly entered upon by the more spirited lads.

Indeed, the Rev. Theodore Sedgwick, recently, referring to the early days of the club, said he never put a picture on the walls but somehow or other it was smashed before the end of a week, while the greatest pleasure of the boys seemed to be to pull down the chandelier so the gas would have to be turned off, the darkness giving a chance for rough and tumble sport. But the growing good influences of the club were apparent despite these frolics, and some of the wealthy men of the parish decided to enlarge its field of usefulness.

Only carpentry and drawing were attempted at first, but the plan met with success from the outset, and soon the other floors were taken, and plumbing, printing and telegraphy were added, and then manual training for the little chaps too small to try the trades, that their hands might be trained to use the tools when the time came to essay the higher branches.

Now two hundred and fifty boys work six nights a week in the school and as many more regret that lack of room deprives them of the benefits of the instruction given there. Many of the pupils are employed during the day, but gladly work at the trade school benches at night, that they may soon be able to earn an artisan's wages.

The instruction that they receive is of the best. The directors of all the classes are experts in their respective lines, and are paid to teach the boys. The carpentry class, which bends over the benches on the ground floor, is in charge of Mr. Miller, a cabinet maker who is in business for himself, and tables and desks and clothes horses and hatracks and various other products prove that his instruction has fallen on fertile minds. Mr. Tucker, a master plumber, imparts the secrets of his craft to aspirants who see visions of big fortunes in the near future, and the room in which they work is bright with joints and coils and connections, all done by the boys, and, as Mr. Tucker says, as well as any man could do them.

Eight cases of type, flanked by a hand press and "proving galley," give aspiring young printers a chance to see themselves in print, and Mr. Nilson, foreman of a big job office, gives the boys, as teacher, the benefit of his experience.

The printers are already a means of money saving to the parish. They do all the church printing, and every month get out St. George's Industrial Herald, a publication devoted to the interests of the school.

E. Wallace Kerr has the class in telegraphy, and he not only teaches them how to send and receive, but makes them run lines, make repairs, store the battery and take entire charge of all the electrical apparatus.

A. A. Hammerschlag, an electrical contractor, has charge of the drawing class, while the manual training school is under the direction of Mr. McNeil.

The Business Man and the Public.

The business man who knows the value of a steady customer does not hesitate to exhaust every means to obtain such a patron. The most potent force in bringing him is the newspaper. The successful man has a knack of making people remember where he is to be found when they happen to want something that he sells. Advertising of some kind is absolutely necessary to success. Every enterprising business man will tell you that simple truth. And the most effective is the announcement in the daily newspaper.

Encouraging Him.

A pupil whispered in the next boy's ear: "Our teacher is a regular duffer."

The master, who had just put a question to the whole class, thought the pupil was framing a reply, and said to him:

"Come, my lad, speak up, perhaps you are right."

GAIL HAMILTON, TEACHER.

One of Her Scholars Writes of Her Schoolroom Work.

Though Gail Hamilton is best known as a writer, and especially as a newspaper writer, her most meritorious work was probably done while she was a school teacher. Girls were her especial admirers, and one of her pupils pays the following glowing tribute to the brainy woman in the Chicago Tribune:

"She then signed herself simply Mary Abby Dodge. Her pupils called her Miss Dodge, and recognized in her a rarely gifted instructor. Her baptismal name was Mary Abigail, but, having early discarded the 'gail' in Abigail, she later adopted it in connection with her native place, Hamilton, as the pseudonym by which she has been so long known. In ordinary conversation she was piquant and forceful, and she taught with 'some of Miss Dodge's vim,' as they called the ineffable something which distinguished her mode of teaching. She herself might have called it 'soul,' as she one day roused a pupil, listless for the nonce, with 'Can't you give us a little of that soul of yours, Miss Blank?' She believed that 'fun and frolic do not lower the life they immeasurably lighten.' She was reverent, deeply so, where reverence was due, but she could aim little arrows of wit, betimes, so as to pierce the dignity of dullness and leave it to collapse at leisure. She dressed plainly, chiefly in blues, grays and browns, without taste, probably, for dress was an incident with her.

"It was whispered that she had the largest salary ever paid to a woman for teaching, and that she had already lifted a mortgage for her father. It may have been mere schoolroom romancing, but it was believed by many who worshiped her afar off, as also the floating idea that she had refused innumerable offers of marriage from teachers, doctors, lawyers and priests. It may have been in the moral science Monday class, when, something suggesting, she turned abruptly with, 'If you are any of you going to be robbers—mind, I am not urging you to robbery; but if you should some day set out to be robbers, be highway robbers!' and then followed briefly pros and cons, esthetics and morals, lights on truth and hypocrisy that illumined that day and has sent beams across the long bridge of years till now.

"'She talks faster than any one I ever knew,' was the general verdict. She was exquisitely facile and apt in quoting from here, there and everywhere. It was a treat to have one of her own favorite authors given into your hands for reference. On blank pages, spaces and margins were copied extracts galore, in the clear, even, open handwriting, which only beautified the text. Perhaps the new woman was foreshadowed when she said: 'It is not my fault that I was born a woman. It might have been different had I been consulted in the matter,' but it only seems as if she were one who had a mind of her own and dared to speak it marvelously well if occasion arose. Fascinated listeners surrounded her to challenge her quick repartee, and they 'knew their place.'

"When the girl graduates, robed in white, wearing and bearing flowers, were huddled together, ready to form in procession for the final exercises, she was there to encourage and praise and sympathize. Her final bracing word was: 'And now, girls, just imagine you are arrayed for your wedding, that you are to marry the world; that's the way I did.'"

The Trinidad Lake of Pitch.

The pitch is quarried by excavating areas from a few feet to many feet deep and wide. As soon as the work ceases the cavity begins to close, with a rapidity depending on the location. Near the place of supply an excavation four feet deep and eight feet square, for instance, would fill in less than two days. Were it made where the asphalt was of average hardness, it would became entirely obliterated in five or six days, though it would substantially fill up in less time. Outside the lake the refilling is much less rapid. This speedy closure of artificial cavities has led to the supposition that the supply of asphalt is inexhaustible, the substance being produced or generated as fast as removed.

The circumstance arises from the plastic nature of the ordinary bitumen, which invariably yields to pressure, until a new equilibrium is established; thus, where excavations have been opened in the solid asphalt, the pressure of the sides forces up the bottom and the cavity gradually closes. It will be manifest that this property of susceptibility to pressure is sufficient to account for the appearance of the solid and semi-solid pitch at the surface. The greater the depth, and consequent pressure of the superincumbent strata, the greater will be the force propelling the material upward.

This lake appears to be simply a great mass of pitch, which has been expressed from sandstone or shale and collected in a basinlike depression of the strata. The form of the surface has been preeminently favorable for a large accumulation, and the sources have been very rich. Taking into consideration the presumed amount of the contents of the cavity, the forces concerned in the elevation of all this matter to the position it occupies must have been considerable. —Chambers's Journal.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe thinks that one of the encouraging signs in women's advancement during the past twenty-five years is the organization of the women. "Before the war they had no organization," she says. "The war seemed somehow to bring them together. This may have been due largely to the fact that it called out some to help the wounded and the sick in hospitals. At any rate, since that time the organization of women has been growing stronger. I am a great believer in women's clubs; when properly conducted they do a vast amount of good."

BY ANNA KATHERINE GREEN.

[COPYRIGHT, 1895.]

My first instinct was to open the door, call out to the person who was gliding off, and ask what had happened. But natural timidity restrained me, and not till the step had quite disappeared did I venture to open the door and give one quick look down the tunnel-like hall.

Darkness and darkness only met my eyes, and halting between the fear of what that darkness inclosed and the phantoms of dread and horror with which my room was peopled, I stood halting on the threshold, when a sound of distant sobbing reached my ear, sounding so pitifully in the dismal silence that, forgetting my own fears, forgetting the cause I had to dread that stretch of shut-up rooms before me, I dashed lightly into the darkness and sped, without thought or reason, in the direction from which these tokens of grief had seemed to come.

But this strange house is anything but simple in its construction, and before I had gone many steps I realized that I had left the main hall and was lost in another and a smaller one, from which I did not know how to emerge in the profound darkness. The sobs had ceased, so I had nothing to guide me, and a prey once more to the horrors of my situation, I turned and fled back as fast as a complete ignorance of my whereabouts allowed. With one hand on the wall at my side, I hastened on till I came to a turn, and taking it for the one I had inadvertently made a few minutes before, I whirled to the right and groped on, breathless and panting, till I came to an open door.

As this was located just where I had expected to find my own, I rushed in and shut it behind me; and still groping, found the bed, which seemed a long way from the door (longer than it had when I sought it before), and was in the act of feeling for the pillow, when my hand came in contact with something so dreadful, so blood-curdling and unexpected, that my lips opened in a horrified shriek, which terror nevertheless stifled in my throat.

I had touched the clay-cold face of a corpse.

III.

How I found my way out of that room and how I at last stumbled into my own, is of small importance. What I should tell is that just as I crossed my darkened threshold I caught, far down the hall, a passing glimpse of Lucetta carrying a lighted candle in her hand. After that short view I remember nothing. Yet I must have undressed myself and gone to bed, for when I woke in the morning I was between the sheets and the bed was pushed back in its place against the wall.

AFTER THAT SHORT VIEW I REMEMBER NOTHING.

It was a maid who woke me. I had seen this woman before, and had rather liked her appearance, which was that of a strong and kindly woman. She was building the fire when I opened my eyes, and the cheerful glow produced quite a strange effect upon me. The visions of the night seemed to recede, and for a moment I believed myself to have been merely the victim of a horrible nightmare. Her face, as she turned towards me, added to this feeling, it was so frank and cheerful.

"Ah, Miss Grant," she cried, "Miss Knollys sends her love and hopes you have passed a pleasant night."

I was dumfounded. Either her assurance was great, or my imagination had indeed played me a fearful trick. Determined to settle the matter at once I inquired as lightly as I could what had happened in the night to keep the family up. To which she responded that Miss Lucetta had been ill (a palpable falsehood, if I had really seen her passing down the hall with a lighted candle in her hand), adding, as I showed surprise in my manner, "Lucetta is often ill. Many is the night I have to sit up with her."

"But I saw her," I began, and stopped. Had I in reality seen her, or had I been laboring under an hallucination which brought her image up before me, and if her image had been an hallucination, why not that other dreadful thing which had made the night a horror to me? Changing my assertion then into a question, I asked if her young mistress was better; to which the woman replied that happily she was, and having finished her work at the hearth, she rose and with an amiable air, inquired if she could do anything for me.

I told her I wanted more light, and when she moved to arrange the curtains, I remarked on the size of the house and asked how many there were in the family

She mentioned the three young people, a man servant and herself, and then added: "There are not many of us, but enough to make use of the house and to keep most of the rooms stirred up.

"And was there no one else in the house last night?" I pursued.

She turned sharply, looked at me with displeasure, and quickly replied: "Why, you were here, were you not?"

I laughed, but did not desist. "And no one else?"

She seemed embarrassed at my persistence, but answered emphatically enough: "No, no one else." At which I made up my mind that I would try some time through the day to see all the persons she had mentioned, and if I found them all well, to regard my adventure as no more than an unusually vivid nightmare—as possibly it was.

The woman herself at this moment unconsciously emphasized my decision. "If I might be so curious," said she, "I would like to ask why you look so pale this morning. Does a wakeful night always affect you in this way?"

"No," said I, "not when I am not frightened."

"And you were frightened?"

"Very much so."

"That is too bad; what could have done it? Miss Lucetta's sickness?"

"I thought," said I, rising on my elbow, so as to look her squarely in the face, "that some one came to my door at midnight and locked it softly on the outside."

"Dreams, dreams!" ejaculated the woman.

"That later, two hours after, perhaps, the same person came back and as softly unlocked it again."

"Mere fancy, child, mere fancy."

"And do you mean to say," I cried, starting up, "that no one did do that?"

"I do certainly mean to say that you dreamed all this or that your imagination deceived you. We had no time to come to your door last night."

"I will ask Miss Knollys," I cried. "I cannot believe I dreamed that."

But here the woman assumed a very serious air.

"I would not disturb Miss Knollys if I were you. She has her troubles and is very anxious about her sister and not well herself besides. It would be cruel to bother her with silly fancies just now."

It was not a silly fancy, for I knew I had experienced that part of my night's adventure if no more, but I was not untouched by the woman's appeal, so I let a little laugh escape me, and charmed at the beam of sunshine which at that moment poured into the room, I answered in quite a different tone of voice:

"Well it is morning now and matters look very different by daylight. Perhaps no one did come to my door. At all events I will try to think so."

Before I was quite dressed Miss Knollys came for me. She looked tired, but not so careworn as I expected; indeed there seemed to be a slight lifting of the shadow that had been on the brow the day before. Seeing it, I became puzzled again and resolving to ignore the night entirely, I greeted her pleasantly and scarcely changed color when she said:

"Matilda tells me you did not sleep well in spite of my assurances. Is that so, Miss Grant?"

"It is so and it isn't so," I laughed; "I slept some and I was awake some, but that was to be expected in a strange house. But I feel very well this morning, better than Lucetta, I fear. I hear that she was quite ill in the night."

"Lucetta has heart complaint," answered Miss Knollys, with a curious tone of decision in her voice. "But you will find her sitting in her usual place at table this morning."

And I did.

I had determined on rising to cut my visit short and leave the house before the day was out. But as the hours went by I found this becoming more and more difficult. The girls showed me so much kindness, and the brother such a new interest, that common gratitude kept me from showing the extent of my feelings by a sudden departure. Besides those feelings had become much modified by the sunny aspect of the day and by a long drive which Lucetta had given me in the early forenoon. The man whom they called Big Bob had brought round the horse, and thus having seen all the members of the family alive and well, I felt sure that the horror of the night had indeed been but a dream and that it would be both unwise and ridiculous to dwell any longer on what a perfectly sane mind would dismiss at once.

Yet when the shadows began to lengthen and I found that no change had been made in my apartment, and that I was likely to sleep again in that remote room, I felt a decided return of yesterday's apprehension.

Miss Knollys, whose face had grown graver as the evening advanced, showed that she appreciated my secret dread, and, with a glance at her sister, put her arm round me as she led me down the hall, saying that on the morrow she would be able to make different arrangements, if I would only excuse her for this one more night.

I returned her embrace and answered as suitably as my fears would allow; and making a great effort over myself, did succeed in falling asleep much more quickly after her departure than I had anticipated.

But I was not to rest. The horrors of my short stay in this house were not yet over, and sometime in the night, I never knew at what hour, I was again awakened by the sound of a gliding step, a hand on the lock, and the turning of the key, which for the second time made me a prisoner.

So all that I had suffered the night before had not been a dream! Something strange, something which they feared to have me witness, was going on in this house of seemingly innocent young people. What could it be, and what connection would the events of this night have with those of the one before?

Listening intently, I heard first the trampling of several feet down the corridor, then a prolonged silence, and then a second trampling, measured in its tone, as when several men carry a heavy burden. Instantly I seemed to see again that outstretched form and clay-cold face I had touched the previous night, and with my hair rising on my forehead, I hearkened to the diminishing sounds till they finally ceased in what seemed to me to be the direction of the staircase.

Horrified beyond all precedent, and feeling myself involved in the perpetration of some unknown crime, I sank back on the edge of the bed, asking myself whether I should light my little stump of candle or no. But just then a stir somewhere below me drew my attention to the window, and abandoning all thought of a light, I sprang to the curtains and drew them, only to find my view shut out by two blank shutters. Desperate now, and convinced more and more that there was something to be seen from this window, I pulled at the fastenings with my whole strength, and finally succeeded in unclosing one of the shutters, which fell slowly back. Immediately a wide scene opened before me of stark black trees and white wastes of new fallen snow. Nothing else, strain my eyes as I would, till suddenly warned by a slight sound from the corner of the house, I leaned out as far as I dared, when I saw the moving shadows of four people (only the shadows, the people themselves were not visible) staggering under a load, the size and shape of which were sharply delineated on the snow. The burden was a coffin and the bearers—you can understand my terror when I say this—were not all men. Two had skirts on, and if I was not greatly mistaken in the slight and delicate form of the hindermost, it was Miss Knollys herself who thus helped to carry an unknown body to its probable burial.

Overwhelmed by this confirmation of my strange experiences of the night before, and yet enough mistess of myself to wish to gain all the information I could on this mysterious subject, I watched the shadows as they wound their dreary way into the leafless forest, and never moved from my station till they had all disappeared in the obscurity. Then I sank back into the room winding the heavy curtains about me to keep out the deathly chill both of my thoughts and outside air, waiting and watching for their return. It came in about an hour. First the delicate form of Miss Knollys appeared, then the heavier one of the maid who had visited my room, and then those of two men, one very large and one slighter, in other words, Big Bob and young Mr. Knollys. Lucetta evidently had not accompanied them. They came back more quickly than they went, for they had left their burden behind them. Before they entered the house I was already again in bed, and not ten minutes after the front door had closed I heard the sly step again at my door and that light turning of the lock which proved that the business of the night was over.

SILK FROM WOOD.

THE SILK WORM'S WORK ACCOMPLISHED BY CHEMICAL PROCESS.

The New Material Costs Less Than Natural Silk and Is Said to Be Beautiful. It is Already Worn in Europe and Patents Are Pending in Washington.

A process has been discovered by which a material closely resembling silk may be manufactured from wood. Even now women are walking about the streets of European cities in the most elaborate gowns of silk in the manufacture of which the worm had no part. In fact, the silkworm has lost its occupation.

The palm for this valuable discovery in chemical science must go to Switzerland, for a native of Zurich, Dr. Lehner by name, is the inventor of the process.

Some years ago he began to make observations on the habits and physical characteristics of the silkworm and became deeply interested in the subject. He discovered the chemical action which took place in the worm in producing its cocoon, and at odd times sought to counterfeit the work of nature. So convinced did he become of the feasibility of his ideas that he soon abandoned all other work and devoted his time to this single study, in which he has achieved a signal triumph.

In the process of manufacturing the new fabric the principal ingre lients used are sprucewood pulp, cotton or jute waste, etc., combined with a large quantity of alcohol. The use of the substantial or solid materials mentioned creates a market for what was hitherto of no use whatever, being burned in factory furnaces to get it out of the way.

Spruce sawdust now has a market value, for this, as well as the other materials, are digested by a chemical process in which alcohol plays an important part. The material thus digested is so much like the cocoon spun by the silkworm that when the two are placed side by side in a finished state it takes an expert to determine which is which.

The artificial material at one state is in a liquid state, and of a density about equal to the ordinary syrup of commerce. When in this state a machine of Dr. Lehner's invention, which may be called an artificial silkworm, comes into play. This machine, which is very simple in construction, requiring so little attention that it can be kept at work with about as much labor as is devoted to a twenty-four hour clock, performs exactly the same mechanical work that a silkworm does. It draws from the liquid a continuous unbroken thread of even diameter and unlimited length. As this thread is spun another portion of the machine takes it up and twists it into any desired thickness of yarn with perfect regularity.

Thus the fabric can be made of any desired weight or thickness, so that it will be seasonable at all times.

This artificial silk has been spun in Bradford, England, and worked up into a large variety of fabrics. In the dyeing, weaving and finishing of these no special treatment has been found necessary. It has been dyed in all imaginable shades and colors, and owing to the peculiar qualities of the material it takes a dye more readily and gives a more brilliant effect than the natural article. In texture it is the equal of the best of Chinese and Italian silks, being soft and silken to the touch. It is expected that it will be used largely in combination with natural silk and cotton for producing brocaded effects. These latter have been so expensive lately as to be out of reach of all but the fattest purses. The new invention will greatly reduce the cost.

It would seem that this new process would give an immense impetus to the manufacture of textile fabrics all over the world, and it probably will, but Dr. Lehner also differs from the average inventor in that he combines financial cunning with his remarkable genius, so that every yard of this new material made will put so many pennies into his pocket.

Patents on the process have been obtained in most of the European countries, and an application for one in the United States is now on file at Washington, as well as in the patent office of the Canadian Government. A company with a capital stock of $1,500,000 is about to be formed in Montreal to manufacture the material. There has already been formed in England a company having a capital stock of $540,000, the inventor receiving $160,000 in cash and $180,000 in full paid shares, the remaining $200,000 being used as a working capital.

It was originally intended to manufacture the article in England, but when the demonstrating plant was established at Bradford it was found that there was a prohibitive tariff on alcohol used for manufacturing purposes. For that reason the plant was located at Glattburg, near Zurich, Germany, where there is no tax on alcohol used in manufactures. From this place the raw material is sent to England for manufacture.

So here's to the nation's gladness, fer the melon's on the way!

That good old striped melon, with a heart o' drippin' sweet,
Makes a feast that brings the country jest a-whoopin' at its feet,
So let the glorious tidings ring out night an' day,

MINERAL AND METAL PRODUCTION.

The Output Well Sustained Under Most Adverse Conditions.

The statistics of the mineral and metal production of the United States in 1894, compared with the output in 1893, are published in the Engineering and Mining Journal. The total value of the mineral and metal production was in 1893, $615,846,806; 1894, $553,272,902; showing a decline of no less than $62,573,904, or 9 per cent. This great falling off was, however, due far more to lower prices than to lessened quantity of the product. Thus the value of our coal production declined last year $13,783,828, or only 7 per cent., while in quantity it fell off only 6,220,970 short tons, or 3 1-2 per cent. This comparatively small decline in the volume of coal produced is substantially a measure of the whole mineral output of the country.

The copper output increased 8 per cent., from 327,255,788 pounds in 1893 to 353,504,314 pounds in 1894, though in value it declined no less than $1,639,508, or 5 1-2 per cent.

The production of gold increased from $35,955,000 in 1893 to $39,761,204 in 1894, but the commercial value of the silver produced declined from $47,311,450 in 1893 to $31,403,531 in 1894, a fall of $15,907,929, or 31 per cent. This was partially due to a reduced production from 60,500,000 ounces in 1893 to 49,846,875 ounces in 1894, but the price also declined from 78.2 cents an ounce in 1893 to 63 cents in 1894.

Pig iron showed a heavy decline in quantity from 7,047,384 long tons in 1893 to 6,657,388 tons in 1894, but the value declined much more than the quantity, or from $93,888,309 in 1893 to $71,966,364 in 1894, a falling off in values of 23 1-2 cent., and in quantity of only 5 1-2 per cent. The value of spelter declined $1,000,000, though the quantity produced fell off only 2,250 tons.

On the whole the mineral industries of the United States have made a highly satisfactory record in 1894 in the quantity produced under such an enormous shrinkage in values. With prices lower than ever before thought possible, and in the majority of cases lower than similar articles are produced anywhere else in the world, the output has declined very little. The low prices, no doubt, maintained a large consumption, and now, with reviving prosperity and prices, the producers will reap the harvest for which they planted in the hard times.

A PRISONER'S LADDER.

Used for Climbing Out and Back When He Visited His Sweetheart.

Warden Patten, of the Indiana prison, south, at Jeffersonville, has now on exhibition one of the most remarkable contrivances of a prisoner that ever came into his collection. It is a ladder made of thousands of small pieces of twine, thread, cords and rope, such as a convict would secretly collect through years of effort. With the rope Thomas Shepherd used to climb a thirty-foot wall and get out of the penitentiary night after night to visit an old sweetheart. He never attempted to escape, and when his ladder was found one night he returned before his absence had been discovered, rang the bell at the front gate and surrendered himself. On his arm he carried a rubber coat, which had been used to conceal his striped shirt. He wore moccasins over his shoes.

Shepherd told a straightforward story, so far as it went. He had made the ladder, he said, in order that he might visit a woman outside the prison. He had gone to her house only four times, he said. Last Sunday night when he returned he found his ladder gone from the wall and at once he decided to give himself up. He would not tell the woman's name, but the prison officials think they have discovered her identity. She went from her home in Sullivan county, Ind., some years ago to live in Jeffersonville, near her convict lover.

Shepherd said that he wove his ladder at night, and that it took him months to finish it. It contained threads, strings, and bits of cord of every size, length and color. They were woven, knotted and twisted skillfully.

Shepherd was sent to prison to serve a life sentence in 1875. A new trial was secured two years later, and he was recommitted on the same sentence on April 19, 1878. He has continually petitioned for executive clemency, and two years ago his sentence was commuted to twenty years. He will be released, consequently, on April 18, 1898. He was a country school teacher. One night at an apple paring he had a quarrel with a man named Macey Engle over a girl. Engle had Shepherd arrested, and one night, before the case was tried, Engle was assassinated. Shepherd was convicted purely on circumstantial evidence, and has always maintained his innocence.—Vincennes Sun.

BOTH PAPERS WERE USEFUL.

The Fortunate Result of a Tennessee Justice Mixing His Documents.

Bill Wright was a justice of the peace, and also an absent-minded man, whose wife was as able an orator as Xantippe.

Bill used to serve all his processes himself, and to save time would sign the marriage certificates in blank and deliver a number to the parson.

One day Bill had a process to serve away up in the mountains on a semi-barbarous recluse, who was sued for damages for some misdeeds, and Bill thought he would deliver a few of the certificates to the parson.

So sticking both packages of papers in the same pocket he mounted his horse and rode off.

Reaching the minister's, he stopped and chatted awhile, and, after delivering his papers, he started off again and took the road to the mountains.

The parson had a wedding that day, one of the parties being a notorious horse thief from an adjoining county. When the ceremony was over the parson selected a certificate from the bundle and unrolled it sufficiently to sign his name. On handing it to the man the latter opened it, and his eye grew wild when he read instead of a marriage certificate a warrant of arrest, signed by both the justice of the peace and the parson. He feared some trap, so surrendered himself to custody.

When the justice reached the mountain side he took out the paper to read it and immediately saw its nature, but maintaining his self-possession, he recited the form of summons, which he fortunately remembered.

He then returned and found the horse thief in jail, and went and saw the parson, remarking, with his own matrimonial felicity in mind, that both papers had unintentionally served the ends of justice.—University Courier.

The Greatest Gunpowder Explosion.

The greatest explosion of gunpowder the world has ever known took place at the Du Ponts works on the 7th of October, 1890. With their usual cautious policy the Du Ponts have never stated just how great a quantity of powder exploded at this time, but it is certain that three magazines and three mills in the upper yard were blown up, one after another, and a safe estimate will put the quantity of powder exploded at 150 tons. In this explosion thirteen men and one woman were instantly killed, while twenty-two men and nine women were injured, some fatally.

The explosion occurred a little after 3 o'clock in the afternoon. It began in the magazine for hexagonal powder, the kind used in large guns and the most dangerous, being made not in grains, but in reddish, six-sided cakes, about an inch and a half in diameter and an inch thick, with a small hole in the center. These cakes look like nothing so much as the nut on a wagon wheel. At the time of the explosion cakes of powder were being packed into large wooden boxes lined with tin, each box being about three feet square. The tin linings projected above the tops of the boxes about two inches, and when a box was packed, were folded over a tin cover fitted closely upon the cakes of powder. It was the duty of one of the workmen, William Green, to solder these tin edges down upon the tin cover, a hot iron being used for this purpose.

On the day in question what he had feared came to pass. A fellow workman, William McGarvey, was bringing him the hot irons from a charcoal brazier about twenty-five yards distant. Green stood just at the door of the open magazine, and all around him were uncovered boxes filled with hexagonal powder, ready to be sealed and stored away. There were also dozens of boxes that had been sealed. Just what happened will never be known, for neither Green or McGarvey was left to tell the story. But the probability is that one of the soldering irons was a little too hot, and by touching a particle of dirt on the tin cover produced the deadly spark.—McClure's Magazine.

She Herself Was the Thief.

An amusing series of incidents occurred at the Louisville Pure Food Show. After the first day the managers found that scarcely a spoon remained that they allowed people to use who wanted to sample the edibles. So they decided to put strings on the spoons and fasten the ends to the tables. Several times women pocketed the spoons, only to find themselves at the end of a string, and one exciting episode took place that was particularly funny. A nervous, aggressive looking woman quietly and deftly placed a spoon in her pocket and started to walk off in that assumed, unconscious manner which amounts to positive genius in her sex. Presently she felt a pulling at her pocket and at once excitedly declared that she was being robbed. This attracted every one's attention and also led to the discovery of the spoon, which had unfortunately got caught in her pocket and was with some difficulty extracted. The expression upon her face at the moment that spoon came to light is easier imagined than described.

The Magnet in Surgery.

A few days ago C. H. Fiske, the Old Orchard hotel proprietor, got a needle into his foot and was unable to extract it, although he tried many ways to do so. Finally, knowing the affinity of steel for a magnet, he went to an electric light station and placed his foot near a dynamo, and out came the needle.—Portland Press.

While in Topeka last March, E. T. Barber, a prominent newspaper man of La Cygne, Kansas, was taken with cholera morbus very severely. The night clerk at the hotel where he was stopping happened to have a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and gave him three doses which relieved him and he thinks saved his life. Every family should keep this remedy in their home at all times. No one can tell how soon it may be needed. It costs but a trifle and may be the means of saving much suffering and perhaps the life of some member of the family. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. MAKERS OF MERRY FUN.

DELIGHTFUL TIME IN MONROE AVENUE CHAPEL LAST NIGHT.

Sweet Music, Fancy Drills and Ludicrous Sketches Make Up the Evening's Programme—The Participants.

It is not always the largest church that furnishes its congregation with the most enjoyable entertainments, and the Monroe Avenue chapel, although comparatively small in numbers, certainly has plenty of talent at its command and is able to arrange most delightful programmes, as was shown by last evening's entertainment in that church.

The programme opened with singing and prayer, after which Miss Grace King read a very interesting report of the Epworth League State convention to which she was a delegate. The electric lights were then turned out and the platform arranged for shadow pictures. The first "The Belle of the Kitchen" was represented by a large dinner bell on a table. "The Battle of Bunker Hill" consisted of two boys fighting, and the "Declaration of Independence" of a woman chasing a man across the platform with a broom. A series of pictures represented "A Hash House Conspiracy." The boarding house keeper persists in giving her boarders hash for breakfast, dinner and supper, while the boarders notice that the old cat has disappeared. The awful consequences of eating the hash are shown and then the boarders unite and force the landlady to finish the cat hash to her great horror.

A piano solo was next artistically rendered by Mrs. Brown. The announcement of a vocal solo by George O. Stevens brought out a round of applause, and after he sang "Blige the Lady" as only he can sing it, the applause was deafening and he responded with another song.

The Harvesters, a very pretty drill arranged by Miss Charlotte Aldrich, followed. Those taking part in it were: Jessie Burt, Lulu Randolph, Emma Wright, Anna Wenzell, Alice Pugh, Helen Fulton, May Brower, Ada VanDoren, Charles Burt, Stephen Aldrich, Robert Lauremore, Will VanNess, Aaron Brower, Fred Sopher, George Whitley and Clarence VanDorn.

Rev. Mr. O'Donnell made a few remarks, after which the dialogue "The New Hat" was given. The cast was as follows: Mrs. Clipper, Miss Brower; Kitty Clipper, Miss Edith L. Burt; Aunt Hopkins, Miss Charlotte Aldrich; Katy, the maid, Miss Ada Wenzell; Mrs. Fastone, Miss Kitty Ackerman; Dora Fastone, Miss Amy Burt.

Kitty wishes a new bonnet and her mother tells her that if she has it her brother cannot have a new suit, but Kitty wants it very badly and it is ordered. Mrs. Clipper reads a letter for Katy, the maid, telling that her lover has sent her a bonnet. Aunt Hopkins appears on the scene and is wild to know whether the Jones' have mutton or lamb for dinner. A bonnet arrives which Aunt Hopkins supposes is Kitty's new one and examines it, but, seeing Kitty coming, hides it under the table. Kitty enters and is told of her new bonnet but before she can look at it Mrs. and Dora Fastone come to call. The question of bonnets is brought up and the visitors wish to see Kitty's new one. Aunt Hopkins takes the bonnet out of the box and puts it on Kitty. It is a most ridiculous one and the visitors are much amused. After they leave, Kitty discovers it is the one belonging to Katy and is broken hearted, and when Katy enters with the real bonnet Kitty sends it back and tells her mother that she does not wish a new one but will make the old one do.

Miss Brower made a very good mother, while Miss Edith L. Burt acted the part of the daughter to perfection. Miss Aldrich was splendid as the aunt, and Miss Ackerman and Miss Amy Burt was as sedate as their characters required. Miss Wenzell, also, was not lacking.

At the conclusion of the entertainment a unanimous vote of thanks was given to Miss Aldrich for her labors in training the children for the drill and her many successful parts.

Born on the Fourth.

Mr. Baker, of East Fifth street, will celebrate the eighty-second anniversary of his birthday on July Fourth, and the event will be of more interest to him this year then ever as the citizens are making special arrangements to celebrate the day in a manner that will never be forgotten.

ADDRESS TO THE PATRIOTS,

NOT OF '76, BUT OF '95, AND RIGHT IN PLAINFIELD.

Fourth of July Celebration. Executive Committee Outline Their Plan of Making the Natal Day a Big Success.

The Executive Committee appointed by the chairman of the General Organization to look after the affairs of the celebration on the Fourth of July has begun its work. It enters upon these labors fully appreciating the importance of all that devolves upon close attention to the many details. The chairman wishes to call the attention of the General Organization, and the citizens of Plainfield and North Plainfield, to the objects and results to be obtained by a fitting and successful exhibition on that day. The proposal to celebrate in a becoming manner the day that commemorates the Declaration of Independence awakens patriotic feelings in the breasts of all lovers of liberty, and recalls the sacrifices made by our forefathers. To perpetuate the name of Washington and to guard more closely the precepts laid down by the first Continental Congress is the first motive that urges us to this action. To the business men and residents of the city we wish to direct a few words and add a few suggestions.

Plainfield's population is far above the average of any other city in the State, in intelligence, wealth, and social position. Its location is the pride of her citizens. Her business buildings and residences surpass many towns of greater size. Her stores are models of commercial progress. Goods can be purchased here as cheaply as they can be bought in New York or other cities. Her building sites are the finest within a radius of 100 miles of New York, and offer every advantage to purchasers; and her water has no superior, and is seldom equalled.

Facilities for transportation are unsurpassed. Many public improvements are already made, and many others are contemplated. Society here is of the best. Schools and other institutions are numerous, and have reached a high degree of excellence. Churches of all denominations boast of a large attendance and flourishing congregations, and their pulpits are filled with men of exceptional ability. While Plainfield is chiefly a residential city, there are many who are attracted here who must be provided with employment. The city already has several large manufacturing plants which engage operatives of a high class, who are earnest in their efforts to secure homes for themselves and families.

With these conditions so plainly evident, it must appear to all who are interested in the growth and importance of the place that with concerted effort much can be done to bring the advantages so exclusively our own before a large number of people who will visit our city on the day of our celebration.

Therefore we recommend that every business be fully represented in the display which is to be made. That the several industries put forth an effort to exhibit their products by floats, wagons and other devices, and the various organizations will fully demonstrate the patriotic sentiments that they have already expressed, and make a creditable showing. And it is important that every citizen should call attention to friends living out of town and invite them to be present on that day and observe the varied interests of our city.

All our citizens should appropriately decorate their homes and business places. All are requested to contribute as liberally as their means will allow This committee will see to it that sufficient police protection will be given, and will urge the city authorities to have all the streets which will be traversed by the parade, in good condition.

The features of the day as thus far outlined will be:

In the morning, parade of organizations; business representations; military companies; trade displays, etc.

In the afternoon, public outdoor meeting; orations and other patriotic features.

In the evening, fireworks and band concerts.

We urge every committee to use the closing days and make the most of ther time to insure a pleasant day for all. (Signed)

An ideal evening made the first of a series of informal subeription dances, which are to be held this summer in the Casino, a perfect success. The first of the series was held last night, the second will be held on July 1st, and the third sometime during September. Rogers and Conde furnished the music. The room was well filled, and all expressed themselves as greatly delighted with the success of the evening. The committee in charge consisted of Howard W. Beebe, Fred W. Walz, and Laurens VanBuren.

Why Independence Day Is Celebrated.

Did you ever hear how it happened we celebrate July Fourth rather than some later day. For days the members of Congress had differed over the terms of the Declaration. As the hot summer weeks progressed, windows were opened, much to the delight of the mosquitoes and flies of a neighboring stable. The stockinged calves of Congressional legs were assailed daily by the diminutive combatants, until at last the persistency of the most stubborn member was worn out on the Fourth day of July. "Now that the struggle was over the members became hilarious in their good-nature." John Hancock dashed down his great signature in such shape "that George the Third might read it without his spectacles." "Now we must hang together, it was remarked. "Yes," said Franklin, "or we shall separately."—From "Colonial Philadelphia" in Demorest's Magazine for July.

Reminiscences of Stevenson.

Andrew Lang wrote some brief reminiscences of Stevenson shortly after the latter's death. He apologized for the poverty of his material, and said that the only men qualified for this task were Sidney Colvin and Edmund Gosse. Mr. Gosse has now written his "Personal Memories of Stevenson," and they will appear in the July number of the Century. He records, among other things, that Stevenson was long proposing to write a life of the Duke of Wellington, and relates "a splendid dream of romance"—a grotesque fancy—which Stevenson had of an organized system of hotel piracy on Sundays in the heart of London, which he unfolded with a most convincing air. Mr. Gosse calls him not only "the most exquisite English writer of his generation," but "the most unselfish and most lovable of human beings."

The Centennial Celebration.

The last public celebration of the Fourth of July which Plainfield enjoyed was in 1876. At that time a big parade was one of the features of the day, and one of the features of the parade was a wagon on which was a press, and as the vehicle moved through the crowds bills were printed and thrown into the street. The following is the wording of the bill: "Printed on a Gordon Power Press by The Constitutionalist Printing Establishment at the Centennial Celebration, Plainfield, N. J., July 4, 1876. W. L. and A. L. Force, Proprietors. Charles S. Cook, Pressman."

Increased Facilities For the Postal.

Linemen of the Postal Telegraph Company will commence in a few days to string a new loop between this city and New Brunswick, which will give the Postal three direct wires to both Newark and New York. These facilities will give the Postal's patrons first-class service which will be appreciated.

BOROUGH EDUCATORS.

Business of the Public School For the Coming Year.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Education of North Plainfield was held last evening. All of the trustees were present. The monthly salary list and current bills, amounting to $1,049.24, were audited and ordered paid.

Also provision was made for the payment on July 21st of three school bonds maturing on that day, amounting to $1,500, and $800 of interest on the whole number of outstanding bonds.

It was decided to arrange for a class in Latin for next year, to be held after three o'clock, and to engage a teacher to come in at that hour for that purpose. The bid of W.C. Smith to build a new outhouse for $186, was accepted.

Supplies for the coming year were authorized to be purchased by the proper committee.

The project to introduce the teaching of plain sewing in the school was defeated by a vote of five to four.

The school building was ordered to be cleaned and renovated during the vacation.

MR. BENDER'S BENEFIT.

His Friends Give an Enjoyable Affair at Saengerbund Hall.

The benefit entertainment and dance tendered to Henry Bender, in the Saengerbund hall on Somerset street last evening, was well patronized by his many friends and acquaintances. It was about nine o'clock when the merriment began, the floor being filled all the time by the lovers of the light fantastic step. Interspersed between the dances was an exhibition on the horizontal bar by Charles Meyer and his pupils, which was well executed and at times bringing forth loud applause from those present. A chorus was next given by the singing section of the society under the direction of Conductor Shroeder. Dancing was again resumed and was kept up until about one o'clock. Music was furnished by Eugene O'Reilly's orchestra. Taking all-in-all the affair was a success, and it is hoped that a neat sum will be realized that will aid Mr. Bender very much.

MR. ISHAM FILES A BIG DEED.

His Holdings in Union County Are Transferred.

Henry H. Isham, the wealthy Brooklyn man who recently failed to get a judicial separation from his wife, had a deed recorded yesterday in the County Clerk's office at Elizabeth. It conveys all his land holdings in Elizabeth, with what he held in other parts of Union county, to Judge P. R. Gilhooly, of Elizabeth, for the consideration of $50,000.

The document is signed by Henry H. Isham and by his estranged wife, Juliet Calhoun Isham, a grandniece of John C. Calhoun. This record would indicate that a compromise and perhaps a reconciliation had been effected.

An attachment suit for $14,000 brought by John W. Cooper, of New York, against Mr. Isham's possessions in Elizabeth, is pending in the Union County Court. Mr. Isham was for some years president of the New Jersey State Agricultural Society, and helped to get several large industries to locate in Elizabeth.

Lieutenant Darling Insane.

First Lieutenant George H. Darling, of Company C, Phil Kearny Guards, Third Regiment, became violently insane yesterday, in Elizabeth and was removed to the Morris Plains Asylum. Lieutenant Darling has been a member of the Phil Kearny Guards about twenty years, and was one of the best-drilled and most popular men in the service. He is a brother of ex-Captain of Police Adam C. Darling, of New York city.

Mr. Stillman Takes Possession.

William M. Stillman took legal possession of Music Hall today. Mr. Stillman will make repairs before the opening of the next season which will greatly improve the house for the comfort of its patrons.

Informal Tea.

Cards are out for an informal tea to be given by Miss Shreve, of Grove street, for her friend, Miss MacCracken, of New York, Saturday, June 22d, from four until seven o'clock.

Early Closers.

The following wall paper and paint stores will close at seven o'clock until September 1st: E. E. Marshall, Marsh, Ayers & Co., Edward Love, Woolston & Buckle.

Churches In It, Too.

The excursion committee of the First Baptist church have arranged to have a float in the Fourth of July parade. It will be very attractive.

VOWS AT HYMEN'S ALTAR.

AMEY ELIZA GREEN WEDDED TO REV. FRANK ST. JOHN FITCH.

Ceremony Solemnized in Grace P. E. Church, Rev. Dr. Rodman Officiating—Reception at the House Afterward.

The interior of Grace P. E. church was a scene of beauty last evening, when Plainfield's society people gathered to witness the marriage of Miss Amey Eliza Green, daughter of Mrs. David Comstock Green, of Park avenue, to the Rev. Frank St. John Fitch, of Halifax, Nova Scotia.

The wealth and beauty of Plainfield was very much in evidence. Around the altar and chancel was the choicest decorations of flowers, that added lustre to the brilliant event. It was the work of the members of the Y. W. C. T. U., of which society Miss Green was president for four years.

Mrs. Freeman presided at the organ and the rendition of classic music from well known composers was perfect in every detail.

At eight o'clock the bridal party appeared, and as the familiar notes of Lohengrin's wedding march were heard, they proceeded up the centre aisle. The ushers were first, then came the maid of honor, Miss Louise Green, sister of the bride, followed by the bride leaning on the arm of Dr. Fitch, brother of the groom.

The bride being a brunette her beauty was charmingly set off by a dress of heavy white corded silk, trimmed with old point and duchesse lace, and wearing a tulle veil. Forming a striking contrast was her sister acting as maid of honor, she being a decided blonde gowned in pale Nile green, which was set off by the shower bouquet of pink roses which she carried.

They were met at the altar by the groom and best man, Rev. Charles W. Haines, of Washington, Warren county, brother of the groom, and Rev. Dr. Rodman, pastor of the church, who performed the impressive Episcopal ceremony. The bride was given away by her mother, Mrs. David Comstock Green. The party retired from the church while the sweet notes of Mendelssohn's wedding march were being played, and went at once to the bride's home, where a reception was given. The home was beautifully decorated with roses and greens. The bride received under a marriage bell of daisies. The veranda was decorated with greens and flowers and was also illuminated.

Those receiving were Mrs. David Comstock Green, Mrs. Orville Stillman, Mrs. DeGraw Moore, Dr. and Mrs. Fitch. In the library assisting Miss Louise Green, were Misses Margaret Fitch, Jean Yerkes, Mabel Wilder and Florence Abbott. The lucky one of this number to receive the bride's bouquet ring was Miss Green herself.

The guests from out of town were: Mrs. Orville Stillman and son, Westerly, R. I., Misses Brown, Corning, N. Y., Dr. and Mrs. Fitch and Mrs. DeGraw Moore, Orange, Miss Margaret Fitch, Halifax, Nova Scotia, Mr. and Mrs. John Gorham, New York, Rev. R. S. Holmes, Pittsburg, George Daland and Miss Daland, Elizabeth, Miss Yerkes, Philadelphia, and Miss Zabrieska, New York.

The ushers at the church were Rev. L. Ellsworth Brokaw, East Washua, N. Y., William Haskell, New York, Rev. Robert Thompson, Lincroft, and James Murray, Plainfield.

Max Wiertz was the caterer and served a luncheon to the entire bridal party at two o'clock in the afternoon, and also served the supper at the reception in his usual faultless manner.

Credit to Himself and Plainfield.

Graduates from the Plainfield High School have always stood high in their studies and Arthur H. Serrell, of Plainfield avenue, is no exception to the rule. He graduated as president of the class of '93 and entered Lehigh University. He has just finished his sophomore year and his standing was so high during the last year that he was excused from the final examinations, his record being one of the best in the class. On Friday he leaves for Charleston, S. C., where he will visit his college chum, Reynolds.

A Deserved Promotion.

Ferdinand Lissignolo, of this city, who is a student at Nazareth Military Academy, was called out before the company at dress parade a few days ago and was raised from sergeant to captain over the heads of two lieutenants. The promotion makes him the second senior captain.

Cantata By School Children.

The cantata, "Out in the Woods," will be presented this evening by pupils of Irving School. The proceeds will be devoted to replenishing the school library.

LET THE EAGLE SCREAM.

FOR PLAINFIELD WILL HAVE A GREAT CELEBRATION.

The General Committee Meet Again and Hear Favorable Reports—Organizations Who Will Parade.

Another meeting of the general committee for the Fourth of July celebration was held last evening in Red Men's hall.

The attendance was excellent, though not quite as large as on former occasions, but the enthusiasm was evident on all sides. Chairman Nash called for the reports of the sub-committees, the first being the executive. Charles Ulrich, chairman, gave an outline of what had been done, which showed conclusively that this most important committee are doing all they can to make the event a success. They asked for hearty co-operation from all.

The parade committee reported through Amos Andrews, chairman, that details of their work had been looked after and that a line of march had been arranged, but were not quite ready to make it known. Mayor Gilbert stated that the committee on collections were busy and that, in all, about $700 had been raised.

The printing committee had no report to make as yet, for they have had nothing to do especially thus far.

T. J. Carey, for the finance committee, said that he was unable to make a report at that time.

Mr. Nash requested all lodges that were going to parade to report to the parade committee.

Under the head of new business Mr. Ulrich moved that all societies that were not going to parade be asked to contribute. It was carried.

Amos Andrews made a motion that all church bells be rung at midnight of the Fourth, sunrise, noon and sunset.

Mr. Ulrich objected very much and thought all noise ought to be made in the day time. Mr. Bauersachs also objected, because he thought that everyone would need the rest. The motion was carried, however.

A motion by H. G. Adams that a militia company be invited to parade was lost, and Capt. George Edwards said that he would have eighty cadets present that would do as good as any National Guard company.

Capt. Hand threw out a few suggestions in regard to all being prompt in getting into line, and when so to keep the line well closed up.

The subject of having souvenir badges was discussed, but the committee did not think it advisable to buy them unless they could see their way clear to pay for them. The matter was finally referred to the committee on printing.

An adjournment was then made for one week and the various committees met to transact business pertaining to their departments.

The following organizations have reported that they would parade: Crescent Wheelmen, Unity, Perseverance and Crescent Division, Knights of Pythias, Queen City and Plainfield Lodge, I. O. O. F., Sons of Veterans, Franklin and Somerset Councils, J. O. U. A. M., Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque and Miantonomoh Tribes, I. O. R. M., C. Y. M. L., T. A. B., C. B. L., A. O. H., Stone Square Lodge, F. and A. M., Plainfield Gesang and Turn Verein, and G. A. R. Posts.

Peter Dumont Injured.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Dumont, of Crescent avenue, went out carriage riding yesterday afternoon and while riding on Central avenue, near Stelle avenue, a man leading a cow appeared, and the horse gave a sudden plunge as the corner was turned. Mr. and Mrs. Dumont were thrown out, and the horse and wagon were upset. The occupants received several cuts and bruises, but nothing serious. Mr. Groendyke, of North Plainfield, happened along and took the injured ones to their home. Dr. Tomlinson was called and dressed the wounds.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mrs. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else, then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottle at Randolph's drug store. Regular size, 50c and $1.

BALTIC CANAL FETES

Trial Lighting of the Grand Illuminations.

Peculiar Origin of the Alster Island.

Arrival of the French and Russian Fleets The Former Warmly Saluted by the Crews of the German Training Ships.

Hamburg, June 18.—At 8 o'clock last evening the German press committee gave a cordial reception in "Alsterlust" to the newspaper men from all countries, who will represent the press at the canal fetes. A large number of reporters came from Berlin on special trains, while many more came from England and elsewhere. After supper and health drinking the press men went to the Alster basin and witnessed a trial lighting of the entire illuminations. There were thousands of electric lamps on the Alster pavilion tower and in the gardens on Alster island.

A Marvellous Creation.

The island, which lies in the middle of the basin, is a marvellous creation. Hundreds of men worked for weeks in preparing it. It is of irregular shape and has on it a pavilion and cafe. A high tower guards one side, while at the other extremity, near the landing stage, is a triumphal arch formed of gigantic tusks, with an electric arc light in the centre.

Fac Similes of Heligoland Forts.

The whole island is surrounded by a sort of moat formed of piles, between which are several entrances for boats. At the ends of the island are two forts, small fac similes of those at Heligoland, on which frowning guns are mounted, guarding the grand entrances. The whole island will be most artistically illuminated at night and will present a beautiful spectacle. The basin is edged with double-decked barges on which thousands of seats for the public will be in readiness to-morrow.

Its Peculiar Origin.

The origin of the island was peculiar. The emperor, in discussing with a committee the Hamburg fetes, said: "I and my guests, after the banquet, will have coffee on Alster island." "But, your majesty," said one of the committeemen, "there is no island in the Alster." "Oh, yes," the emperor said, "I think it has a sufficient one." The island was, therefore, constructed at an enormous expense.

Marblehead's Many Visitors.

There was a constant stream of visitors yesterday to the American warship Marblehead. The warships Alfonso, Grosiastchy, Inrouf and Trabant and the British admiralty yacht Enchantress are lying near the Marblehead.

Twenty Princes Awaiting the Kaiser

Hamburg never fails when it is a question of upholding her name for civic hospitality. To-day the party awaiting the kaiser includes twenty princes, to say nothing of a host of their royal and serene relatives. These latter take no part in the ceremonial programme, but have been the guests of the high dignitaries and great merchants of the district and the different entertainment committees who have been giving garden parties, water picnics, banquets and receptions for a week past.

Fresh Sights Every Day.

Every day has furnished fresh sights for fresh excursions; every morning has brought some royal yacht or foreign cruiser, picturesque or unfamiliar, up the Elbe; every evening has seen the rehearsal of fresh illuminations, the erection of stands and arches, the addition of flags and drapery, until to-day the end has crowned the work, and the "Freie und Hansestadt Hamburg" is no longer a busy hive of quays and warehouses and gray offices.

Many Vessels Expected To-day.

Not many of the representative cruisers and yachts that are to traverse the canal on Thursday in the wake of the Kaiser have arrived. The English yacht Osborne, with the Duke of York (representing Queen Victoria throughout the ceremony) on board, and the Italian yacht Savola, with the Duke of Genoa, are both here and most of the others are expected by this evening.

Germans Cheer French Ships.

The French and Russian squadrons that will take part in the opening of the North Sea-Baltic canal met off South Denmark, and, after exchanging salutes, proceeded to this port together. The vessels entered in a line. As they passed the German training ships the crews of the latter vessels cheered them, and the visitors responded.

TOULON'S RESENTMENT.

Toulon, June 18.—The city council has decided to half mast the flags on all public buildings while the French ships are at Kiel.

Two Killed by a Live Wire.

Cleveland, O., June 18.—During a fire last night, Ida Jeantz, aged 20, a waitress, went on the roof of the Wright hotel to witness the blaze. She became entangled in a live electric light wire and was killed. Thomas Ball was killed while trying to rescue the woman.

Murdered on Her Wedding Day.

Sandusky, O., June 18.—Burt L. Hastings of this city yesterday shot and killed Lizzie Stoldt and then fatally shot himself. He wanted her to marry him but she would not consent and was to have been married last evening to James C. McGary.

Newark Telephone Company.

Newark, N. J., June 18.—The Newark Mutual Telephone company has just had its articles of incorporation recorded. The company will do a general telephone business in this city. The capital stock is placed at $50,000, and business will be commenced with $1,000.

Consul Mohun in London.

London, June 18.—Mr. Mohun, United States consul at Zanzibar, has arrived in London.

M'LAUGHLIN'S CASE.

Question as to the Legality of His Dismissal from the Force.

New York, June 18.—William W. McLaughlin, the convicted ex-inspector of police, will be sentenced to-morrow. A question as to the legality of his dismissal from the force caused Justice Barrett yesterday to postpone passing sentence. Justice Barrett, if certain that the dismissal of McLaughlin as a member of the police was legal and would stand, was willing to regard that as part of the punishment and make the sentence short. On the other hand, if the dismissal of McLaughlin was not strictly in accordance with the law, then the sentence would be heaver.

Not Convicted Until Sentenced.

Justice Barrett was seen after he had remanded the ex-inspector, and he gave his reasons for postponing the sentence. "I was appealed to," said he, "for mercy, based upon the ground that the defendant had lost his office as inspector of police and that this loss should be taken into consideration in passing sentence, which I was quite willing to do. But I want to be sure he has lost the office. A verdict by the jury does not mean a man's conviction. A man is convicted when the court sentences him and not before, because between the verdict and the sentence the judge may grant a new trial or suspend the sentence. It is one thing if the defendant stands before me legally removed from his office and another thing if he has not been legally removed. We want to be sure of our ground."

Fears for His Life in State Prison.

Justice Barrett then said that if he sentenced the defendant to state prison that sentence ipso facto removed him from his office as inspector of police, but if he was sentenced to the penitentiary it did not remove him. "The question that I have got to consider," Justice Barrett said, "is whether I will send him to state prison or the penitentiary. I have received many applications asking that he be sent to the penitentiary. Some of the grounds urged are that the defendant has himself sent many persons to state prison, and that he would have to associate with these men if he were sent there, and that his life would be in danger. I can sentence McLaughlin to five years in either penitentiary or prison," said the justice in conclusion, "or I can give him a day."

TO ABANDON THE CANAL.

Talk of Closing the D. & H. Waterway East of Summitville.

Port Jervis, N. Y., June 18.—There is a rumor current among the Delaware & Hudson Canal company's employes that the company has decided to abandon the canal east of Summitville and that coal from Honesdale, after being carried in boats as far as Summitville, will be placed on Ontario & Western cars at a point midway between Summitville and Phillipsport, at Rose's lock. If the report be true there will be seventy-four miles of canal abandoned. Boating is very poor on the canal and many little girls are seen driving the teams, their service being much more cheaply obtained than that of men or boys.

TOOK HOUSEHOLD EFFECTS.

A Seargentsville, N. J., Farmer Cleaned Out by Robbers.

Flemington, N. J., June 18.—Joshua Trimmer, a well-to-do farmer living near Sergeantsville, Hunterdon county, was robbed of $200 in gold coin and about $300 worth of household effects on Saturday night. Trimmer went to Sergeantsville and while there the thieves went to his house in wagons and carted away everything of value, even the bedclothes. Several persons are suspected and Constable Ramsay of this place has left town with warrants for their arrest.

ROBBED AN AMSTERDAM MAN.

A Couple Arrested at Saratoga Charged with the Crime.

Saratoga, N. Y., June 18.—Chief Blodget and Detective Costello have placed under arrest a man giving his name as George Stewart, on suspicion of chloroforming and robbing a blacksmith in Amsterdam on Thursday night last. The thief had been traced to Ballston and he came here on Friday. He had taken $175 from the blacksmith and he spent money very freely. Nellie Sheffer was arrested with him. Stewart had $43 and the woman $27.

Advantages of This Country as a Summer Resort.

Reports Received by the Marine Hospital Service from All Over the World Emphasize This Fact—Deaths from Yellow Fever in South America, and Cholera Abroad.

Washington, June 18.—Reports received at the marine hospital service, from all over the world, emphasize the advantages of the United States as a summer resort. J. B. Collet, city physician at Staunton, Va., reports that 37 smallpox patients were discharged from the hospital on the 18th inst. and that there have been no deaths from the epidemic since his last report. There were only four cases in the town outside of the hospital.

Deaths from Yellow Fever.

R. Cleary, medical inspector at Rio Janeiro, reported 62 deaths, from yellow fever at that place from May 4 to May 18. From other infected ports the reports were as follows: Havana, 5 cases from May 31 to June 6. Santiago de Cuba, 16 cases and 8 deaths from June 1 to June 8. Santos, 105 cases and 96 deaths from April 29 to May 3. Vera Cruz, 5 deaths from May 31 to June 6. Frank W. Roberts, consul at Nogales, Mexico, reported rumors which, he said, he feared were well founded, of the existence of the disease at Mazatlan Guaymas.

Cholera Infected Countries.

Reports regarding cholera were: Constantinople, 30 deaths in April. Calcutta, 71 deaths from April 27 to May 4. Rio Janeiro, 1 death in the week ending May 18.

The Hong Kong Plague.

J. Courtney Dixson, consul at Foo Chow, China, reported the existence there in epidemic form of the Hong Kong plague. It was this disease, he writes, which almost depopulated certain Chinese provinces last year, and owing to the total inability to interpose effective measures against its progress, the million and a half souls in Foo Chow would be practically at its mercy until the plague had run its course.

EX-CONSUL WALLER'S CASE.

His Attorneys Consult with Assistant Secretary Uhl.

Washington, June 18.—The case of John L. Waller, ex-United States consul at Tamatave, Madagascar, now in prison at Marseilles, still hangs fire, but it is likely that something definite will be done in a short time. John L. Langston, Waller's attorney, and Paul Bray, Waller's stepson, saw Assistant Secretary Uhl of the state department this morning about the case. It is presumed that they were sent for.

Consul Wetter Not Recognized.

It now appears that Mr. Wetter, the present consular representative of the United States at Tamatave, has not recognized the hovas, the native government of Madagascar, and they have refused accordingly to grant him his exequatur of formal recognition. The French authorities have likewise been backward in recognizing Mr. Wetter.

The Wrecked Sloop Crest's Survivors Thus Kept Themselves Alive.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 18.—One of the survivors of the wrecked sloop Crest, who returned yesterday from San Clement's islands, told to-day of the sufferings of himself and companions. After being struck by the storm the sloop drifted around for several days. The water and provisions giving out, they killed a dog and drank his blood, which kept them alive till the shore was reached. One of the party went crazy from thirst before the camp of the hunters on the mainland was reached. Here they were fed and cared for, and after several days' rest were sent to San Pedro on a sloop.

SEATS IN DISPUTE

Testimony in Several House Contests Opened.

Clerk Kerr Getting Matters in Shape To Prepare the Roll of Members of the Fifty-fourth Congress—A Number of Cases To Be Presented to the Committee.

Washington, June 18.—Under the law governing contests in the house of representatives, Hon. James Kerr, clerk of the house in the last congress, upon whom devolves the duty of preparing the roll of members in the fifty-fourth congress, yesterday opened the testimony in several cases of contest filed in his office.

Booze vs. Rusk.

The first was that of M. S. Booze vs. Harry Welles Rusk, in the third district of Maryland. In this case the testimony was in compact shape, neatly bound, and will be all printed. Mr. Booze alleges various illegalities in the election, false registration, lack of requisite qualifications by persons permitted to vote, etc., as grounds for reversing the apparent majority of votes for Rusk into one in his favor.

Kearby vs. Abbott.

Next was that of Jerome Kearby vs. Jos. Abbott, from the sixth Texas district. Mr. Kearby sets up suppression and diversion of the vote in the district, and has accumulated an immense amount of testimony, offset by a large bulk in favor of Mr. Abbott's side of the controversy, and it is all to be printed.

Another Contest from Texas.

A. J. Rosenthal contests the election of Miles Crowley from the tenth Texas district, on the ground that the voters were not permitted an opportunity to freely and fairly express their preferences. In support of his contention Mr. Rosenthal has prepared a great volume of testimony, including clippings from newspapers, some of which are six and eight years old, foreshadowing and asserting such a state of affairs in the district. This will also be printed in full.

Sermons in Evidence.

In the contest made by H. T. Thorpe for the seat to which he holds a certificate of election as a member from the fourth Virginia district, W. H. McKenney offers no evidence to offset that furnished by Mr. Thorpe, but has put in an answer, upon which he will rest his case. Thorpe has included in his testimony copies of sermons preached at various points in the district, and such other similar matter, and all of this is to be put in print for the use of the committee on elections.

Contests To Be Opened To-day.

To-day the evidence in the following contests will be opened by Mr. Kerr: G. W. Connett vs. Claude A. Swanson, fifth Virginia district; J. Hampton Hoge vs. Peter Otey, sixth Virginia district; Jacob Yost vs. Henry St. George Tucker, tenth Virginia distalct.

Other Cases for Consideration.

The papers in the Van Horn-Tarsney contest from the fifth Missouri (Kansas City) district, will be opened on the 24th inst. The contests from Louisiana (except that in the fifth district, represented by Mr. Boatner). Alabama and New York have been indefinitely postponed, owing to the failure of the parties to file any evidence.

CARPENTER AT BELVIDERE.

Allowed To Roam Around Town All Day in Charge of a Detective.

Belvidere, N. J., June 18.—Samuel Carpenter, charged with murdering Mrs. Ray Blackwell at her home in Phillipsburg on April 25, was brought to Belvidere yesterday from the Easton, Pa., jail where he was confined while awaiting requisition papers. He demanded a hearing when he arrived here, and as the presiding judge was out of the county he was allowed to roam about town all day in charge of a detective. Last night the hearing was set down for next Monday, and Carpenter was placed in the Belvidere jail.

SHE WOULD NOT MARRY HIM.

An Eighteen-Year-Old Girl Shot Down in Trenton.

Trenton, N. J., June 18.—Fred C. Floyd, aged 40, a German farmer of Roxbury, N. J., last night shot and killed Hattie Coombs, aged 18, of this city, a domestic, because she would not marry him, and then killed himself. The shooting occurred on the street under an electric light. Floyd held the girl's face with one hand and deliberately fired three bullets into her head.

The Challenge Has Arrived.

Boston, Mass., June 18.—The challenge from the English universities, Oxford and Cambridge, to Harvard and Yale to have field and track contests at New York in September has been received at Harvard, and is in the hands of Prof. Amos, chairman of the athletic committee. As to whether or not Harvard will accept the challenge, Prof. Ames has nothing official to say.

League Games Yesterday.

At New York—New York, 7; Louisville, 6. At Brooklyn—Brooklyn, 4; Cincinnati, 2. At Philadelphia—Philadelphia, 2; Pittsburg, 5. At Boston—Boston, 9; Cleveland, 10; second game, Boston, 9; Cleveland, 7. At Baltimore—Baltimore, 12; St. Louis, 5. At Washington—Washington, 7; Chicago, 10.

Close of Tennis Tournament.

Orange, N. J., June 18.—The middle states championship tennis tournament closed yesterday on the Orange Lawn Tennis club's grounds with finals in the men's doubles. Score: Clarence Hobart and Edwin P. Fisher beat William A. Larned and John Powland, 3 6, 7-5, 6-3, 0-6, 6 2.

TO PROMOTE IMMIGRATION.

Wisconsin Seeking Settlers for Her Unoccupied Lands.

New York, June 18.—Gov. William H. Upham, of Wisconsin, and G. W. Bishop, secretary of the Wisconsin state immigration commission are at the Waldorf. They came to New York on business connected with the promotion of European immigration to that state. There are in Wisconsin something like 25,000,000 acres of land as yet unoccupied and unimproved. The real work of the immigration commission is to aquaint the world that those millions of acres can be secured at a nominal cost and will make fertile farms for thousands of families.

Great Opportunities.

"Wisconsin is a great state now in wealth and production," said Mr. Bishop, "but its resources have been only half improved. The encouragement of settlement in the more thinly populated sections is an idea of our governor, which the legislature has acted upon in a manner bound to bring about beneficial results. The governor is ex-officio at the head of the immigration commission, and is here to personally acquaint himself with matters pertaining to immigrants and to do all he can to interest the people of the east in the extraordinary opportunity offered by Wisconsin to home seekers. The settlement of the northern section of our state will not be by foreigners exclusively by any means, but we naturally look to that portion of Europe that has already contributed so handsomely to our population."

KERSHNER'S CONVICTION.

Secretary Herbert Will Hear His Lawyers Next Thursday.

Washington, June 18.—The sentence of dismissal found by naval courtmartial against medical inspector Edward Kershner has been announced at the navy department, but Secretary Herbert has withheld his endorsement until the accused officer's counsel can be heard in his defense. The charges against Dr. Kershner, who was fleet surgeon of the north Atlantic squadron, were preferred by Admiral Meade. The first declared he had violated naval regulations in forwarding privately to the officers copies of official documents which subsequently apperred in print.

First Charge of Perjury.

The second charge was that of scandalous conduct to the destruction of good morals, its specification reciting that his sworn testimony before a court of inquiry investigating the first charge was false and intended to deceive. This was the first time in the history of the service that an officer had ever been accused of perjury and it caused quite a sensation.

Will Be Heard Next Thursday.

Two weeks ago Dr. Kershner and his counsel were informed of the findings and sentence and notified that anything they had to say would be heard. They have taken advantage of this permission and Secretary Herbert has appointed next Thursday morning for a hearing at his office.

KILLED HIS MOTHER-IN-LAW.

Shocking Murder and Suicide at Lancaster, Pa.

Lancaster, Pa., June 18.—A terrible tragedy took place late last night on east Fulton street this city. Joseph Westgate, a puddler, who was separated from his family, shot and instantly killed Mrs. Christian Hambright, his mother-in-law, and then turning the weapon on himself, blew his brains out dying in a short time. He intended to kill his wife, who had left him, but could not find her. Mrs. Hambright was 64 years of age and a member of a prominent family.

NO FOREIGNER WILL GET IT.

An Exalted Prelate's Views Regarding the Next Pope.

London, June 18.—A dispatch from Rome to the Central News contains an interview with an exalted prelate at the vatican anent Cardinal Gibbons and the papacy. The prelate said unless Cardinal Gibbons happened to be in Europe at the moment of Pope Leo's death it would be impossible for him to share in the election by the conclave. An absent cardinal had never been elected pope. It was virtually certain that no foreigner will be elected.

FIGHTING IN FORMOSA.

Forts Held by Black Flags Attacked. Foreigners on a British Warship.

London, June 18.—A special dispatch from Shanghai this morning says that fighting is in progress at Tai-Wan, island of Formosa, where 10,000 Black Flags under General Lui-Yung are assembled. The Japanese are now attacking the forts at that place, and the British warship Spartan is removing the foreigners from the town.

The bond is about to expire and Coxey announces that he will not renew it and advises his friends not to do so.

Strikers Threaten Mischief.

Kingston, N. Y., June 18.—Seventy-five men employed in William Hutton's brick yards at East Kingston quit work yesterday because a demand for an increase in wages was refused. Austrian Cabinet To Resign.

IDE IS ORDERED HOME

May Have To Stand Trial by Courtmartial.

His Explanation Regarding the Charges of Discourtesy Preferred by Rear-Admiral Meade Regarded as Not Sufficient by the Department. No Speculation as to Outcome.

Washington, June 18.—Cabled orders have been sent to Commander George E. Ide, of the cruiser Alert, detaching him and ordering him to report to the navy department. Commander Ide is coming home to answer charges of disrespect and discourtesy preferred by Rear Admiral Meade, who, when his squadron was at Colon, the middle of last April, crossed the isthmus with Assistant Secretary McAdoo, and in Panama met Commander Ide, whose vessel was at that port. Commander Ide greeted Mr. McAdoo very cordially, but paid no attention to the admiral, who was at the time off his station. Commander Ide being attached to the Pacific under Admiral Beardslee. Meade at the time accused Ide of discourtesy, to which Ide is reported to have retorted that he had saluted him in accordance with regulations as a ranking officer, but he was not compelled to show any particular enthusiasm.

The Commander Must Answer.

The apparent delay in acting on Admiral Meade's charges is due to the fact that under the law a copy of the charges had first to be sent to the accused and his reply received. As the Alert has been at San Juan del Sur, Nicaragua, and protecting American interests in Ecuador, there has been an unavoidable delay. It is evident from the action of the department that Commander Ide's explanation is not regarded as sufficient to offset Admiral Meade's charges, and that he will be court martialled on reaching home.

No Speculation as to the Outcome.

It is also said that the revocation of Admiral Meade's permission to go abroad was due to the charges against Ide, as the admiral will be the principal witness for the prosecution. Whether it is deemed probable that the enquiry which is to be snstituted will result in the censure of Commander Ide, or will supply additional ground of censure against Rear Admiral Meade is, of course, a matter upon which navy officials are absolutely silent.

HARLEM SHIP CANAL.

The New Waterway Opened with a Grand Celebration.

New York, June 18.—The Harlem ship canal which unites Long Island sound with the Huson river, was opened yesterday afternoon. Two parades were held in celebration of the event—one by water and the other by land. All along the North river front and from every available point of observation along the route of both parades, spectators gathered in large numbers. Houses, particularly in the Harlem district, were decorated with flags and bunting. The vessels which participated in the water pageant were handsomely bedecked with banners and a general holiday aspect prevailed in the upper part of the city and Westchester. Many distinguished persons were present. Among them were Mayor Strong, and the mayors of the following cities: E. M. Yards of Trenton, N. J.; E. F. Wanser of Jersey City, J. E. Peene of Yonkers, F. T. Olney of Providence, A. J. Hendricks of New Haven, R. N. Arnold of Poughkeepsie, J. W. Clute of Schneetady, E. L. Schofield of Stamford, E. H. Pintor of Hudson. Gov. Morton promised to participate, but was unavoidably detained at the last moment

PURSUED THEM A YEAR.

Smith at Last Runs Down One of His Assailants.

Newark, N. J., June 18.—After a year's pursuit Clinton Smith captured yesterday afternoon John Gibson, one of three men who murderously assaulted and robbed him under the trestle of the Lehigh railroad in July last. He had traced the men through Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York and New England as far as Boston, and yesterday afternoon discovered Gibson among a gang of tramps on the Pennsylvania tracks just above Waverly. Procuring a gun from the tower tender, at the point of the weapon he marched his prisoner to the hands of officers of the law.

No one, as far as known, was actually killed, although several persons were injured so badly they are not expected to live. About twelve houses were totally destroyed and many barns and outhouses.

The seventh statistical report of the Insterstate Commerce Commission for the year ending June 30, 1894, has just been submitted. The total railway mileage in the United States on June 30, 1894, was 178,708, an increase during the year of 2,247 miles. The increase during the previous year was 4,897. The percentage of increase during 1894 was less than for any preceding year for which reports have been made to the commission. The number of roads abandoned was sixteen. The total mileage of all tracks was 233,533 miles.

The nomination of ex-Governor Ludlow to the Supreme Court was a masterpiece of policy on the part of Governor Werts. Notwithstanding his nomination of a Republican in the person of Mr. Gummere, the Senators stood ready to defeat the confirmation of a Democrat in the place of Mr. Reed, and would have defeated any other Democrat than Governor Ludlow. His fitness for the position; his great record as Governor in an era most trying and under conditions most perplexing; and the high and honorable stand which he had taken in State matters would have made his rejection an insult to the best people of the State.—True American.

ABOUT DR. HUSSEY.

Mr. Powell Says She Merits Commendation in Behalf of Other Women.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—

As for many years the personal friend of Dr. Mary D. Hussey and her family, will you allow me to say that the New York special account of her unpleasant experience in a Pennsylvania railroad train on Thursday last, as published by you this evening, is wholly untrue and misleading. There was no "coat," "vest" and "collar" incident; and the name of the lewd, scandalous offender was not the one given by you. I have his name, which it is not essential here to mention; also a statement of the details of his shameful conduct by Dr. Hussey herself. It is enough here to say of it that he is legally amenable for an insulting, grossly indecent exposure of his person, for which he was, at the instance of Dr. Hussey, put off the train by the conductor, arrested, and subsequently discharged by the "clemency" of a Newark police court. The matter is today undergoing further legal investigation at Newark, and the case will be promptly brought before the Grand Jury, unless its technical difficulties are found to be such as obviously to preclude conviction. Dr. Hussey, honored and esteemed by all who know her great personal worth, merits hearty commendation for her brave effort, in behalf of other women less able to resent such an insult, to restrain and punish the disgusting sensualist, against whom the Pennsylvania railroad should be called upon to protect its patrons.

Very truly yours,
Aaron M. Powell.

A Fishy Taste.

For the past few days Morristown's supply of drinking water has been contaminated with foul odors, has been muddy and has had a fishy taste. The officials of the water company are seeking to remedy the difficulty by blowing off the street fire hydrants. The cause of the trouble is said to be low water in the reservoirs and an unusual quanity of fish which lived in the same.

Gen. Wade Hampton's address at the unveiling of the Confederate monument in Chicago on Decoration day was, in part, a eulogy of Lincoln. "The untimely death of President Lincoln was regarded by all thoughtful men of the South as one of the most serious evils which had befallen our section," he said. "We know that during the war he devoted every energy of mind and body for the restoration of the Union, and that result accomplished, we felt that his big brain and his kind heart would prompt him to deal kindly and leniently with his felow citizens of the South."

"MY FOOD DOES ME NO GOOD."

In any city there are many possible ways to travel from one point to another. But between the food on your table and its destination in the body there is only one road—directly through the stomach. There is no going around the stomach or forcing a passage through it. Here the food is detained a while for better or for worse. Here it must be digested—that is to say, changed, liquefied and assorted for assimilation—or, failing that, it must lie here and rot, generating poisonous principles which enter the blood and set up a diseased action throughout the system. This is indigestion or dyspepsia—the condition that exists when a person says, "My food does me no good."

Certainly not. How can it? The more he eats the more he suffers. The road is blocked. No use putting more grain in the hopper when the mill cannot grind. Here are some of nature's protests: Loss of appetite; distress after eating; heartburn; palpitation; flashes of heat and cold; the rising of nauseous acids and gasses into the throat; furred tongue; dull and aching head; pains in the chest and back; weariness, fatigue and worry; loss of sleep; cold hands and feet; yellowish eyes and skin; weakness and trembling; constipation; failure of nervous force and courage, etc., etc. Out of this seething blockade in the stomach may come any of a dozen local complaints—a common form of pseudo consumption among them. Yet you must eat or starve. Miserable dilemma.

Drastic measures won't do. Take a very little light nourishment at first and immediately after it a dose of the Shaker Digesting Cordial, the only radically effective remedy for indigestion or dyspepsia—prepared by the Shaker Community at Mt. Lebanon, N. Y. It will relieve at once and cure quickly. Made from cultivated medicinal herbs and plants grown by the Shakers. Pleasant to the taste, painless and harmless.

PASTOR VAN DOREN TO GO.

The Minister Says His Enemies at Spotswood Are Too Many for Him.

Rev. W. A. Van Doren, the Dutch Reformed pastor of Spotswood, a little village in the lower part of Middlesex county, will leave the parish. Through the sympathy of some of his flock he has been allowed to occupy the parsonage until his successor is secured. The pastor does not admit that this is a concession at all, for he says that his term does not expire until October, and his salary is due to that time whether he preaches or not.

Rev. Mr. VanDoren is a man of fifty-five years. His wife is quite a favorite with the people of Spotswood and Old Bridge, which villages furnish the congregation of the Dutch Reformed church at Spotswood, but for a year past the pastor has been in continual hot water.

Rev. Mr. Van Doren said to a reporter: "I have been the victim of a conspiracy. Some few members of the congregation took a dislike to me at the very outset when I came here two years ago. They made sentiment against me until nearly all my friends were turned against me. I deny that I have been too familiar with women. I am still occupying the parsonage, but will not preach in the church again. I am anxious to get out of Spotswood, as my enemies are too many for me.

Scotch Plains and Fanwood.

The Uniform Rank, K. of P., arrived Sunday afternoon with a large and effective rank to decorate the graves of Frank Hossinger and James Buckley, former members of that organization.

Children's Day was celebrated Sunday evening in the Methodist church before a crowded audience of the members of that and the Baptist church, which omitted their usual service to enable its members to take part. The exercises were as follows: Organ voluntary, Miss Baker; opening chorus, school; Scripture lesson; recitation, Maggie Colins; solo, Minnie Meyer; Scripture lesson; dialogue, Emma Angler and Sadie Johnston; recitation, Henry Meyer; dialogue, six girls; recitation, Ferdinand Meyer; dialogue, five girls; solo, Herbert Mooney; recitation, John Magnese; address, Dr. Parks, interspersed with singing by the school and congregation; doxology and benediction.

The Episcopal church was visited by Rev. T. Logan Murphy and a boy choir on Sunday. The exercises were very much appreciated by the large audience present from Fanwood and Plainfield.

The Misses Hayes, of Fanwood, start on an ocean excursion of some weeks duration on Saturday, the 22d inst.

The public school will hold a reception on Wednesday evening to close the year, at Excelsior hall in Scotch Plains. An attractive programme has been prepared, and it will prove a pleasant occasion.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destored forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

CYCLING COMMENT.

The attention of every member of the Crescent Wheelmen is called to the meeting to be held tomorrow evening.

The American Wheelman has christened Cabanne, the famous St. Louis rider, the "Count." He is an Italian, and the only one on the American racing circuit.

The race in which E. T. Hand did not qualify at Manhattan track on Saturday will be run off again at an early date. No prizes were given for the contestants in that race.

T. J. Carey, Frank Smith and John Rickert, of the Crescent Wheelmen, will ride in the double century run given by the Manhattan Club of New York June 22-23d. The riders will be entertained by the Century Club of Philadelphia.

An amusing incident is told of a popular young man in the borough, who took a bicycle ride last Sunday. He stopped at a place named Alton and laid down under a large tree to rest. The soft balmy air soon put him to sleep, and the hands on his watch made the rounds many times before he awoke. When he did, fortunately, his wheel was found where he left it.

Walter Sanger, in discussing professionalism and cash prizes with a representative of The American Wheelman last week, said: "It is only a question of incentive to me. I am sympathetically inclined toward cash prizes, as my experience has shown the fallacy of the present system. Riding a race under promise of a $150 diamond for the winner and actually getting one worth about one-half that value, naturally creates disgust. With a family of eleven to support lollypop medals don't go. I want the cash."—American Wheelman.

We have maintained for some time that the L. A. W. should appoint official timers. This belief is strengthened in the light of recent events. We do not doubt the correctness of the Louisville records or times, but when the matter is looked at in the light of surprises, and coupled with the fact that interested men were timers, we still, and more firmly, insist that we are correct. There is no danger of a foul being committed, or disputes to be settled between contestants, and in fact no use whatever for him save to have him present. With the timers it is different. Racing men are pecuniarily interested in their record breaking. A clip of a fifth of a second from existing records means so much money from the maker's pocket into those of the riders. Incompetent officials do a great injustice to other record breakers, and there is absolutely no reason why, if the timers were made of purchasable material—as they might be, without reflecting upon the timers at this event—that the benefit of a fifth of a second might be given the record breaker as not. The result of this is manifest without further explanation.—American Wheelman.

THE SECRET ORDERS.

The following officers were elected at the meeting of Washington Camp, P. O. S. A., last evening: President, Charles Wyckoff; vice-president, Chester Dennis; outside guard, W. W. Stratton; delegate to State convention, W. W. Stratton.

To Check Cohn's Actions.

The members of the Westfield Township Committee have commenced suit in the name of the township for $1,000 each against John M. C. Marsh, Township Assessor, and A. K. Gale, Township Collector. It is claimed that they have been charging the township excessive fees for performing their duties. The summonses are issued out of the Supreme Court and are returnable June 19. These suits may check the action which L. G. Cohn has petitioned the Supreme Court to allow him to bring in the names of the people of the township for the same purpose.

Won't Call Again.

Morris Fitzgerald, while delivering liquor for Frank Linke in Dunellen yesterday, was called into a boarding house by the landlady and then attacked by her. Today he is lame in his left leg and has several scratches on his right arm. He says she can fight without any doubt, and he does not care to call on her again.

—The sewer department of the city engineer's office are now engaged in making up estimates, etc., for house connections, which will be presented to the Common Council Monday night.

CHURCH CHIMES.

A concert will be given in Bethel chapel on Monday evening of next week.

A strawberry festival will be given in Holy Cross church, Wednesday evening.

The Plainfield Branch of the Christian Alliance meet this evening at eight o'clock at 317 East Front street for prayer, praise and testimony.

The Sunday-schools of the First Presbyterian, Congregational and Park Avenue Baptist churches will enjoy their annual excursion to Asbury Park Thursday, July 18th.

The local Christian Endeavor Union will hold a rally in the Crescent Avenue church, this evening. Rev. Charles E. Herring will make a ten-minute address, and there will be a ten-minute parliament on "The Christian Endeavorer in Vacation Time." The music will be in charge of a chorus choir.

Rev. Dr. Rodman and Rev. J. P. Taylor went to Helmetta, Middlesex county, today, to assist in the consecration of an Episcopal church that has just been finished. It was erected by Mr. Helm, the founder of the town, and after his death his family completed the structure in accordance with the decedent's plans.

Pushing Voorhees's Boom.

Assemblyman Codding, of Westfield, who is aiding in keeping Senator Voorhees's Gubernatorial boom afloat, says The World, was in Jersey City yesterday looking over the field. He met and talked with several Republicans who favor the Union Senator's candidacy, and went away in good humor.

The Hungarian in Prison.

John Bulamski, the Cottage place Hungarian, who was sentenced to two years in State prison for licking his wife, was this morning taken to Trenton by Sheriff Kyte and Special Officer Dennis Carney.

IV.

It may be I lack character, but when morning came and I found myself again in the presence of Mr. Knollys and his sisters I said nothing of what I had heard or seen, and simply showed my uneasiness by informing them that circumstances made it impossible for me to remain longer in their hospitable house, at which they all started and consulted each other with anxious looks, the brother murmuring something about his having more leisure now for amusement, and the sisters—Lucetta particularly—uttering regrets which only the memory of the unexplained horrors I had witnessed prevented me from regarding as heartfelt and sincere.

"You must not go, indeed you must not," objected Miss Knollys. "To-night—"

But I could not and would not contemplate another night spent in this dreadful house, and I looked so determined that her face fell, and she with difficulty remarked:

"We have been very unfortunate. I hope you will not carry away too unhappy an impression of us." Then, as if she felt the necessity of knowing just what I had seen or suspected, she added: "If you would tell me just what has disturbed you, perhaps we could reassure you in some way. Was it the room alone that frightened you?"

Perhaps thus questioned I should have told them just what I had seen and heard But I am only 17 years old, and at my age a girl reasons but little and only thinks of escape when frightened. So I repeated what I had previously said to the maid: that I had heard myself locked in during the night, and that the experience had frightened me, and that I could never run the risk of being subjected to the same again. Which explanation seemed to satisfy the brother but not Lucetta, for she grasped my hand with sudden vehemence and cried:

"But that is not all, or you would be simply indignant. You heard cries, perhaps, and—and movements about the house—something you could not explain, and think it strange that we do not?" Then as I drooped my head and shut my lips together with girlish obstinacy, she broke out: "O, do not think too much of an occurrence which we would be glad to explain if we dared. Some day—we cannot tell how soon—we may be able to tell you all about it, but now you must take the matter on trust, and if you have any regard for the children of your father's old friend, promise that you will not tell, at least any one in this part of the country, why you leave us so unceremoniously before your visit is half out."

"BUT THAT IS NOT ALL."

Happy to be released on any terms, I gave my promise, and at noon left this ill-omened house.

Father, such is Miss Grant's story. Can you, who know the Knollys so much better than I do, explain it? And do you know who died in their house on the twenty-third of December last? Affectionately, your daughter,

ANNA.

"And what answer did you make to your daughter when you wrote her?" I asked, as I read these final words.

The worthy man shifted uneasily in his seat before replying.

"Well," said he, "I wrote her that I thought she was crazy. But for all that I made certain inquiries concerning her, and found that a closed carriage had been seen to enter Lost Man's Lane—that's what we call that dismal by-path, sir—and come out again and go east some half-hour or so before the coach brought up Miss Grant from Fulmingham Station."

"And you found out nothing more?"

"Not a thing."

"Now," I suddenly remarked, "what is your opinion of the whole matter? You have an idea and so have I. What is yours?"

"That the brother has mania. That the sisters know it and try to shield him. That his mania is for killing people, and that he sometimes succeeds, greatly to their horror. Then they bury the victims—"

"Horrible! Unheard of!" I broke in aghast.

But he went stolcally on:

"The Knollys were always queer. The father was a stern, sad-faced man, and the mother ran away and left her children when they were very little. She died in a foreign land and they all wore mourning, but they never mention her name and do not encourage anyone else to. The children n have inherited their bad qualities from her."

"I am going to see those children," I remarked. "If I do not come back, you will know where to find me."

"But I shan't," he objected. "It is that very feature of the affair which baffles us. People go into that road but they don't come out, and they don't leave any trace behind them. I tell you there is some fearful secret in connection with this matter. The victims are taken unawares as I am afraid you will be. Had you not better let me go along with you?"

"Never," I said, "but if I do not come back by two o'clock, you can come after me." And secure in my own nerve and self-reliance, I took up my surveyor's instruments and bodily set out again for Lost Man's Lane.

I did not go by Mr. Trohm's house this time, nor did I enter by the Knollys' gate. I made my approaches from the rear, and carefully and with circumspection, searched that portion of the woods into which Miss Grant had seen the burial party disappear. What I found was very simple, but to my mind of sufficient importance for me to form a plan of action.

Calling to a group of small children who had persistently followed me ever since I entered the woods, I cried out: "Ten cents for the boy who brings me a spade!" And when this ten cents was earned, added within hearing of them all: "Now, don't any of you run and tell Miss Knollys that I am going to dig up this crossed stick you see here. She might give you another ten and stop me."

"But what are going to dig it up for?" bawled out one.

"Because it's keeping down a spook. Now run off and tell Miss Knollys that and get your ten cents."

With a shout they circled into a knot and vanished. But one little figure slid away in the direction of the big gray walls I could faintly discern in the distance, and judging that my somewhat hazardous suggestion had taken effect, I took off my coat and inserted my spade into the moist earth. Then I waited till I heard the sound of hurrying feet behind me, when I dug up a large piece of earth and flung it to one side.

A gasp of irrepressible dismay uttered almost in my ear, warned me to desist, and turning round, I saw two young women standing not five feet away, with wide staring eyes, and hands clutched over their breasts that panted with something more than the effort of running.

One spoke as I looked up.

"What are you doing here?" she cried. "You have no right to dig in our woods."

I hastened to apologize. "I am a surveyor," said I. "I meant no harm, I assure you. I merely want to drive a stake here."

"But why here?" cried out the other. "Is there no other place in all these woods that you should plant your spade in—in——"

"A grave?" I demanded, dropping my spade and advancing determinedly. "Was that what you meant to say? If so——"

I had struck the truth. I saw it in the instant collapse which took place not only in their bodies, but in the spirit which informed them, and while I felt the natural satisfaction of the successful detective, I was also conscious of a deep shrinking from the task imposed upon me, for these young women were no common women and Lucetta especially (or she whom I had fixed upon as Lucetta) was exceedingly lovely, so lovely indeed that I wondered how Miss Grant could have mentioned her name without saying how beautiful she was.

"Who are you," gasped Miss Knollys, catching hold of her sister's hand, partly to gain and partly to give the support they both so evidently needed. "Because there is crossed stick planted here, do you think our woods a cemetery?"

"I think this spot a grave," I answered, "and my thought is important, Miss Knollys, because while I am not ready to say that I lied in declaring myself a surveyor, I do feel it incumbent upon me to inform you that I am also a detective, sent here to ferret out the crimes which have made this place a terror for the last sixteen months."

"Crimes!" murmured both the sisters, falling with an impulsive movement to their knees.

"What are you saying?" shrieked Lucetta.

"We know nothing about crimes," cried the other.

"Yet crimes have been committed not two hundred yards from this place," I went on. "Persons have come into this lane who have never gone out of it, and if there is one grave in this tangled forest, why should there not be more. Ladies, I am going to dig."

"Dig then; but first let me tell you what you will find. Six feet below that turf you will strike a coffin. It is a rude one, for we made it ourselves, and on the lid you will see scrawled on a piece of common tin these words:

TURNING, I SAW TWO YOUNG WOMEN.

Althea Ann Knollys. Born February first, eighteen hundred and thirty-six. Died December twenty-second, eighteen hundred and ninety-three. It is our mother's grave, sir."

She spoke the truth. I saw it in the clear regard of Miss Knollys eye; in the steady firmness of Lucetta's bearing and her unconscious air of dignified reproach. Bowing profoundly, I waited for the explanation they could not help giving.

It was Lucetta's voice which first broke the silence, and as she spoke I noted again her clear brow with its line of trouble, and the delicate sensitiveness of her whole expression which made her the most spiritual-looking being I had ever seen.

"I do not know you," were her first words, "but you say you are a detective and that your errand here is to ferret out crime. You have come to the wrong place, sir, and if we consulted our pride alone we would turn our backs upon you and let you desecrate our mother's grave and ascertain the truth at your own cost. But we have other qualities than pride, we two desolate orphan girls, and so I will deign to tell you what I hope your sense of justice will prevent you from repeating. Years ago our mother left us. She had done a wrong, or what you will better understand, committed a criminal act against one of our neighbors, the penalty of which—is State's prison."

With difficulty the words came out; with difficulty she kept down the flush of shame which threatened to overwhelm her, and did overwhelm her less restrained sister. But her self-control was great and she went bravely on, the palest, the most delicate and the most resolved of women it had ever been my lot to face.

"It was forgery," said she. "Though a cherished wife and a beloved mother, [illegible] for many things my father [illegible] give her and in an evil hour, [illegible] the name of a rich man [illegible] took the check thus signed to [illegible]. The fraud was not detected and she received the money, but ultimately the rich man, whose money she had spent, discovered the use she had made of his name, and if she had not escaped, would have had her arrested. But she left the country, and the only revenge he took was to swear that if ever she set foot in Cushing again he would call the police down upon her. Yes, if she were dying and they had to drag her from the brink of the grave. And he would have done it, and knowing this, we have lived under the shadow of this fear for eleven years. My father died under it and my mother—ah, she spent all her life under foreign skies, but when she found that death was about to lay its hand upon her, her affection for her own flesh and blood triumphed over her discretion, and she came, secretly I own, but still with that horror menacing her, to her children's door, and begging their forgiveness, lay down in the room where they were born, and died, with the halo of their love about her."

I thought over Miss Grant's relation of the events of the fearful night, and saw in it nothing but confirmation of what this young girl was saying. But I ventured this one remark that there might be nothing lost from her explanation:

"But I understood that you were mourning for your mother a half dozen years ago?" To which the older Miss Knollys replied: "You seem to know a great deal of our family history." But to which Lucetta answered: "Our father was to blame for that. He wished to make any return on her part impossible."

I could understand this, but I could not understand the persistent revenge of their injured neighbor.

"You must have a virulent enemy in the man who so threatened you," I said. "Is he a leading man in the town and does he still hold that terror over your heads?"

"If he knew she was buried here," said Miss Knoylls, "he would brand us as forger's children in the public press. I don't know why he cherishes such hatred; it is abnormal."

"And his name?" I asked.

"Is Obadiah Trohm; he is our next-door neighbor."

At this name uttered in such a connection I felt a curious sensation of unexpected shock and doubt. I looked at the girls again, and wondered how any one could have associated them even in thought, with crime. And then I remembered that it was the brother who was suspected, and waiving the subject which had just engrossed us, I said:

"And yet the disappearance of Silly Rufus is not explained. Why has this road earned such a title as Lost Man's Lane?"

"I cannot say," moaned Miss Knollys. "It is another horror of our dreadful lives."

"You know that men do disappear hereabouts?"

"Alas!" she murmured.

"Why does your brother then leave you here, to share the odium of so ill-omened a place. Has he no consideration for your youth and innocence?"

"My brother has no money," answed Lucetta. "We are obliged to stay where we have a roof to cover us. He is not to be blamed; he is good in every way."

And so my path was again blocked, and I saw that I should be obliged to go to extremities if only to satisfy public opinion that all was right with these young people.

HOW FACES ARE MADE

A PHYSICIAN ON THE CAUSES OF FACIAL EXPRESSION.

An Interesting Treatise on the Physiognomy of Various Classes of People. Variety is the Spice of Life and the Promoter of Usefulness.

Dr. Louis Robinson, an English physician famous for original and entertaining ideas about human nature, is the author of a remarkably interesting article in Blackwood's Magazine, entitled, "Trades and Faces."

It is admitted that a man's trade or profession affects his facial expression. Thus all whose lives are spent with horses tend to develop a very distinct type of face. The rule holds good of nearly every trade, but in few is the type so marked as in this. Perhaps the soldier type is as distinct as the horsey. Non-commissioned officers of the British army who serve for very long periods all look nearly alike. Even bakers and printers have each a trade expression.

The processes which produce these results are understood to some extent, but their working is variable. One chief reason for this is that digestion has a very important bearing on facial expression. In the man of good digestion the emotions are more plainly expressed on the face than in the man of weak digestion. A man may be a vile sinner, but have the face of a saint or an ascetic merely because his digestion is bad.

While most drivers are affected by their contact with horses, all equine characteristics are dissolved by malt liquors in the case of the brewer's drayman. There is a popular belief that association with horses tends to develop cunning and deceitfulness, and if that is so beer may be a valuable antidote.

Dr. Robinson is inclined to think that the peculiarities generally observed in the hair of musicians are not entirely due to fashion, but may be the result of mental characteristics acting on the body.

Painters who have an ideal of beauty always before them tend to resemble it physically. Therefore a more classic cast of features is found in this than in any other profession. Landscape and genre painters are not subject to the same influence and resemble more closely the musician type. If Turner had been a figure painter he might not have been so ugly.

An actor, by the constant exercise of his facial muscles, acquires a mask-like expression. This is frequently enhanced by an even layer of subcutaneous fat—the result of emotional stimulation of a constantly varying character. One of the consequences of this exercise of the facial muscles is that actors retain an extraordinary youthfulness of aspect throughout their lives. If you want to acquire perpetual youth exercise your face in depicting constantly varying emotions.

Dr. Robinson seems to think that the middle-aged actress retains her youthfulness much longer than another woman of the same age under the most fortunate domestic conditions.

The blacksmith acquires a permanent frown. He may do this partly to protect his eyes, but the man who holds the iron does not scowl as the striker does. Riveters and boiler makers have an intent and fixed expression. Dr. Robinson was once a surgeon in a town inhabited by them. At first he thought he had provoked their general animosity, but afterward learned that it was only the facial expression of the trade.

WAYS OF GUILELESS DRUGGISTS.

Advice of One to His Assistant Regarding the Way to Success in Business.

"I noticed," said the druggist to his assistant, "that a gentleman came in with a prescription and that you took it and gave him the stuff in about three minutes. What do you mean by that?"

"It was only a little carbolic acid and water," replied the assistant. "I simply had to pour a few drams of acid into the bottle and fill it up with water."

"Never mind if you only had to do that," the druggist declared. "Don't you know that every prescription must take at least half an hour to fill or the customer will think he isn't getting anything for his money? When a prescription for salt and water or peppermint and cough syrup is handed to you you must look at it doubtfully, as if it were very hard to make up. Then you must bring it to me, and we will both read it and shake our heads. After that you go back to the client and ask him if he wants it to-day. When he says he does you answer that you'll make a special effort.

"Now, a patient appreciates a prescription like that that he's had so much trouble over, and when he takes it he derives some benefit from it. But don't you do any more of that three-minute prescription business, my boy, if you want to become a first-class druggist."

A Time for Everything.

There used to live in this town a professor whose specialty was the training of fleas and similar small game. He got most of his stock from an Italian of lowly origin but great industry. One day, just about this time of year, the live stock of the show began to run low. The purveyor had not put in an appearance in several weeks and the professor started out to hunt him up. He was found on the Terrace, drawing a small cart containing an ice-cream freezer.

"Hello, Pietro!" said the professor. "Where have you been all this time? Why haven't you brought me any fleas?"

"Gooda weather now, Signor," explained Pietro. "No tima to hunta flea. Maka more mon' maka ice-cream."

SINGLE BLESSEDNESS.

A Marriage Need Not Be Downright Unhappy to Be Uncomfortable.

The best way to be happy if you are going to be single is to be born into a large family and to be compelled at an early age to earn your own living. I always wanted to be single. I liked the independence of that condition, and I always wanted to earn my own living, and my two desires have been gratified.

It has been my good fortune to have had others beside myself to take care of, and I think that that keeps one's mind off matrimony. I have preferred that people should be dependent upon me rather than that I should be dependent upon people, and I have had my preference. I have never been a "lone woman," for I have always lived with some of my family and I had for a time a brood of motherless children to look after. When their father took them, I missed them sadly. He left one with me, my niece, now a girl of fourteen years, whom I have had since she was five. I won't say that I would be very happy though single without her. My own child could not give me a greater interest in life, and I suppose that my feelings toward her are very much those of a mother. Then I have had brothers that I could always call upon for the thousand and one things that a woman needs a man to do for her.

Work and plenty of it goes far toward making a single woman happy. When I look about me I don't see so many married women whose lives are particularly happy. I could count all the happy marriages I know of in a very short time.

A marriage need not be downright unhappy to be uncomfortable. I look at a great many wives whose husbands are not unkind, but who do not get on with them very well, and I don't think that they are happy.

Happiness depends a good deal upon the disposition, and if an old maid has a cheerful disposition she will be happier than her married neighbor, who hasn't. I cannot understand how the simple fact of being unmarried can make a woman unhappy. I should think that there would have to be some better reason than that.

To me personally it has always been a matter of congratulation that I am an old maid. I was the same when I was a young maid. I have enjoyed life as much as most people and more than many, and have never felt lonesome. There has always been some one to bid me good luck when I go out and to welcome me when I come in. I might be cross and sour if I had not had the blessing of companionship.

If when I went out in the morning there was no one to wave me adieu, and if I came home to the welcome of a cat, I don't think that I should be very happy even though single. I have always had some one to be interested in and to be interested in me, and these are blessings without which matrimony cannot give happiness.

JEANETTE L. GILDER.

GARDEN OF EDEN DIET.

Composed Chiefly of Fruit and Recommended for Summer.

One wise woman in Chicago pins her faith both for herself and her daughter to a "Garden of Eden" breakfast every morning. The original idea was to eat nothing but fruit, but she found this diet insufficient; so she added a cereal and perhaps a graham cracker or two to the breakfast menu.

This fare, together with lemonade, orangeade, fruit juices or root beer to drink, rendered that family the envy of all their acquaintances. Figs, dates, prunes, stewed currants, and even dried apples can be made to do duty for this purpose, and it is surprising what an amount of nourishment and working strength can be extracted from a fruit diet.

Apples, oranges, shaddocks, bananas and canned fruit, of course, are excellent fare for spring, but the cheaper dried fruit are by no means to be despised.

In many places on the Continent black bread and a piece of watermelon, cucumber, or onion is the standard breakfast—oftentimes the dinner and supper, too—of the average workingman.

Our own Western children are good proof of what flesh and bone can be built on a steady diet of corn meal. Oatmeal is a little too heavy, and rice, cracked or whole, hominy, or yellow corn meal should be substituted for breakfast. The more of these dishes, served with fruit and cream, you can eat throughout the day, the sooner you will have forgotten that you have ever been ill.—Chicago Record.

Same Old Fish.

A Lewiston man tells the most startling fish story.

Four years ago he was fishing at Lake Auburn with a long silk line and a hook of his own manufacture. In the afternoon of one May day he hooked a monster salmon which came to the surface three or four times and then broke the line under the keel of the boat. One day, recently, he was up there fishing, and about five hundred yards south of the island hooked a salmon which he pulled in by the aid of a scoop net. Embedded in the lower jaw was his own hand made hook.—Lewiston Evening Journal.

He Deserved Chiding.

"How long have you been a Pullman porter?" said the kindly gentleman.

"Two yeah, sah."

"And still working?"

"Yaas, indeed."

"Dear me. How improvident you must have been."—Detroit Free Press.

CHURCH INVITES BICYCLISTS.

They May Go in Their Riding Togs, and Their Wheels Will Be Cared For.

Sunday bicyclists will be welcomed in the Church of the Redeemer in Astoria, the leading Episcopal church in Long Island City.

Dr. Cooper began his address a recent Sunday morning in these words:

"Young men, if you must ride bicycles on Sundays, come to church, no matter if you are attired in riding costume. We will make you welcome and I will make arrangements to have your wheels taken care of during services. Two sons of a communicant of this church went bicycling one Sunday recently.

"Before leaving their mother told them not to return until they had been to church. They arrived at the church door here dressed in bicycle costume shortly after service began. There wheels were taken care of, and they were escorted to the rector's pew, and it pleased me to see them there. Do not stay away from church Sundays because you ride a bicycle. Bring the wheel to church with you."

Catarrh starts in the nasal passages, affecting eyes, ears and throat, and is in fact, the great enemy of the mucous membrane. Neglected colds in the head almost invariably precede catarrh, causing an excessive flow of mucous, and if the mucous discharge becomes interrupted the disagreeable results of catarra will follow, such as bad breath, severe pain across forehead and about the eyes, a roaring and buzzing sound in the ears and oftentimes a very offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles.

The night clerk at the hotel where he was stopping happened to have a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and gave him three doses which relieved him and he thinks saved his life. Every family should keep this remedy in their home at all times. No one can tell how soon it may be needed. It costs but a trifle and may be the means of saving much suffering and perhaps the life of some member of the family. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. While at Peekskill, N. Y., Mr. J. A. Scriven, a prominent manufacturer of New York City, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. When you have a cough or cold give this preparation a trial and like Mr. Scriven you will want it when again in need of such a medicine. It is a remedy of great worth and merit. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

TO DO MORE ACTIVE WORK.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS HOLD AN ENTHUSIASTIC RALLY.

Timely and Practical Suggestions As to the Most Effective Plans to Be Pursued Are Discussed.

A very lively and profitable June rally of the local Christian Endeavor union was held in the Crescent Avenue church last evening. The attendance was excellent and the service very interesting. The main thought during the meeting was how a Christian Endeavorer should spend vacation time.

A chorus choir of one hundred voices, under the efficient leadership of H. J. Martin, rendered excellent music.

The service was opened by the singing of "Coronation," after which Rev. C. E. Herring offered prayer. The selection "How Firm a Foundation" was then sung, and Mr. Herring read the Scripture selection. A pleasing feature followed when the State Christian Endeavor hymn, "Forward Endeavorers," was sung by those in attendance.

President E. E. Anthony presided, and in opening stated the object of the meeting and gave many pointed and helpful suggestions. He then introduced Rev. C. E. Herring, who gave a ten-minute address on "How to spend vacation."

He told in an interesting and practical way how a Christian Endeavorer could spend their vacation with profit by enthusing the Christian Endeavor spirit into those who knew little or nothing of the society.

The singing of the new hymn, "Boston, '95," was heartily joined in by all.

A short business session followed, during which Secretary Miss Florence Hawkins read the minutes of the previous meeting, which were approved.

Then came an interesting part of the programme, when the Christian Endeavor society of the Crescent Avenue church was admitted to the Union. The Endeavorers sang "Blest Be the Tie," while all joined hands.

A very instructive and helpful feature was the open parliament led by E. E. Anthony. The same line of thought of how to spend vacation was the subject. The responses were quick and interesting and the ten minutes passed all too quickly.

Among the suggestions were that a Christian Endeavor society be established at a boarding house or hotel, and that those living at that place be made to feel an interest. Another was that no Christian Endeavorer should go where they could not take Christ. One Endeavorer present told how a friend had started a society during vacation. She had sought the acquaintance of a friend, and interested her in the work. She became converted, and she in turn sought another friend, and in this way a strong society was formed. Mr. Anthony spoke at the close and threw out additional hints and suggestions.

During the offertory Miss Bessie Blair rendered in a very acceptable manner a soprano solo, "Clinging to the Crucified." She was accompanied on the organ by Howard Case, who was the organist of the evening.

HID IN THE HAYMOW.

But Constable Walpole, of Scotch Plains, Couldn't Be Fooled.

Neils Winters, of Scotch Plains, was arrested by Constable Robert Walpole at that place last night, charged with maliciously breaking down the fence and back-stop of the Scotch Plains baseball club.

The constable went to the home of his employer and asked if Winters was home, and was told that he was not. A search was then made about the premises, and after much difficulty he was discovered in the haymow of the barn.

He was brought to Plainfield and taken before Justice Newcorn, who, after hearing his story, held him $100 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mrs. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else, then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottle at Randolph's drug store. Regular size, 50c and $1.

A few neighbors who are interested in school matters were also present. It was a charming affair and an evening of genuine sociability was spent, during which Mrs. Martin I. Cooley sang a very pretty soprano solo.

Refreshments were served during the evening. Those present were:

Principal and Mrs. C. E. Boss, Mr. and Mrs. Loomis, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Waring, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wells, Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Overton, J. H. MUST LEAVE TOWN.

Henry Nolan is Not a Good Citizen for Plainfield.

On complaint of John J. Reed, Policeman Frederickson arrested Henry Nolan last night at the place of the former in Netherwood. Mr. Reed appeared this morning against Nolan, charging him with using profane language and acting in a disorderly manner. Nolan claimed he was not guilty and that he acted like a gentleman, while Mr. Reed said that he had discharged Nolan and he had come back from New York, where he went with his wife, and was very disorderly. Judge Coddington suspended sentence with the proviso that he leave town immediately, which he promised to do.

Look Out for Her.

A young woman, dressed in mourning and of pleasing appearance, is going about Elizabeth collecting money for the new building which, she says, is to be erected in connection with Weitminster Hope chapel. The people of Elizabeth and vicinity are warned that she has no authority whatever to collect funds. The building was opened last October, consequently there is no new building to be erected, and the young woman is collecting money on false pretenses.

All friends and patrons of the club and boys are asked to be present at these closing exercises.

Want Wagons To Carry Lights.

Lanterns on bicycles flash about the streets now like fireflies, though the ordinance has not yet become operative. In fact, the ordinance has not yet passed its third reading, and there is yet a chance for the wheelmen to make an effort to secure their rights by urging the city council to include all passenger-carrying vehicles in the provisions of the ordinance.—Elizabeth Journal.

JENNIE WAS A SCORCHER.

THE PARKINSON GIRL GAVE MARSHAL VAN HORN A RACE.

She Stole $18 From Between the Sheets, And When the Officer Went to Arrest Her She Took French Leave.

It is not very often that the quiet little borough of North Plainfield is disturbed to any great extent, but this morning such was the case and it was a lively time, too.

Willard Smith, who lives on Greenbrook road, reported to Chief Marshal VanHorn that Jennie Parkinson, a seventeen year old servant girl in the employ of his father at the house on Greenbrook road, had extracted $18 from beneath the sheets of his bed where he kept his pocketbook every night.

The chief went over to the house to get the girl and told her that she was wanted and that she must get ready to go with him. She asked for permission to go to her room, and while the chief was talking to Mrs. Smith, the girl took French leave out of the back door and the chief reached there just in time to see her escape. He gave chase at once but the fleet-footed maiden was a considerable distance ahead and as the two sped on they came no closer together. Through Wilson avenue to Chestnut street to Harrison street the duo traveled and then the chief thought that by crossing a lot he could catch the girl but he failed.

John Hensey, the painter, with his horse and wagon was seen passing by and the chief jumped into the wagon and asked the owner to drive fast so he could capture the flyaway, but after a few blocks had been covered the horse lost his wind, and the knight of the club had to continue on foot.

He followed the girl around Rockview terrace, Mercer, Myrtle and Giraud avenues, but faster and faster she kept moving. He then met John H. Kitchen with a horse and surrey and his rig and services were called into service, and the chase was renewed.

In the meantime the girl had gained on them by fifteen minutes, and the chief and Mr. Kitchen followed. They went by way of Grant avenue and when Clinton avenue was reached they saw the girl and taking courage urged the horse on. Chief VanHorn took off his hat so the girl would not recognize him and then when they got near her he asked Mr. Kitchen to get out and catch her, which he accommodatingly did. She was brought to the borough station house and locked up.

Dog War in Elizabeth.

The slaughter of unlicensed and unmuzzled dogs began at Elizabeth, yesterday. The police were the executioners, and two squads, armed with shotguns, went about the streets all day and killed sixty canines of various kinds. The carcasses filled two big wagons. Some valuable dogs which their owners neglected to muzzle were among the slain, and the angry owners threaten to bring suits against the city. The Chief of Police, Lenney, says the crusade will be kept up until every dog roaming about the streets without a muzzle or tag is put out of the way.

A Reconciliation.

The trouble between Henry H. Isham, of Brooklyn, the former large land-holder in Elizabeth, and his wife, Juliet Calhoun Isham, which led to divorce proceedings being instituted by Mr. Isham in a Brooklyn court, has been amicably settled and all further proceedings in the matter have been discontinued. This explains why Mrs. Isham signed her consent to the big transfer of real-estate held by her husband in Union county to Judge P. H. Gilhooly, of Elizabeth.

WIDOWS WORDY WAR

Rushed the Duck and Brought Up in Police Court.

Mrs. Nora Edmunds and Mrs. Monica Moffett, widows, living in the Boulevard, met last evening and exchanged some personal remarks that resulted in a fistic encounter.

Previous to this episode they had been "chasing the duck" and were in good condition mentally to administer the proper doses of oral invective, but physically they were not so capable of indulging in the necessary adjuncts of pugilistic blows incident to wrathy minds. Policeman Flanagan arrested the women, and when they appeared before Judge Coddington their tongues were let loose and they told the Judge all they knew and some they didn't know. The latter finally told them that if there was any further trouble he would send them to jail, and the only thing that prevented that decision was the fact that they had children, but that would cut no figure next time. They were placed under $100 bonds to keep the peace.

SAID HOKE SMITH FIRED HIM.

This, Together With Too Much Gin, Got Him in Trouble.

Policeman Cooney arrested John T. Ballard about seven o'clock last evening for being drunk and using profane language on North avenue. This morning the culprit appeared before Judge Coddington. He said that he was sixty-two years old, and that he had never been drunk before, and was taking gin for an injury which he had received sometime ago from a horse kick. He also stated that he had held a position under the Harrison administration, but when Hoke Smith got in he fired him out. He was an old stage driver and was widely known.

The judge suspended sentence and told him to leave town at once. The old vet was crippled in both feet and had trouble in walking.

GOV. WERTS REAPPOINTS.

The Most of Those Rejected By the Senate Last Week.

Gov. Werts yesterday appointed ad interim all the nominees whose names were sent by him to the Senate during the recent session of the Legislature, and whom the Senate refused to confirm, reserving only for further consideration the nominations of F. A. Canfield for State Assessor, and Chandler W. Riker for Circuit Court Judge.

The Governor disapproved the Prerogative Court Fee, and the New Brunswick Mayoralty bills, declaring both unconstitutional.

Kickers Still Kick.

The Westfield Township Committee met Monday night. Owing to the various law suits on hand, and other affairs, there was a large attendance of citizens. Chairman Gardiner reported that many complaints had been made to him about the streets being blocked for the past two weeks by the sewer excavations. The contractor stated that the work of filling in would be commenced Tuesday. The matter of under-drains along the sewer was brought up, and as the specifications concerning them are vague in the contracts, a resolution was passed that they be laid wherever the engineer thought necessary. This is an element of expense not mentioned in the original estimate of cost.

Barry Proclaims Innocence.

Michael Barry, who has been accused of planning the escape of the eight prisoners from the Middlesex County Jail, has written a letter for publication denying this charge and others. Barry is in jail charged with incendiarism and robbery. The three tramps, Williams, Fisher and Kelly, who were alleged to have been his accomplices, escaped last week and are still free. Without them the State has a poor case against Barry, it is said.

Had No Home.

Policeman Frederickson found a man wandering aimlessly about the streets at a late hour last night and upon inquiry learned that he had been working for Milkman Barrett, near Dunellen, and had lost his job. He had no home and did not know where to go. Mr. Frederickson finally secured a night's lodging for him at the Hotel Grenada.

THE CANTATA PRESENTED.

"OUT IN THE WOODS" ACTED BY IRVING SCHOOL STUDENTS.

A Large Audience Present—The Profits to Be Devoted to Replenshing the Library—The Participants.

This is the great season of the year for picnics and the cantata, "Out in the Woods," which was given in the Irvig School hall last evening, came most appropriately. The object of the entertainment was to supply funds for enlarging the library and the worthy cause, combined with the promise of a most enjoyable evening, completely filled the hall, while many stood around the sides of the room. Tasteful decorations of greens and red, white and blue bunting greatly changed the appearance of the hall and the bright faces of the pupils added much to the effect.

Miss Hattie Filmer acted as conductor of the singing, with Miss L. W. Stillman as accompanist. The programme opened with an enjoyable selection by Mrs. F. A. Pollock, piano; J. Z. Petrie, violin; F. A. Pollock, flute. A pretty duet by Miss E. C. Benz, zither, and J. Z. Petrie, violin, followed.

The story of the cantata was very simple. A number of children, under the guidance of Grandma, Miss Annie Peterson, go out to spend a day in the woods. Miss Bertha Mitchell is chosen queen and sings. Then while the girls are singing and playing the boys go out, but soon return with the startling news that there are a strange little people near at hand, and scarcely have they finished telling their experiences when the strange creatures, which prove to be the planets, come in sight and march upon the stage, and each recites a selection about himself; then they march out again. More singing by the children is in progress when a thunder storm approaches and they take shelter in a neighboring house.

The artifical thunder crashes, while the electric lights turned rapidly on and off, again serve as lightning. The storm passes over and the children return. During these last scenes there were songs by Miss Annie Kinsman, Miss Mabel Ayers and Miss Emma Craig, and recitations by Miss Maggie Burke, Miss Carrie Haffner, Miss Edith Robinson and Miss Bessie Walls.

A little gypsy girl, Miss Nettie Haffner, joins them after the storm and sings of her life in the forest, but while they are singing to her she disappears. Here recitations are given by Miss Wenona Dodds and Miss Maggie Porter. The girls go in search of the gypsy girl, while the boys remain, and Cyrus Kinsman, Arthur Utzinger and George Whitely give a song and recitation. The girls reenter with the gypsy and after more singing join in their parting song, and thus ends the holiday in the woods. The various planets were represented by the following:

Jupiter, Lester Woodruff; Moon, Miss Sophia Saums; Earth, James Gray; Venus, Miss May Batchelor; Uranus, Miss Jessie Stewart; Neptune, Fred Soper; Saturn, Percy Hand; Mercury, Miss Cathie Rocap; Mars, Paul Otto; and Cornet, Irven De Hart.

During the intermission in the cantata, there was a flute solo by F. A. Pollock, which was executed in his usual masterly manner, a vocal selection charmingly rendered by Miss Hattie Filmer, and an amusing recitation by Miss M. E. Winters, who kept her audience in roars of laughter with the selection "Apples."

The affair was under the supervision of Miss Genevieve Petrie, whose energetic efforts were ably seconded by the other teachers.

In the first part of the evening the electric current seemed to be a minus quantity, and an attempt was made to light the hall with lamps, but the current reappeared and all went on smoothly, and in a manner reflecting great credit upon the originators.

Camp Hand Enthusiastic.

John Hand Camp, No. 28, S. of V., met last evening and completed arrangements for the Fourth of July celebration. Letters were read from out of town camps, giving assurance that they would be present to join the parade. Division Commander J. E. Pierson and staff, of Hopewell, will also be present. Chairman V. W. Nash attended the meeting and gave a stirring address to the boys, making them enthusiastic. It was decided to ask the Women's Relief Corps to assist the camp in entertaining their guests.

The First to Start.

The Omer C. Moore Association have already commenced to build their float for the Fourth of July parade.

The banks of the canal are lined with troops. All traffic has been stopped on account of the ceremonies to-day.

HONORS TO THE GLADSTONES.

Visited by the King and Queen of Denmark---Toasts Exchanged.

Copenhagen, June 19.—In response to the invitation of Sir Donald Currie, the king and queen of Denmark yesterday afternoon visited Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone on board the steamer Tantallon Castle. Their majesties were accompanied by the crown prince and crown princess, the Danish prime minister and the British ambassador. At a banquet which was given on board the steamer the king offered a toast in honor of Queen Victoria and Mr. Gladstone toasted the Queen of Denmark. In offering the toast Mr. Gladstone dwelt upon the kindred affection existing between the royal families of England and Demark and said that the Princess of Wales, by qualities of heart and character, had earned the unfading esteem and affection of the British people.

Toasted by the King.

After Mr. Gladstone had concluded his remarks the king warmly shook him by the hand across the table and, rising, briefly toasted the ex-premier and his wife. Mr. Gladstone responded at some length, making courtly references to the czar and other relatives of the Danish royal family, and expressing wishes for the health and happiness of their majesties and the prosperity of their country. The royal party and their entertainers were afterwards photographed in a group.

ILLINOIS LEGISLATURE.

An Extra Session Called To Attend to Urgent Matters.

Springfield, Ill., June 19.—Governor Altgeld has issued a call for an extra session of the legislature to convene on June 25, 1895, at 2 o'clok p. m. The call recites that the tax levy, made by the thirty-ninth general assembly, is inadequate, in view of the appropriations made; that the revenue system of the state needs revision and that the jury system needs reforming and that the prison labor problem needs the attention of the legislature.

ZEKE PROCTOR KILLED.

Once a Bad Indian, He Has Killed Many Men Himself.

Guthrie, O. T., June 10.—Zeke Proctor was killed near Talequah yesterday while attempting to arrest a criminal. Proctor was a Cherokee Indian and formerly a noted outlaw. He has killed over a score of men and was so feared that the Cherokee nation and United States government ten years ago made a treaty of peace with him which he kept, having since been a good citizen. He was a Cherokee sheriff for three years.

LORD COLIN CAMPBELL DEAD.

He Figured in One of London's Most Famous Divorce Suits.

Bombay, June 19.—Lord Colin Campbell, fourth son of the Duke of Argyll, a captain in the Bombay rifle volunteer corps, is dead. The cause of his death was pneumonia. Lord Campbell figured in one of the most unsavory divorce suits ever brought into a London court. He brought the suit against his wife, naming as co-respondents the late Duke of Marlborough and Gen. Sir William Butler, husband of that distinguished lady who painted the "Roll Call."

His Shameful Conduct.

The petition was denied and the court granted Lady Colin of any statutory right, the decree not being denied so much as any overpowering proof of her guilt as by the antipathy aroused in every decent man's breast by the shameful conduct of Lord Colin to his wife. Lord Colin became bankrupt soon after his marriage and went to India where he practiced law. Lady Colin is said to be one of the most brilliant women in England. She entered journalism some years ago and started a periodical called "Realm." She is considered very handsome.

NEWFOUNDLAND SITUATION.

The Government's Loan Bill Blunder Severely Criticised.

St. Johns, N. F., June 19.—The government's blunder about the loan bill has caused much unfavorable criticism. The prospect of its damaging the chances of the loan altogether is being discussed generally, but well informed authorities say there is no likelihood of this, although investors can scarcely be favorably impressed with this exhibition of the government's abilities. Yesterday's executive meeting lasted all day and there was much telegraphing with Colonial Secretary Bond in London in an endeavor to set the matter right before the meeting of the assembly to-day.

Obligations Mature June 30.

The danger feared is that the 30th of June will arrive before the mishap is adjusted. On that day the government's outstanding obligations mature, and a failure to meet them would cause the colony's insolvency. But the syndicate will doubtless supply the money, as the government is willing enough to safeguard their rights by passing the necessary statute.

THE COLORADO DEFALCATION.

Facts Concerning the Acts of Aldrich---Sufferers in the East.

Denver, Col., June 19.—The disappearance of Henry J. Aldrich, president and general manager of the Colorado Security company, after an indictment had been found against him by the grand jury for misappropriation of funds believed to aggregate between $400,000 and $500,000, is causing a great sensation in Colorado. Widows and orphans in the east whose earnings and savings were entrusted to the company for investment at a high rate of interest are the heaviest losers. W. E. Hinnan, of Boston, now here representing eastern creditors, says that the Equitable Loan company of New York is one of the heaviest losers.

DISCHARGE OF UNION MEN.

The Missouri Law Forbidding It Declared Unconstitutional.

Jefferson City, Mo., June 19.—In the supreme court Judge Sherwood filed an opinion declaring unconstitutional the law forbidding the discharge by corporations of employes who refuse to sever their connections with labor organizations. This law was enacted two years ago and provides penalties ranging from a fine of $50 to $1,000 and six months' imprisonment. The court holds that this law is class legislation. A non-union man could be discharged without notice and the law would not interfere, while a union man could not be discharged if his discharge was based upon his connection with a union.

HIS OUTFIT EXHIBITED.

Great Interest Displayed in England in the Case of Forger Howard.

London, June 19.—The plant of Mendal Howard, the American forger, consisting of a quantity of engraved plates and other material for forging notes, was displayed in a private chamber in the Old Bailey yesterday for the benefit of the grand jury. A number of French, German and Belgian witnesses were examined by the grand jury. The American expert, who is to testify at the trial, has not yet arrived. The case has excited great interest in financial and mercantile circles.

REGARDED AS REFUSAL

Turkey's Latest Reply to the Powers' Demands.

Denial of Their Rights Under the Treaty of Berlin---Feared That the Powers Will Adopt More Urgent Measures---Movements of British Ships and Turkish Troops.

Constantinople, June 19.—The Turkish government, in its latest reply to the note of the powers outlining the reforms insisted upon for Armenia, accepts the principle of the proposed reforms, and requests that several of the points be discussed before any action is taken. The porte also denies that the terms of the treaty of Berlin confer the right of demanding the guarantee formulated by the powers, and expresses the hope that the sultan's sovereign rights will not be prejudiced.

Regarded as a Refusal.

The impression prevails here that this reply is tantamount to a refusal, and it is feared that the powers will adopt more urgent measures to enforce their demands. The British Mediterranean squadron, which arrived at Beirout on June 3, has sailed from that port for Tripoli. Reinforcements of Russian troops, it has now been definitely ascertained, have been sent to the Turkish frontier in the vicinity of Armenia, in order, it is said, to prevent the passage of marauders and supplies of arms and ammunition.

LYNCHINGS IN THIS COUNTRY.

A Discussion by the British Woman's Temperance Association.

London, June 19.—The meeting yesterday afternoon in the City Temple of the British Woman's Temperance association was largely attended. Miss Florence Balgarnie accused Miss Frances E. Willard, president of the Woman's Christian Temperance union, and the Woman's Christian Temperance union of America, of being apologists for the lynchings in the southern parts of the United States, but both Miss Willard and the American Christian Temperance union were exonerated from the charges by Miss Willard and other delegates, and a resolution to that effect was carried unanimously. The resolution said that the council emphatically believed that the American Woman's Christian Temperance union maintained towards the lynching question the same attitude as other Christian bodies—namely, that under no circumstances must human life be taken without process of law. Lady Henry Somerset was re-elected president of the British Woman's Temperance association.

FITZ TO BE TRIED MONDAY.

Must Answer for the Death of Con Riordan at Syracuse.

Syracuse, June 19.—The trial of the case of Robert Fitzsimmons, the pugilist, indicted for manslaughter and causing the death of Con Riordan, his sparring partner, while performing in a theatre here, is set for next Monday. His local counsel, John McLennon and Charles E. Ide, will be assisted in the defense by lawyer E. M Friend, of New York. Fitzsimmons' representative in the arrangements for his coming battle with Corbett. The defense will probably rest their case on medical testimony to the effect that a blow did not cause death. Fitzsimmons, who is now in New York, under bonds for his appearance for trial, has been notified by his counsel. His lawyers confidently expect an acquittal.

"HELP!"

A WOMAN'S DESPAIRING CRY.

It is Heard. A Prominent Actress Escapes Great Danger.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

How startling is a woman's cry for help!

"What can I do? Where shall I go?" She knows not. This cry goes out today from every city, town, and hamlet in this country.

It comes from women who are suffering tortures of body and mind from some form of female complaint. Many, through natural modesty, do not consult physicians, for many dread their examinations. They know not where to seek for help.

This alarming condition of things is simply wrong. The peculiar ailments of women are curable, and in most cases very speedily. Lydia E. Pinkham's genius and liberality have given to every woman a sure and convenient means of relief.

No woman should suffer when she can obtain free advice. She can state her case fully to Mrs. Pinkham, woman to woman, without reserve, and the answer will come from one of her own sex. Be one of the vast army of women who write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., and preserve your health. "Only a woman can understand a woman's ills."

A prominent actress, in a letter to Mrs. Pinkham, says:—

"... You cannot imagine the fearful condition I was in when I first wrote to you. I was simply of no use to myself or any one else. I had worked hard, and my nervous system was shattered from womb trouble and travelling constantly. I ran the gauntlet of doctors' theories, till my health and money were rapidly vanishing. ... I'm all right now, and am gaining flesh daily. I follow your advice faithfully in everything. Thank you ten thousand times for what your knowledge and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have done for me."

Gomez Burns Many Houses at Alta Gracia.

The Garrison Made a Stout Defense and Lost Five Killed—Campos Declares the Province of Puerto Principe Under Martial Law — Insurgents Repulsed by Col. Caunelas.

Havana, June 19.—Maximo Gomez has attacked Alta Gracia and burned the railroad station and many other houses. The garrison of the place, consisting of twenty-five soldiers, made a stout defense, losing five killed and seven wounded. The sergeant who was in command of the detachment has been promoted for his bravery.

Under Martial Law.

Owing to unexpected events, Captain General Martinez de Campos has reconsidered his decision, and has proclaimed the province of Puerto Principe to be under martial law. During the nights of June 15 and 16 an outpost of the Spanish troops at Puerto Principe was fired upon by the rebels. One soldier was killed and one was wounded.

Insurgents Repulsed.

Colonel Canellas has had several engagements with the insurgents at Filipinas, Vueltas, Costas, Passo and Songo des Bocas, repulsing the insurgents, who had seven men killed. Among the dead was Colonel Lugo. A quantity of arms and ammunition was captured. The government troops had one man killed and twelve wounded.

THE BEHRING SEA BILL.

A Warning to the House of Commons by Sir Edward Grey.

London, June 19.—The Behring sea bill passed its second reading in the house of commons after Robert W. Hanbury, member for Preston, and George R. Bethell, member for the Holderness division of Yorkshire, had expressed dissatisfaction with some of the details of the new measure. To their objections Sir Edward Grey replied that the only changes made in the bill, as compared with the first Behring sea bill, were introduced in order to meet the suggestions of Canada on the subject The bill did not raise new questions regarding the seal fisheries, and he warned the house that if the government was not allowed to carry out the agreement with Russia very serious questions would arise respecting the western Pacific.

OCEAN STEAMSHIP RIVALRY.

A Question in the Commons About Pauncefote's Praise of the St. Louis.

London, June 19.—The parliamentary secretary of the foreign office, Sir Edward Grey, replying to Anthony J. C. Donelan, member for the east division of Cork, in the house of commons, who asked whether the government was aware that Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British ambassador at Washington, had signed a resolution stating that the new American liner St. Louis had demonstrated the inauguration under American auspices of a new era in the history of ocean traffic, and if he knew that such a statement was detrimental to British interests, said that he must take a longer time to consider the question.

WHISKEY TRUST DISCOVERIES.

Results of Examination of Greenhut's Letters and Telegrams.

Peoria, Ill., June 19.—It is stated here that important discoveries have been made from the examination of the letters and telegrams of J. B. Greenhut, former president of the whiskey trust, and that startling disclosures may be expected. A Peoria distiller said to-day that he thought the attack on Schufeldt's distilleries was a feint designed to influence the court, and he did not beleive the former owners of the plant had anything to do with it.

MAIDEN TRIP OF VALKYRIE III.

It Is Demonstrated That She Is Not a Light Wind Boat.

Glasgow, June 19.—Valkyrie III., the challenger for the America's cup, started on her maiden trip yesterday. Lord Dunraven and the designer of the yacht, George L. Watson, were on board of her. There was little wind blowing across the Clyde, and the general opinion formed after the performance of Valkyrie III. was that she will not prove to be a light wind boat.

Laid to Union Sympathizers.

Anderson, Ind., June 19.—An attempt was made Monday night to blow up the $40,000 Masonic temple which is under construction. There has been a fight which resulted in the building of the temple by non-union workmen and it is believed by a few that union sympathizers did the work.

Baseball Rumor Denied.

Philadelphia, June 19.—The published report that the release of Reilly, the third baseman of the Philadelphia club, has been purchased by President Freedman and that he would hereafter cover third base for the New York club, is denied by the Philadelphia club officials.

The New London Celebration.

New London, Conn., June 19.—The veterans in attendance at the reunion of the Grand Army of the Potomac started this morning on an excursion into Long Island sound as guests of the city. Upon their return a banquet will be given at the Pequod.

Death of Major John Poe.

Richmond, Va., June 19.—Major John Poe, chief of police of this city for many years and a veteran of the Mexican war and the war between the states, is dead.

SUGAR BOUNTY CLAIMS.

Believed That the Appropriation Is Not Sufficient.

Washington, June 19.—The last congress appropriated $236,000 to pay accrued sugar bounties and $5,000,000 to pay bounties on sugars produced between Aug. 28, 1894, and June 30, 1895, and regulations and forms for the filing of claims for both classes of bounties were approved yesterday at the treasury department by Secretary Carlisle and will be issued in printed form by the collectors of internal revenue of the several districts on and after July 1 next.

Appropriation Not Sufficient.

All the accrued sugar bounty claims will be paid in full, but it is not believed that the $5,000,000 appropriated for the payment of bounties on sugars produced between Aug. 28, 1894, and June 30, 1895 will be sufficient to pay the bounties of this class in full.

Claims May Be Pro Rated.

If this should be the case the claims will be pro rated and instead of receiving eight-tenths of a cent a pound for the sugar produced, as contemplated by the act of congress, producers will receive only seven-tents of a cent a pound or six tenths, as the case may be.

May Not Be Settled Until December.

The regulations issued prescribe that each producer of sugar in the United States preferring a claim for sugar bounty must, in filing his claim, state whether the sugar was produced from cane, beets or sorghum, within the territory of the United States, and that he was not engaged in refining sugar while he was a producer of sugar. It will probably be Dec. 1 before the sugar bounty is fully paid, perhaps even later.

WILL THE MATCH FAIL?

Johnson Now Refuses To Race at Asbury Park.

New York, June 19.—There is another hitch in the Johnson-Zimmerman proposed bicycle race for $10,000—$5,000 a side, and it is believed that the match will fall through. Eck, Johnson's manager, will not allow his man to race at Asbury Park, and is sustained by many people, as it is charged the Asbury Park people are intense partisans of Zimmerman. Johnson's manager asserts he is ready and axious to race the Jersey rider anywhere he names outside of Asbury Park.

Says Eck Is a Bluffer.

Asbury Park, N. J., June 19.—The belief here to-day is that the Zimmerman Johnson bicycle race for $10,000, which was announced to take place at Asbury Park on July 10, is off. Joseph McDermott, Zimmerman's brother-in-law, was here on time to meet Eck and was prepared to deposit Zimmerman's money on the match. When shown Eck's telegram he said that Eck was a bluffer and was afraid to match his man against Zimmerman.

ANOTHER STAY FOR LAMBERT.

The Condemned Murderer Is Safe Until October.

Trenton, N. J., June 19.—John L. Semple, counsel for Wm. Lambert, who killed William Kairer, a baker at Camden, has succeded in getting a stay in the case. Lambert has been twice sentenced to death and he was to have gone to the gallows on the 27th inst. on a warrant issued by Gov. Werts several weeks ago. Counsellor Semple appeared before Judge Green of the federal court yesterday afternoon and applied for a writ of habeas corpus on several technical grounds, one being that the order of Judge Shiras staying the execution when it was first fixed had never been vacated. Judge Green refused to grant the application and Counsellor Semple gave notice of appeal. The case, therefore, goes to the United States supreme court for the second time, and it cannot be argued until October next.

MAY BREAK YALE'S RECORD.

U. of P. Crew Rowed in Better Time at Poughkeepsie.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 19.—Many of the oarsmen who are to row in the race between Cornell, Columbia and the University of Pennsylvania on Friday, expect to see the world's record of 20:10, now held by Yale, lowered in that race. The Poughkeepsie course is believed to be considerably better. It is said, on good authority, that the Pennsylvania crew had made the four miles in a few seconds less than twenty minutes, and if the Quakers do as well on Friday, Cornell will have to do some tall hustling to beat them.

EIGHTY HOUSES BURNED.

Tottenham, Ont., Almost Entirely Wiped Out by Fire.

Tottenham, Ont., June 19.—This town was almost entirely destroyed by fire last evening. Eighty houses are in ashes and business paralyzed. The fire started in McKinney's foundry and, fanned by a strong wind, spread rapidly east and south. Albert, Richmond, Victoria and Mill streets were swept clean on both sides together with a large portion of Queen street.

$40,000 FOR LAIDLAW.

A Verdict Against Russell Sage for Personal Injuries.

New York, June 19.—The jury in the suit of William R. Laidlaw against millionaire Russell Sage for $50,000 damages for personal injuries awarded the plaintiff a verdict for $40,000, after being out only thirty-five minutes. Laidlaw claimed that Sage used him for a shield at the time Norcross exploded the dynamite bomb in Sage's office.

Carl Browne Secures Bail.

Massillion, O., June 19.—When J. S. Coxey retired from Carl Browne's bond on account of Browne's marriage to Miss Coxey, he thought there was no hope of Carl's escaping a prison cell, but the newly married man has managed to get six of the leading populists of Canton to give bail for his appearance at the next term of court on a criminal charge.

Appointed by Gov. Werts.

Trenton, N. J., June 19.—Gov. Werts late yesterday afternoon reappointed Chandler W. Riker as judge of the circuit court, and he holds the office until the next legislature meets, his nomination having been "hung up" by the senate last week.

Sound Money Men in Kentucky.

Washington, June 19.—Mr. Van Senden, private secretary to Secretary Carlisle, states that his information leads him to believe that the "sound money" men carried all the eleven congressional districts in the state of Kentucky.

HER LOST AFFECTIONS

Nina M. Towne Sues David Tucker for $100,000.

She Is a Handsome Widow, Who Claims To Be a Cousin of the Late President Garfield—The Defendant a Buffalo Septuagenarian Millionaire—He Says It Is Blackmail.

Buffalo, June 19.—David Tucker, septuagenarian millionaire, has been served with papers in a suit for $100,000 damages for breach of promise brought by Mrs. Nina M. Towne, a handsome widow of 46 years. For the past six months she has made her home in this city and has occupied an office in the Tucker building on Court street. Mrs. Towne alleges cold-blooded and criminal deception on the part of the defendant, while the latter asserts that it is a case of blackmail.

A Cousin of Garfield.

Mrs. Towne is said to be a cousin of the late President Garfield and when he occupied the white house was a frequent visitor there. Her husband was a well-known hotel keeper of Minneapolis, where he died several years ago. She came here last November and rented an office in the Tucker building for the sale of dress patterns. Later she took the local agency of a southern land company.

She Was His Fair Tenant.

Mr. Tucker is the owner of the building and it is alleged paid assiduous attention to his fair tenant. So intimate did they become that a room in the building was fitted up as a sleeping chamber and for some time they made it their home.

Promised To Marry Her.

In March Mrs. Towne found it necessary for her honor that Mr. Tucker marry her. This, she alleges, he promised to do, but finally declined to fulfil his promise, hence the suit for damages.

Says It Is Blackmail.

Mr. Tucker declares the suit to be a gigantic blackmailing scheme, and that an offer was made to him to compromise for $15,000, which he refused to consider. He asserts his ability to prove his innocence.

MARSHAL GRAHAM COMMITTED

He Arrested a Wealthy Ohio Man at Asbury Park as a Pickpocket.

Freehold, N. J., June 19.—Captain John Graham, city marshal of Jersey City and sergeant-at-arms of the New Jersey senate investigating committee, was committed yesterday on a charge of assault and battery and for false imprisonment. The charges were preferred by Charles E. Bell, a wealthy manufacturer of Hillsboro, O., who, while at Asbury Park last summer, was accused of being a noted pickpocket by Graham. Bell was arrested and confined in jail over night.

GOV. ATKINSON'S CONDITION.

He Is Resting Easy After the Operation for Appendicitis.

Atlanta, Ga., June 19.—The physicians who performed the operation on Gov. Atkinson for appendicitis Monday night, and who are still in attendence at his bedside, issued the following bulletin at 9 o'clock this morning: We have just examined Gov. Atkinson and held a consultation over his condition. He rallied well from the operation, has slept considerably since 4 o'clock, has a good pulse and no fever, and his condition at this hour is as good as we could reasonably expect.

STRIKE IN WOOLEN MILLS.

Workers Angered by a Refusal To Advance Wages.

Amesbury, Mass., June 19.—About 600 employes of the Hamilton woolen mills here refused to go to work yesterday because the company denied their request for an advance in wages. The strikers claim that 400 more operatives will join them. At the company's mills in Southbridge the wages of the operatives were increased last week and the employes here immediately asked for a similar raise, which the company promptly refused.

SILVER KNIGHTS OF AMERICA.

Formation of a Secret Society To Promote Free Coinage.

Washington, June 19.—Judge Norton has granted a charter to a stock company to be called the Supreme Temple of the Silver Knights of America. The general objects are stated to be to establish a secret society for the purpose of seeking to secure by recourse to the courts the free coinage of silver in the United States and to make silver a legal tender for all debts.

Vetoes by Gov. Werts.

Trenton, N. J., June 19.—Governor Werts has filed in the state library without approval the prerogative court fee bill, and also the bill empowering the mayor of New Brunswick to vote at the meetings of the common council. The governor declares both bills to be unconstitutional, and their filing in the library means their death.

Reckless Driver's Death.

Derby, Conn., June 19.—Austin Harris, a wealthy carter of Shelton, while intoxicated, drove at a terrific pace at midnight. When opposite the Naugatuck road depot the horses swerved, and the buggy ran into a telegraph pole. Harris was thrown out, and when picked up was dead.

Poisoned Her Children and Herself.

Cedar Rapids, Ia., June 19.—While insane, Mrs. Sanford E. Gilles, wife of a farmer living near Shellsburg, poisoned three of her children and committed suicide in the same manner. The children died.

Referee for the Big Fight.

New York, June 19.—It is reported that Joe Vendig and Jim Corbett had decided to select Tim Hurst as the referee of the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight provided he is acceptable to Bob Fitzsimmons.

Despondency Drove Him to Suicide.

The gold reserve in the Treasury is now within $300,000 of the hundred million mark, and bond syndicate have yet to pay in $7,000,000.

Desire for a borough government seems to be contagious just at present among Union county people. Locust Grove is the latest community to agitate the subject.

Russell Sage evidently rather pay fees to lawyers than to give the man who saved him from going heavenward in a thousand pieces a mere bagatelle of his fortune.

The dickering which is going on between Zimmerman and Johnson, the bicyclists, for a match, resemble pugilistic preliminaries more than true sportsmanlike negotiations.

The State Board of Railroad Assessors met yesterday and appointed the successor of Col. John T. VanCleef, of Somerset county, who tendered his resignation during the Senate investigation. Irvin E. Maguire, of Palmyra, who has served the assessors as an assistant clerk for many years, was chosen.

Any man who will take the trouble to drive to Summit and inspect the sewage beds will not be long deciding whether they will be an ornament or a nuisance.—Dunellen Call.

No one claims that they will be an ornament, but gentlemen who have thoroughly and extensively studied the question state that they are not a nuisance. That is sufficient.

The adage, "Turn about is fair play," is somewhat aged, but nevertheless a true one. Recognizing the aptness of this axiom and also the fact that newspaper men are continually proclaiming the good qualities of other men, The New York World has commenced a series of portraits and biographies of New Jersey editors, one of which will be published each day.

Members of the Chicago Board of Education do not object to teachers riding to and from school on bicycles. One of them, A. S. Trude, thinks "it would be downright tyranny, just at the time when every other woman is riding a wheel, or trying to, for a few men to get together and say the teachers shall not ride to or from school. My observation is that women who have wheels at their heels are not troubled with them in their heads."

The Board of Education of Plainfield has made an important change in the system of penmanship to be taught in the future. Instead of the old Spencerian, the vertical system will be adopted. It is claimed that the new way is more practical, legible and hygienic, because the pupil instead of sititng sidewise at the desk as in the old way, sits squarely in front and develops both sides of the body alike. The established or Spencerian hand used by the older scholars will not be changed.—Exchange.

C. B. Trimmer and John F. Christ, of Roselle, who were arrested in this city Sunday for riding bicycles on the sidewalk, threaten to appeal from the decision of the city court that imposed a fine upon them. The only appeal they can make is to the Supreme Court by certiorari, and when they learn this fact their inclination for appeals will probably cease. The city court decisions are peculiarly protected and it costs considerable money to upset them—considerable more than the Rosellites will care to expend.

After all, Senator Voorhees and Counsel Corbin were probably wiser than they thought when they reported that the judiciary expenses could not be curtailed in this State. For there is no doubt that if the laws passed by the Legislature are not to be published for the enlightenment of the people, that litigation will be greatly increased. Farmers living a dozen miles from the county seat are not going to drive that distance and spend a half day reading the copy on file. Such a recommendation and such a system of promulgating the laws means money in the pockets of the lawyers, and danger to the liberty of those who may violate law in ignorance.—Somerville Unionist-Gazette.

McLoughlin Sentenced.

New York, June 19—It was hard for ex-Inspector McLaughlin to stand at the bar before Justice Barrett in the Court of Oyer and Terminer this morning and be sentenced to two years and six months in Sing Sing prison, and the former Inspector, desperately as he tried to hide it, showed just what an effort it cost him to maintain any degree of composure whatever.

Taking everything into consideration, McLaughlin was considered as having been very fortunate, as his sentence is a year less than that of ex-Captain Stephenson, convicted of having accepted a basket of peaches as a bribe.

The White Boy Gets Off.

James White, the fourteen-year-old colored boy, who assaulted two young girls several days ago, was given a hearing this morning in the Court of General Sessions at Elizabeth, and on the request of Constable Rockfellow Judge McCormick suspended sentence. This was done because the boy's parents wanted to return to Richmond, Va., and take him with them. They left this afternoon for the south.

STABBED SIX MEN AND ESCAPED.

Desperate Battle for Liberty by a Negro Accused of Attempted Murder.

"Jake" Jones, a burly negro, who is wanted for the attempted murder of an aged couple near New Market some months ago, made a desperate fight for liberty near Somerville Sunday night, in which he seriously injured six men. Jones appeared at the tramps rendezvous, near the Central Railroad, Sunday morning. He fought with an old acquaintance, who in return revealed his identity to the police.

A plan was at once laid to capture him in which a number of the tramps volunteered to aid the police. He was surrounded early in the evening, and began a fierce fight for liberty. "Umbrella Charley," the king of the tramps, was the first to approach him. He received a stab wound in the head and had his right ear severed. The negro then cut his way through the crowd, inflicting serious wounds on a number of his intended captors. The blade of his knife snapped as he cut his sixth victim. He then made a dash for a passing coal train, which he boarded and escaped. Most of the injured men are tramps.

Who Wants to Go?

Secretary J. H. Manning, of the Y. M. C. A., has a received letter from E. H. Foot, secretary of the Bedford branch in Brooklyn, in which he states that their party to the Northfield camp will have room for three more members, and he would be pleased to have some of the Plainfield members go along. The party will be absent from June 28th to July 7th.

Peculiar But Fortunate Accident.

A very peculiar accident occurred to the 8:29 train from Plainfield on the Central this morning at West Thirty-third Street, Bayonne, when the coupling pin between the engine and tender of the locomotive worked out of place, allowing the engine to go spinning down the track, while the automatic air brakes brought the coaches to a standstill with a jar. No other damage was done.

CUBA'S WAR EXPENDITURES.

So Enormous that a General Uprising May Result from the Hard Times.

In a semi-official statement received in Washington from the leaders of one of the most influential elements in Cuba, it is shown that the war expenditures are becoming so enormous and the sugar and tobacco industries so unprofitable that they believe a general uprising will result from the hard times caused. The portion of the statement concerning the terrible conditions prevailing is as follows:

"The war expenses of 1868-88 were paid by Cuba. Spain furnished 212,367 men, but not a single dollar.

"Cuba was loaded with nearly $2,000,000 debts, beside a yearly budget of $58,000,000 in those ten years. Gen. Ioveilar declared in the Spanish Cortes that the war expenses have been $800,000,000 or an average of $70,000,000 a year.

"Sugar produced then with slave labor was sold at 6 7-8 cents a pound. The tobacco industry was in such a flourishing condition that the Minister of the Colonies, Romero Robledo, called the buildings of their factories 'palaces.' Leaf tobacco was sold 100 per cent. above to-day's prices. Per contra, sugar sells to-day at 1.86 cents a pound, or 30 per cent. below cost production, and is pressed to its last ditch by German beet sugar.

"The tobacco industry is ruined beyond redemption by a tariff war. Leaf does not pay the cost of labor at to-day's prices. The production of Cuba this year will be: Sugar, $32,000,000; tobacco, $12,000,000; fruits and sundries, $5,000,000; total, $49,000,000; deficit, $44,000,000.

"Expenses: Budget, $26,500,000; extra octroi tax, $3,500,000; imports, $35,000,000, municipal budgets, $10,000,000; extra war expenses at least $19,000,000; total, $94,000,000.

"A $46,000,000 deficit is the last straw on the camel's back. The budget of 1893-94 was closed with a $6,000,000 deficit, and sugar sold then at 2.625 cents a pound, while this year it sells at 1.86 cents a pound."

Made a Fortune After Fifty.

General McAlpin, commander of the New York militia, is a rich man. Many of the Governor's staff are millionaires, but none of them wear swords that cost $7,000. General McAlpin's father, at the age of 50 years, was employed in a tobacco factory. The war made him. The stockholders became frightened at the ruin which was staring them and the country in the face, and were crazy to unload everything they had at an enormous sacrifice. They fell among the alarmists, who believed that the South was going to break up the government. McAlpin, however, was an ardent Union man. He managed to secure nearly all of the stock, and when the price of tobacco went kiting his fortune was made.

CHURCH CHIMES.

The Union Village M. E. church will hold an ice cream and strawberry festival on June 26th.

The little girls of Trinity Reformed church are making arrangements to have an enjoyable time at their festival in the Voehl building on Friday afternoon and evening.

A concert will be given this evening at eight o'clock in the parish house of the Mission Church of the Heavenly Rest on Clinton avenue, to defray the expenses of the Sunday-school excursion. A number of Plainfield people have interested themselves in the affair, and it promises to be a very enjoyable one.

All Souls church, Scotch Plains. The visit of the choir of the Church of the Holy Cross was highly appreciated by the large congregation that greeted them on Sunday evening last. The music evidenced the ability of George Hosking, as a choirmaster, and he is soon to be engaged by All Souls church to train a choir for them. Rev. Mr. Murphy preached an eloquent sermon on "Good Works," and in all respects this fraternal meeting of the two congregations will prove to be of great good to all participating in such services.

WANT BOROUGH GOVERNMENT.

Locust Grove People Tired of Westfield Dictorial Methods.

Steps are being taken at Locust Grove, the part of Westfield township, where the sewer is the strongest, to have that part set off in a borough. Starting from the Scotch Plains line, the proposed borough line will follow Brightwood avenue to Chestnut street, and thence to Broad street, along Broad street east through Branch Mills to the Springfield line. There are 116 voters in this district, and it includes the best farming lands in the township. This is the first instance where the farming district has sought to form a borough under the Borough law and sever its connection with the village government. It has always been the village that has favored the borough. People in the village object strongly to the secession, but they are powerless to prevent it, as only those within the lines of the proposed borough have any voice in the matter, and they are unanimous for severing connection with the village.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Druggist H. J. Fleischauer now rides a Premier Wheel.

Postmaster John M. Hetfield has purchased from the agent, William H. Rogers, a new seventeen-pound Spalding bicycle.

Plainfielders may soon expect to see Chief Doane go spinning along to fires on a bicycle. He has accomplished the feat of learning to ride.

Saturday afternoon the Elizabeth Athletic Cyclers will hold their annual club handicap race over the Morris avenue course. The event promises to be of considerable interest, as several of the riders have been training for the race, and one or two will try hard for records.

Many a champion has been brought low by dictatorial methods and ignoring the advice of the people who assisted him to fame and fortune. There is one man to whom Arthur Zimmerman owes his present position more than to all others combined, he will do well to follow his advice in most all things, for he is well qualified to advise.—American Wheelman.

A dispatch from Asbury Park last night says that the race between Zimmerman and Johnson has been declared off. It was announced at the State meet that the match had been arranged for $5,000 a side, but later Eck, Johnson's trainer, said he would not allow Johnson to race at Asbury Park. He avers that the Asbury Park people are partisans of Zimmerman.

Charles Woolston, the young son of L. B. Woolston, of North Plainfield, rode his father's wheel to Westfield yesterday and while returning fortunately escaped fatal injury. He had just left Westfield and was riding very fast when a horse and wagon appeared. He attempted to turn to the right side of the road, when he discovered that the handles would not move, and giving a sudden pull the headpin broke. The wheel rolled a distance of twenty feet, causing the forks to drop to the ground. Charley was thrown with considerable force to the ground, landing on his right shoulder. His right arm was severely bruised and scratched and his clothes were also torn. Two men happened to be near and assisted him in getting his wheel, but he was obliged to walk to Plainfield, a distance of about four miles from where the accident occurred.

Washingtonville.

John Ackens, of Millington, is the guest of mine host George Demler.

A clambake and chowder party will be held in Charles Costell's woods, Gilette, Morris county, on the glorious Fourth.

George Beeching while driving along the valley to Summit yesterday had quite an exciting time. He was leading a horse in the rear of his gig, when the animal suddenly stopped, with the result of upsetting George into the highway. This frightened the horse drawing the vehicle and he started at a fast gait down the road, and soon freed himself from the wagon, leaving the remains scattered along the road. The runaway was captured a half mile from the scene of the accident. In the meantime George had picked himself up and meandered along until he came to the wrecked outfit.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destored forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

How She Got a "Safety."

A school girl who made a good record at the high school and will graduate with high honors read an advertisement in a Chicago paper from a new bakin; powder firm, reading something like this: "Girl wanted to sell baking powder. To any girl who will send us $— for three dozen cans of our rapid selling baking powder, and show that it has all been sold, we will forward at once a beautiful 'safety.' —— & Co., —— street, Chicago."

She sent the money, and by hustling like a house afire for three weeks and having the door slammed in her face no less than a dozen times, she managed to unload the stuff. Forwarding the list of sales, she waited in breathless anticipation the arrival of her beautiful bicycle. It came—the "safety" did—in an envelope, and it was one of those brass pins, horse blanket size, like mamma used to keep up our style with.—Mankato, Minn., Review.

YOUR SCALP! During the heats of summer does it become irritated and invite an occasional friendly scratch? To wash it is well, but not too often, lest your hair become "brash" and stiff. But treat it twice or thrice a week with our Petroleum Hair Tonic—a little rubbed in with your finger ends, and you will find the feeling of comfort and coolness truly delightful. Positively nothing equals it as a balm for the woes of your scalp. Sprinkler bottles 50c. Only at

AN ACTOR KNIGHTED.

Henry Irving Receives Evidence of Queen Victoria's Favor.

The honor that was recently conferred on Henry Irving is one that his friends have long expected for him. Various explanations why he has not received it have been made. He was born with the patronymic of Brodribb and assumed the more picturesque name of Irving for stage purposes.

As an explanation why Irving was not knighted when Augustus Harris and Arthur Sullivan had been so honored, it was said that it was contrary to precedent to dub a man a knight by any other name than that which his father had carried before him. If a popular choice for the honor had been made among English actors for the past ten years there is little doubt that it would have fallen to Irving.

SIR HENRY IRVING.

Mr. Irving went on the stage in 1856, but it was not until his appearance as Matthias in the "The Bells," in 1871 that he achieved a success that placed him easily in the front ranks of his profession.

Critical opinion has differed widely as to the artistic merit of Irving's Matthias, but there has never been any reason to doubt its effect on an audience. When he appeared at the Lyceum in 1873 as Richelieu he gave a performance that added to his fame, though he was severely criticized.

In 1874 Irving took the boldest step in his career, and played Hamlet at the Lyceum with an original conception of the part. The critics resolved themselves into two parties and waged a furious battle in the public prints over the merits of Mr. Irving's Hamlet.

Public opinion may still be divided on that subject, though there is no doubt that Irving has admirers enough of his Hamlet to fill his theater when he chooses to play it.

His harmonious stage management added not a little to his success. In his tours through this country he has been received with favor, and by his scholarly mind and pleasant personality he has won many friends who will rejoice with him in his new honor.

[COPYRIGHT, 1895.]

"Miss Knollys," I said, including both in my bow, "my duty compels me to an action which promises to be equally painful to myself and distressing to you. The grave of Silly Rufus must be found and since it seems as if his death must have occurred within the radius of a half mile of this spot, everything in that half mile must be searched."

Lucetta cast one glance at her sister—a curious glance, half of horror, half of another sort of feeling, not so easy to recognize.

"Does that include our house?" she asked, casting one look behind her at the gray old walls.

"Do you object?" I asked.

"No. Only I would like to ask who summoned you here to Cushing. Was it Mr. Lake or Mr. Simmons?"

"No; it was Mr. Trohm."

"Ah," said she, and again she looked at her sister with that curious glance. "Sir," she pursued, meeting my eye with a most determined air, "search our house from garret to cellar and from wall to wall, but do not offer this indignity to us only. When you have finished with this one, then search that; I mean the home of Obadiah Trohm. With that proviso you are free to root us up to the foundation. And you need not even spare my mother's grave."

V.

I am a young man, but I hope I have some of the virtues of an older one. However confounded by the turn thus given to my suspicions, I did not allow myself to be swerved from the path which my judgment had laid out for me. Finding it to be not far from the hour when I had a right to expect Mr. Simmons, and correctly judging that he would bring some such man with him as a constable, I only waited for their coming to institute a rigid search of this place. I had told the two gentlemen at their first appearance that this was done with the owners' permission and even at their entreaty; and seeing the calmness of Miss Knollys, the stolid indifference of the brother, who seemed to take the whole affair as a matter of course, and Lucetta's evident but by no means repellant bearing, they accepted my assurances and went cheerfully, though not carelessly, about their work. Mr. Simmons alone stopped to whisper once in my ear as we went down the tunnel-shaped hall through which Miss Grant had fled on that fatal night: "But what about the grave in the woods and the body that was buried there!" To which I whispered back: "One grave is not enough for us to find; if we come across no more that one can be easily explained." And I whispered in one short word whose it was.

It was a rambling place and we were hours going through it; but though we followed Miss Knollys' suggestion and visited both cellar and attic, we found nothing in any way suggestive of crime or death. With many apologies to the young ladies we were about to leave the house when Lucetta, gliding to my side, touched me on the arm and said: "You will not forget our compact. Mr. Trohm's house is to be searched also, is it not?" To which I answered by a decisive "Yes," which made her cheeks flush and bright light come into her eyes. "If you do not find anything," said she, "come back to me. I have no faith in his cheerful airs and smiling hospitality, and what you fail to discover, I will. For mark you there is certainly some one of dangerous character in this vicinity, and who should it be, if not the persecutor of my mother?"

Deprecating this assertion, which looked a little too much like revenge, but yet anxious to keep my word with her at all hazards, I followed the two gentlemen into the road, and quietly explained the necessity which our invasion of this peaceable dwelling behind us had occasioned. "We shall have to go through Mr. Trohm's also," said I; and though the constable was for demurring, Mr. Simmons at once fell in with the project, saying:

"Oh, Mr. Trohm won't care; he will rather enjoy showing off the neatness of his dwelling."

And so he did. For when he learned our errand, he showed the utmost alacrity in opening all the doors and ushering us into every nook and corner of his comfortable domicile. "Of course I know you don't expect to find anything," he laughed, "but none the less do I admire your thoroughness and the extreme justice shown towards my interesting young neighbors. What do you think of my pictures, and what do you think of the neat little pin-cushions you will find on every bureau, and all stuck full of pins?"

Not exactly liking this sally, which somehow seemed out of place, I answered lightly, but took care to survey the whole house, and especially the cellar, with a care that evidently aroused surprise in my country colleague. But I found nothing; no, not the last trace of anything, in the least sinister; and when, the formality over, we all stepped into the open sunshine, I could not but ask myself if my expedition were destined to failure and if my plan of procedure had not been too open and brusque.

A smile from Mr. Trohm as he bade me good-by rather served to emphasize this decision in my own mind. It was not like any other I had seen on his face, and showed that under the geniality of his appearance lay depths of sarcastic enjoyment in other people's discomfiture that went far towards explaining the inveterate course he had taken in reference to Althea Knollys.

"I must see those girls again," thought I. "Lucetta may be right. But——" My cogitations got no farther, for at the first turn of the road we came upon Lucetta standing like a wraith by the wayside, her bent finger laid upon her lip.

"I see," she cried, "that you have discovered nothing. Now may I see what I can do to lift the suspicon which rests upon those who live on this unhappy road?"

"But what can you do?" I objected. "Why, you are as frail as that bough of alder under which you are standing."

"Never mind; you are sure, are you not, that people are killed here by some strange and unforeseen means?"

"We have thought so."

"Very well, come back here at nightfall and see me brave Mr. Trohm. If he is the man I think he is, results will follow which you will do well to watch. But you must be secret. He must consider himself safe from all prying eyes."

I stared at the young girl in amazement. There was fever in her eyes and on her flushed cheek, but there was a stern determination also, such determination as a martyr shows for a cause which he deems holy.

"You will do this?" I exclaimed.

"I will do this," said she. "Remember at the sunset hour in Mr. Trohm's garden."

"A whippoorwill's cry shall be the signal," I assured her. "When you hear that, you may know that a watchful eye is on you both."

"And heaven defend me," she murmured, and was gone before any of us could utter another word.

I pass over the comments of my companions, who regarded the girl as half mad, as well as the arguments with which I induced them to keep silence over this adventure, till I had given it the test her earnestness demanded, and come to the hour when, concealed in a knot of bushes overlooking Mr. Trohm's garden, I waited for the sinking of the sun below the wooded slopes behind me. I had crept to my place quite unperceived, I thought, and if there were no dogs about might reasonably hope to remain undisturbed in my concealment. Mr. Trohm, whom I had been enabled to keep in sight from my first minute of approach, was working among his flower beds, and as his manner evinced neither perturbation nor curiosity, I judged that he looked for no more visitors in Lost Man's Lane that night. Suddenly I heard a rustle; it was very faint, but as the sun sank at that moment, I raised the cry that had been agreed upon between Miss Knollys and myself, and in so natural a tone that Mr. Trohm looked up with astonishment into the trees above. At the same instant Lucetta Knollys appeared at the gate, and calling his name, drew his attention to herself, evidently to his great surprise and inward agitation.

"Lucetta!" he exclaimed. "What does this mean? You are not in the habit of visiting me." And a peculiarly eager look crossed his face as he came down the walk, and stopped before her just where the sweep of the old well I have mentioned cast its long shadows over the shaven lawn.

Her answer was brief and decisive.

"No," she said, "I make few visits. When I do come it is to utter either a protest or a warning. This time it is a warning. Mr. Trohm, your evil practices are discovered; to-morrow you will have the police here in earnest; they did but play with you to-day."

"You child!" he gasped, striving, however, to restrain all evidences of shock or terror. "What do you mean, and to what practices do you allude?—that of my gardening and housekeeping? I never heard them called evil before."

"But murder is evil, and gardening and housekeeping do not employ all your time. Where is Silly Rufus, Mr. Trohm? They have asked me, but if any one in Lost Man's Lane can answer that question it is you!"

And then I saw that the instinct of this girl had led us where mere acumen would have failed to take us. For the old man cringed and the wrinkles came out in his face till he was diabolically ugly.

"You viper!" he shrieked. "How dare you accuse me of a crime—you, whose mother would have died in jail but for my forbearance! Have you ever seen me tread upon a worm even? Lucetta, you are mad!"

"Mad or sane, my accusation will bear fruit, Mr. Trohm. I believe too deeply in your guilt not to make others do so."

"You do?" he sneered.

"I do."

"And why?" he cried.

"Because your heart is wicked. Because your face——"

"My face? Take care, Lucetta, take care; you will bring trouble on yourself if you go on."

"Though I bring death, I will denounce you. I have the honor of my own household to defend. Besides, the earth should be rid of such a monster as you."

"Such a monster as I! Well, my pretty one" (his voice grown suddenly wheedling, his face a study of mingled passions). "we will see about that; we will see about that. Come just a step nearer, Lucetta; I want to see if you are really the little girl I used to dandle on my knee."

His hand was on the curb of the old well; his face, so turned that it caught the full glare of the setting sun, leaned toward the girl, and seemed to exert a fascinating influence upon her. She took the step he asked, and before I could cry out to her beware I saw him bend forward with a sudden quick motion, and then start again upright, while her form, which but an instant before had stood there in all its frail and youthful beauty, tottered as if the ground were bending under it, and in another moment disappeared from my appalled sight, swallowed in some dreadful cavern, that for an instant yawned in the smooth, shaven lawn before me, and then vanished again from sight, as if it had never been.

Shouting out my horror, I bounded from my place, but stopped again for an instant, dazed by the sight of the old man's demoniacal delight. He was leaping to and fro over the turf, holding up his fingers in the red sunset glare. "Six!" he shrieked. "Six! and room for two more! O, it's a merry life I lead. And now, where is my pretty Lucetta? Surely she was here a moment ago. How could she have vanished, then, so quickly?"

This last question was uttered in such a different tone of voice that it gave me a cue to the whole situation. I saw, even while I bounded to the rescue of the devoted maiden, that he was one of those maniacs who have perfect control over themselves except in the moment of triumph; and noting his look of sinister delight perceived that half his pleasure and almost his sold reward for the horrible crimes he had perpetrated was in the mystery surrounding the loss of his victims and the surmises which it naturally called up. I could therefore understand his letter to the police and the extreme satisfaction he took in playing with my efforts and contemplating his own fancied immunity from suspicion.

Meantime I had covered the wretch with my pistol, and reaching the spot where Lucetta went down tried to lift the moss-covered lid I could faintly discern there. But I found this impossible with the glaring figure of the raving maniac ready to spring upon me, and I should certainly have failed in my efforts if at that moment young Knollys had not come into sight, anxiously looking for his sister.

Urging him to hasten, I thrust the pistol into his hand and bid him hold Mr. Trohm at bay, while I flew to the well-curb and tried to find the spring which worked the deadly mechanism. A yell from the writhing creature at my side guided me unconsciously in my search, and in another moment I saw the fatal lid tip and disclose what apepared to be the remains of a second well long ago dry and abandoned for the other.

"Now," cried I, "for more assistance." And, raising my voice, I sent a shout down the road which brought Mr. Simons from the place where he had hiden himself. Between us we tore the lid from its fastenings, and rescued

WE RESCUED MISS KNOLLYS.

Miss Knollys. As she had fainted in failing, she had not suffered much, and when a half hour later she opened her eyes in her own house it was to find one shadow at least lifted from her life.

One word more in explanation of the persistent hatred which Obadiah Trohm had shown toward his erring neighbor. When his papers were searched this letter was found, dated twenty-five years back, but showing in every discolored crease how often it had been opened and read. It began abruptly:

"You persecute me. I do not love you and never shall. If you continue attentions that are positively distasteful to me. I shall end in hating what is now simply disagreeable to me. I am going to marry Andrew Knollys. Yours very truly, ALTHEA BURROUGHS."

ANOTHER NEW GAS.

HELIUM, TAKEN FROM STONES, SHOWS REMARKABLE QUALITIES.

Seems the Complement of Argon. Terrific Explosive Force of This New Gas, Which May Revolutionize Naval Warfare and Accomplish Unheard of Things.

Following close in the track of argon another new gas, hitherto unknown and unsuspected, has been found, and scientists are anxiously waiting for reports from the laboratories where it is now being experimented with. There is no knowing as yet what the new gas is capable of.

Argon, which from the earliest times men had been breathing into their lungs without knowing it, has been shown to be the cause of the aurora borealis. Helium, the newest of the gases, it is now suspected, may be the cause of other mysteries which for ages have puzzled the scientific world. It is entirely different from argon, although both were discovered almost simultaneously.

Argon is found in the atmosphere, and when condensed under enormous pressure it looks like cheese. Helium is found in certain minerals, and when extracted it bears a resemblance to butter. The experiments that have thus far been made with helium show that it bears a curious and strange relationship to argon, and the two when combined may produce results of a startling character.

Unlike argon, helium, so far as is known, is not an illuminant. It does not give forth the weird light obtained from argon by Prof. Berthelot, and which he has identified with the aurora borealis. But helium is less easily controllable than argon. The latter, it is suggested, may be the essential principle of light, while helium gives suggestions of being the essential principle of force. Lodged in certain minerals, it is supposed to be present in the earth in stupendous quantities, as is argon in the air, and the one is the complement of the other.

Helium, it is pointed out, may revolutionize warfare, introducing a new explosive which will demand new guns and render ironclads worthless. It may make war so terrible that nations will fear to engage in hostilities and a reign of perpetual peace be thus insured. Hit with a helium projectile, the strongest ironclad, with all her crew, might vanish into thin air and the very depths of ocean be stirred by the concussion.

Dropped in the midst of an advancing army from a helium balloon, a helium bomb, it is pointed out, might kill 100,000 men and dig a hole in the earth so big that the ocean would flow in. Not only nations, but countries, could thus be wiped from the map if this terrible gas is to develop its suspected explosive qualities, while mountain ranges could be leveled and the Isthmus of Panama cut by a few bombs placed at short intervals.

Vast lakes might thus be made to appear in a desert, and Sahara either be made fruitful or blown out of existence, giving place to a sea where edible fish could be found. The terrible force thus placed in the hands of revolutionists might well make tyrants pause. Who knows but herein lies the hope of Ireland, of Poland or of downtrodden Cuba?

Who is to say whether helium is not to alter the whole topographical appearance of things, placing it within the power of one country to cut itself off from another, to level barriers like mountain ranges, that are now the sole protection of independent nations, and to change the course of mighty rivers like the Rhine, the Danube or the Mississippi? With helium of this nature the proudest city would be at the mercy of the Anarchist, and prison walls would be useless.

THE HABIT OF SAVING.

How the French Show Their Thrift. Children Taught to Save Money.

The French suffer less from panics and depressions than any other people on the globe, and it is because thrift is the basis of their prosperity.

In France nearly every person saves something for a rainy day. The habit is almost universal, and those who earn the least are sure to be found in this great saving class. The French savings banks have more than 8,000,000 depositors, and their deposits amount to about $800,000,000, and this large sum is made up of small sums.

The French schools teach the children to save money, and the most frequent prize given to a bright pupil is a savings bank book with a small sum to the credit of the owner. This is given where in this country we would give a medal or a book.

When a community has a lot of money deposited in savings banks it is easy to borrow money without going to outside capitalists. The local banks are prepared to loan to home people at a moderate interest. In the large cities and factory towns of the Eastern States the savings banks are the great safeguards of the poor wageearners against hard times, and if the saving habit was as general here as it is in France our people would have passed through the recent financial depression without seriously feeling it.

Every child should be taught the importance of saving without being avaricious and niggardly. We need more thrift. The average American wageearner wastes enough in his lifetime to make him comfortable in his old age. We should take a lesson from the French in this respect. They know how to enjoy life and at the same time work hard and save money.

Takes Years of Schooling.

"I wouldn't swear that way," said the kind looking old lady, mildly.

"Bless your soul, ma'am, you couldn't. It takes years of truck drivin' to come anywhere near it," responded the gentleman whose team had balked across the car track.—Cincinnati Tribune.

A FUNNY MAN'S FAME.

The First Steps in the Successful Career of a Caricaturist.

"Zim," the very funny man of Judge writes to the New York World of his achievements as an artist:

I have often been appealed to in the name of caricature, by the young aspirant for fame, switching one from the broad walks of a happy life to the narrow path of fame. With your permission I will adopt this way of answering:

The day I began to inflict myself upon the public as a caricaturist was on a Monday, in the year 1880. I think also that it was "Blue Monday," at least it seemed so to me, as I remember my ride upon the rear platform of a Third avenue surface car, with only a fried cake and a cup of weak coffee as the foundation stone to success.

I was received cordially at the Puck office, but without pomp or brass bands, and after making all the necessary arrangements to become famous, I sauntered down Greenwich street to select a cafe which might be in harmony with my $7.50 a week salary. Then began the real work of my life.

Before this all occurred, however, I had tried my hand at a series of trades, the first of which was baking, or second assistant's work in the establishment. This gave me a good idea of its interior and utensils used, so that at my present age I need not go to a bakery to make a sketch of such interior.

Then I was given a chance with an honest farmer. This move on my dad's part satisfied me that his opinion of my ability to knead the dough had lessened. So I began to study the farm and the implements used, while the farmer milked the cows and did the chores; after three years of hard labor (which the farmer did himself), he advised me to seek my fortune elsewhere, as his soil was too poor to support us both in luxury, so I again was allowed a few years of public schooling.

Then, as I thought sign painting would give me the chance I desired to flash the brush and mix in paints and oils. I sought an opening and received a three years' engagement with board and clothes. It is needless to say that in this branch I learned much to aid me in my present profession.

I have always been a great student of human nature, faces and characters. There are, at least, two branches of caricature—the society and the comic—the former meaning the ludicrous side of drawing room life and the latter the funny side of the middle and lower classes. I do not think an artist can successfully depict both sides and keep up with the demand for such work, although many undertake it. I am speaking from observation and not from a selfish standpoint.

If a joke can be expressed in a single line, so much the better. Remember that "Brevity is the soul of wit." I have noticed that the most catchy comics are those which show no effort. The quick, certain and racy lines of A. B. Frost and Gibson are always appreciated by the public. These two gentlemen are the best representatives of their respective art—comic and social—in my estimation.

Well, I have not said much in regard to the habits of the caricaturist, but as Ene Cook and Briggs Barlow and Baby Roe are waiting for me to go spring sucker fishing, and not a worm dug yet, I leave you to imagine the kind of life I prefer.

WHO OWNS THE RAILROADS.

Forty Companies Operate One-half and 700 Companies the Balance.

The railway system of the United States is held under 1,797 corporations, but operated almost entirely by 747, the tendency being toward leasing or consolidation. Indeed, 40 companies operated about 47 1-2 per cent. of the whole mileage, and 75 companies about 65 1-2 per cent., so that one-tenth of the operating companies control nearly two-thirds of the whole system: these do about 83 1-2 per cent. of the passenger and 85 1-2 per cent. of the freight traffic, receiving 80 1-2 per cent. of the gross revenue of the system.

Much has been said against this system of consolidation, but under it the actual cost of transporting freight has been reduced to 1.917 cents per mile for passengers and to .604 per ton of freight, and the revenues were 2.167 and .941 cents respectively. To move a ton of freight, says Mr. Gannett, from Chicago to New York, costs about $6, and to move a barrel of flour about 60 cents, so that "on this basis the entire yearly food supply for a family of five persons can be transported 1,000 miles for the sum of $9."

The capital stock and funded debt are about equal, on the assumed cost of nearly $10,000,000,000, so that dividends on railways in the aggregate average only about two per cent. Some pay three or four times as much and others pay nothing on the stock. As to the latter, the fault may arise not only from mismanagement or "wrecking," but from premature building, miscalculation as to possible profits, the desire to keep out rivals from a given territory, or the opening of a territory to settlement, in which fortunes are made by buying and selling land, although the railroad may not pay.

For the year ending June 30, 1890, there were in service 29,928 locomotives, 25,511 passenger cars, and a total of 1,164,188 cars. Of 749,300 employes, 2,451 were killed and 22,396 injured during that year, but of 492,430,865 passengers only 286 were killed and 2,425 injured.

FAME.

Fame is a fakir in the public street;
Blocking the pavement with a gaping crowd;
Playing clown's tricks to stay passers' feet;
Catching their ears with clamor harsh and loud.

While through the throng, with sad and downcast mien,
Elbow their way the poet and the sage,
Passing unmarked, unnoticed and unseen:
Only the fakir interests the age.

SUMMER WISDOM.

The man whose rule it is to take
The weather as it comes,
Without a word of fuss, finds life
A pudding full of plums.
He doesn't care how low or high
The mercury has got.
And even when it's mid July
He hardly knows it's hot.

But he who when the mercury
Goes up to eighty-five
Makes such a fuss that every one
Regrets that he's alive.
Thus makes himself unhappier
Than he was meant to be.
And feels the heat at seventy-two
As if 'twere ninety-three.

So take a warning from these lines—
It's good advice, though free—
And when the hot days really come
Don't watch the mercury.
Just go about your daily tasks
Regardless of the heat.
And you will find that every day
Your life will grow more sweet.

A MARINE WONDER.

The Mighty Barrier Reef a Monument to Minute Insects' Industry.

One of the marine wonders of the world is the great Barrier Reef of Australia. This stupendous rampart of coral, stretching in an almost unbroken line for 1,250 miles along the northeastern coast of Australia presents features of interest which are not to be equaled in any other quarter of the globe. Nowhere is the action of the little marine insect, which builds up with untiring industry those mighty mountains with which the tropical seas are studded, more apparent.

By a simple process of secretion there has been reared in the course of countless centuries an adamantine wall against which the billows of the Pacific, sweeping along in an uninterrupted course of several thousand miles, dash themselves in ineffectual fury. Inclosed within the range of its projecting arms is a calm inland sea, dotted with a multitude of coral islets, and presenting at every turn objects of interest alike to the unlearned traveler and the man of science.

Here may be witnessed the process by which the wavy, gelatinous mass hardens into stone, then serves as a collecting ground for the flotsam and jetsam of the ocean, and ultimately develops into an island covered with a luxuriant mass of tropical growth. Here, again, may be seen in the serene depths of placid pools extraordinary forms of marine life, aglow with the most brilliant colors, and producing in their infinite variety a bewildering sense of the vastness of the life of the ocean.—London Public Opinion.

TO CAN STREET CAR HORSES.

Canned Horse Is On Sale and Popular in Many Cities of the East.

The canning of horse meat for domestic and foreign consumption has been inaugurated in the Northwest. Mr. M. Herrick, of The Dalles, who owns a salmon cannery, has converted part of his establishment into a horse meat cannery. He has canned in all seven horses, and they have yielded an average of 300 pounds of flesh.

Mr. Herrick has disposed of a number of cases of canned meat in this city, and they have been eaten here. Patrons of the establishments where five-cent meals are served probably could account for some of the meat, and if so they never have made any complaints about it. A number of cases have been sent East, and it is expected that quite a market will be found for horse beef inside the United States.

The flesh resembles beef in appearance and cannot be told from it by taste. The grain of the flesh is fine, and, upon opening cans, it certainly looks good enough to eat. Dozens of people have sampled the canned horse, and are unanimous in pronouncing it good, though there was not one of them but confessed to a prejudice against the eating of horse flesh.

The only trouble Mr. Herrick has met with in canning is that the flesh cannot be packed into cans tightly enough by hand. The difficulty will be overcome by using machinery such as is used in packing corned beef. The first horse killed made six cases of forty-eight pounds each, but others ran a little under that amount.

While in Topeka last March, E. T. Barber, a prominent newspaper man of La Cygne, Kansas, was taken with cholera morbus very severely. The night clerk at the hotel where he was stopping happened to have a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and gave him three doses which relieved him and he thinks saved his life. Every family should keep this remedy in their home at all times. No one can tell how soon it may be needed. It costs but a trifle and may be the means of saving much suffering and perhaps the life of some member of the family. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. CITY COUNCIL LEGISLATES.

BIDS RECEIVED FOR BUILDING MAIN OUTLET SEWER.

Ordinance Authorizing the Purchase of Land for Sewage Beds Adopted—Netherwood Granted a License.

Matters pertaining to sewers was the principal business transacted at the meeting of the Common Council last night. Councilmen Westphal, Moore, Bird, Ginna, Fisk, Dumont and President See were present.

The ordinance authorizing the construction of the main outlet sewer from Front street street and Grant avenue to the sewage beds was read, at the conclusion of which the president announced that bids would be received for the construction of the sewer. The following firms presented bids: Michael Honan & Son., Chester, Pa.; Patrick J. Plunkett, Jersey City; Charles B. Walton, Trenton; Charles T. Moore, Lebanon, Pa.; Martin McNamara and Carlon T. Bride, Washington, D. C.; John Marsden, Utica.

The lowest bid was about $14,000, the next about $800 higher, and the highest about double the lowest.

After the bids had been read the ordinance authorizing the purchase of the land for the construction of sewage beds was given its final reading, and, on motion of Mr. Fisk, adopted. All the councilmen voted yes.

An ordinance asking for proposals for making house connections was introduced, read the first time, and ordered advertised. July 8th is the day set for receiving bids.

The Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company petitioned for permission to connect their exhaust pipes from their condensing engines to the under drains of the sewer on Madison avenue. The petition was granted, with the proviso that the arrangement should cease if at the end of the year it should create vapors which would be injurious to the health of the city.

Andrew J. Gavett, constructing engineer, reported that Cook & Co. had completed their sewer contract, except in cleaning up the streets and completing some other little details. Cook & Co. presented a statement which showed that they had made arrangements with Street Commissioner Meeker to make the necessary repairs and charge to them. The document was referred to the street committee with instruction to see that the arrangement was carried out in a satisfactory manner.

Two additional fire hydrants were ordered on East Front street, Councilman Westphal voting no.

Chairman Moore of the license committee recommended that a license for an inn and tavern be granted to John Spitler of the Hotel Netherwood. Adopted.

The application of John Spitler for a license to sell liquors at the Hotel Netherwood was granted, Councilman Frost voting no.

An auctioneer's license was granted to William E. Taylor.

Mr. Dumont moved that the specifications for the proposals for house connections be printed. Adopted.

Two bills for $1,470.58 and $525.09 from Cook & Co. were ordered paid.

Suit Against Pastor Wood.

William T. Heffin, proprietor of a roof garden in Paterson, yesterday began a suit against the Rev. Harvey Wood, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, of that city, for alleged slander. Heffin, in his complaint, alleges that the Rev. Mr. Wood has been uttering statements from his pulpit of a slanderous character against him. The suit is the outcome of a crusade which Mr. Wood has been making against the Paterson police.

Appeal Case Put Over the Term.

The appeal case of Saloon-keeper Michael Hermes from the fine imposed on him by Justice Frazee at the instance of the Law Enforcement League of Rahway was to be tried yesterday in the Union County Court, but was put off for the term.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mrs. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else, then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottle at Raidolph's drug store. Regular size, 50c and $1.

AT THE NORTHFIELD CAMP.

A Delightful Outing Which Can Be Secured at Small Cost.

The special Northfield number of The Bulletin contains the following which will be of interest to the members of the Y. M. C. A. in this city:

While the regular association camp does not open until July 9th, arrangements have been made to accommodate a party from Brooklyn during the students' conference, which will be held June 28th to July 7th. This conference is a gathering of over five hundred students from colleges in all parts of the world, and is one of the inspiring and interesting events of the entire summer. On account of the smaller number to be present during this week, the expense will be somewhat larger than after the encampment is regularly opened. The special rate of $4.50 to Northfield will be in force during this period, and the cost of board while in camp will not exceed $1.00 per day. A portion of the party attending this conference will wheel from New Haven to Northfield; leaving New York Thursday, July 27th, by the New Haven boat. The trip from New Haven will take the party up the beautiful valley of the Connecticut and will occupy the greater portion of Friday and Saturday. There will be no fast riding, and in case of unfavorable weather, train can be taken at any time. After the close of the conference a party will probably ride to Lake Champlain, and thence via Lake George, Saratoga and Albany return to New York. This party will be accompanied by Secretary Foot, of the Bedford Branch. The Fourth of July falling on Thursday, the week will be broken up for business, which makes it especially convenient for a number to attend the conference for the entire session. It will also make an inexpensive and delightful holiday vacation for those who can take the boat the evening of the third and remain over the following Sunday. This trip can be taken for less than $10.

CRESCENT WHEELMEN MEET.

Fourth of July Matters Was the Principal Business Discussed.

There was a fair attendance of members at the meeting of the Crescent Wheelmen last evening when the Fourth of July celebration was talked over and discussed.

The committee on games reported progress; also that the entry blanks were now ready. The clubhouse committee stated that they had interviewed the members of the Plainfield Bicycle Club and that the latter wanted $50 per month for 100 members and $15 additional for every 100 above that number. The Crescents decided to let the committee advise with Mrs. Ulrich with a view of getting the best terms.

The committee on float for Fourth of July reported that work was progressing satisfactorily. An adjournment was then made to Wednesday evening, June 26th.

The Town Marshal Arrested.

James Young, town marshal of Woodbridge, was arrested Monday on a charge of felonious assalt, and held under $500 bonds to answer. The charge grew out of a fight at the Democratic primary. The Democrats of the town are divided into factions. James Young was nominated for committeeman, and the silk-stocking faction named F. H. P. Imbert. The Young faction resented opposition, and a free fight followed. Mr. Young has a couple of sons, and it is alleged they started the trouble. Claude Boland, a wealthy resident of Woodbridge, was the most severely hurt. He is a New York business man, and says he took no part in the fight, but went in between the men to separate them. While he was engaged in this good office, James Young, he alleges, rushed upon him with a heavy cane and struck him on the head. This is denied.

An Estate Settled.

The trouble over the settlement of the estate of the late Fritz Pounnerehire, of Rahway, was finally adjusted yesterday in the Orphans' Court at Elizabeth. A bill of exceptions to the accounting of the executors, Alderman Lohmiller and Mr. Helmstader, had been filed with the Court by Lawyer Hunt on behalf of some of the heirs. Mrs. Pounnerehire, the widow, turned over certain property to the executors to make good the amount in dispute, and the objections were in consequence withdrawn.

The Peterkins too late for the Exhibition.

The play, adapted from a Peterkin drama in St. Nicholas, was exceedingly well done, and made the audience wish for more of the Peterkins and a longer stay.

War on Dogs Is Hotly Waged.

The butchery of unmuzzled and unlicensed dogs by the Elizabeth police was continued yesterday, and resulted in adding twenty-five to the list of slaughtered. Many persons who had failed to comply with the dog ordinance hastened to police headquarters to procure licenses from Dog Warden Walsh. Others kept their pets shut up while the police marksmen were in their neighborhood. Citizens seem to think that as the city council will not establish a dog pound the chief of police is right in ordering the death of dogs roaming without muzzles.

Women's Request Refused.

The request of the Woman's Town Improvement Association of Montclair to have the Health Board increased from five to seven members, in order to have a veterinary surgeon and a woman physician on the board, has been refused on the ground that the present number is sufficient to carry on the business. The town council refused to increase the board last night, on the ground that a woman is ineligible to membership on the board.

War in Africa.

There was war last night in the shanty on Somerset street, occupied by the colored men who are working on the sewers, for one of their number had broken into a trunk belonging to a fellow-workman, and taken a number of the latter's personal effects. Two or three of the dusky braves started in search of the missing one, but he escaped and no trace could be found of him.

The Coming Woman.

Tom Timbo's bootblacking stand at the North Avenue station was graced this morning by a young lady who had her shoes polished by James Morris, who "shines 'em up."

To Have Good Walks.

Charles Hyde has given out a contract for the flagging of 3,500 feet of sidewalk on Belvidere and Woodland avenues. H. C. N. Johnson will do the work.

FESTIVAL AT HOLY CROSS.

A PLEASANT AND PROFITABLE CHURCH AFFAIR.

Parish House Trimmed in An Artistic Manner, in Which Attractive Young Ladies Sell With Profit.

Everyone present at the festival given by the young women of Holy Cross church last evening in the parish house can congratulate themselves, for it was one of those charming events that always prove a delight to those attending, and the affair last evening was no exception to this established rule.

Artful hands had made the already pretty room resemble fairyland by the judicious use of yellow bunting which was the prevailing color, and this, with the pretty gowns worn by the fair ones, presented a scene well worth seeing.

Around the room were arranged tables that were inviting enough to capture patrons who very willingly paid the price asked to secure the excellent home-made cake and strawberry lemonade that was on sale, while two kinds of ice cream was sufficient to satisfy the most particular.

The attendance was large, and it was a buying crowd that rewarded the young women for their earnest efforts.

During the evening a "pound" auction was started, and packages neatly tied up, containing a pound of "nobody knew what till they opened", brought good prices. The purchasers after examining their packages found groceries, match boxes, dolls, etc., and nobody could object for the proceeds were to be devoted to the Sunday-school. Mr. Bartling filled the position of auctioneer in a satisfactory manner to all.

Those who arranged the affair were: Miss Anna Murphy, Miss Warman, Miss Agnes Smith, Miss Ada Bartling, Miss Emmons, Miss Weston, Miss Fountain. The last four named had charge of the candy, while the others looked after the cake, lemonade and ice cream. The whole affair was a complete success in every respect, and is a credit to the young women who planned it.

Biggest People in Town.

The senior class, together with the other scholars, assembled in the High School hall this morning, marching in to a solemn march. Superintendent Maxson and Principal Travell spoke a few words to the senior class that were thoroughly appreciated. Several old familiar songs were sung, after which the classes marched out. The promotion cards were then given out, and the graduates went to Music Hall to drill for this evening's exercises. As they passed through town the air was fairly cut in two with their class yell. They all adjourned to Randolph's pharmacy where they were served with delicious soda water.

Rode a Bicycle Handcuffed.

Cookey Clancy, a well-known character at Lambertville, while on his way to jail at Flemington yesterday, knocked down Constable Srope with his handcuffed hands and started to run. Then he seized a bicycle and rode as hard as he could, depending more on his feet than his hands. Several men on bicycles gave chase, and he was overtaken at the first bad hill. He fought desperately, but was brought to the railroad station, followed by a crowd of excited citizens. He is now in the county jail.

Small Boy and Big Brother.

THE BOYS CAMP.

A Place Where Youngsters Can Have a Jolly, Happy Time.

For the past ten years a camp has been held each summer under the management of the State Committee of the Young Men's Christian Association. It will be held this year on Lake Champlain, near Westport, Essex County, New York, during the month of July from the 9th to the 30th. A cordial invitation is extended to all boys between the ages of fourteen and seventeen to join the party. The expense of the trip is as follows: Five dollars and twenty-five cents a week covers board, tent hire, boats and transportation of baggage. The railway fare depends upon the size of the party, but the companies have always been liberal and promise a reduced rate. In the past ten years the aggregate attendence has been 514, and not accident has occurred to mar their pleasure. The motive is now as it was at first to have a jolly, happy time, and to teach practically that to have such a time it is not necessary to break out of wholesome restraints, nor to forget the Sabbath and religious habits, but to continue under circumstances that would make it always remembered as an outing not only full of pleasure but of profit as well.

Plainfield has been well represented in past years and the local Y. M. C. A. can be referred to by any who may desire to go.

CUPID HAS LOTS OF VICTIMS.

THREE MARRIAGES IN PLAINFIELD LAST NIGHT.

Two Were Church Weddings and One a Pretty Home Event—All Are Popular Young People.

St. Mary's R. C. church was the scene of a very pretty wedding yesterday afternoon at five o'clock when Miss Elizabeth Fitzgerald was united in marriage to Joen Watson, by Rev. Father Smyth. Long before the appointed hour a large number of friends had gathered to witness the impressive ceremony.

The bride entered first, leaning on the arm of Patrick O'Keefe, who was best man, and following was Miss Annie O'Neil, the bridesmaid, on the arm of the groom.

The bride wore a gown of light-blue Henrietta cloth, trimmed with point lace, and the bridesmaid was gowned in pale blue crepon, trimmed with fine lace.

After the ceremony all thought the bridal party was going to the home of the groom where the reception was to be held, but instead they took a ride to South Plainfield, and returned later when they found the guests present. The home at 991 Arlington avenue has just been handsomely furnished, and will make a commodious residence for Mr. and Mrs. Watson. The house was filled with many handsome and useful presents, including a costly selection of silverware, furniture, and china. A sumptuous wedding supper was served to the guests.

Mr. Watson is an employe of the Fisk Brothers at their New York office, and is very popular.

There were about fifty guests present at the reception, including relatives from Elizabeth and Plainfield.

Miss Lizzie Wierenga, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Wierenga, was married to Michael Gill last evening at six o'clock at St. Mary's R. C. church, Rev. Father Smyth officiating.

The church was filled with friends of the contracting parties, who witnessed the tieing of the nuptial knot.

The bride wore a becoming brown traveling gown and carried a beautiful bouquet of white roses tied with white satin ribbon, while the bridemaid, Miss Maggie Wierenga, sister of the bride, wore a gown of the same and carried a bouquet of pink roses tied with pink satin ribbon. Both wore white leghorn hats which were very becoming.

At 7:30 o'clock a reception was held at the home, 212 Park avenue, which had been furnished by the groom. The decorations were pink and white.

A large number of handsome presents were received by Mr. and Mrs. Gill, and their friends wish them many years of happiness.

A splendid supper was served to the guest who were:

Mr. and Mrs. James Bly and daughter, of New York, Mr. and Mrs. Peter McDonough, Mr. and Mrs. James Wierenga, Mr. and Mrs. Dominick McNamee, Miss Kate Gabered, Miss Kate Dorgan, Miss Lizzie Gill, Miss Minnie Walsh, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Doyle, Mr. and Mrs. John Wierenga, Miss Maggie Strapp, Miss Kate Mahoney, James Strapp, Charles Flynn, Henry Wierenga, John Wierenga, and John Gill.

A very pretty home wedding was solemnized last evening at eight o'clock, when Miss Phebe Smalley was married to William Campbell. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride, 31 Linden avenue, by Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis.

The bride was gowned in white silk, and the bridesmaid, Miss Minnie Smalley, wore a gown of white. The best man was Elden S. Smalley, brother of the bride.

After hearty congratulations had been extended to the couple, refreshments were served.

Mr. and Mrs. Campbell were the recipients of many very handsome presents.

Those who witnessed the ceremony were: Mr. and Mrs. Abbott, Mr. and Mrs. Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Smalley, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Smalley, Mrs. Kline, Mr. and Mrs. John Smalley, of Dunellen, Mr. and Mrs. Staats Titsworth and family, of New Market.

The bride and groom will reside at 213 Spooner avenue.

A Beam Crushes Him.

Barney Fisher, at Sayre & Fisher's brick-yard, at Sayreville, was placing bricks in a kiln yesterday when he fell from the scaffolding. He attempted to save himself by clutching the edge of the platform. The result was that a beam fell on his breast, crushing the bone. Three hours later the man died. He leaves a widow but no children.

REPUBLICAN LEAGUE

A Division in the Convention Over Silver.

Conservatives, Who Will Probably Win, Favor the Omission of Any Declaration of Principles — The Other Faction Insists on the Adoption of Some Sort of a Platform.

Cleveland, O., June 20. — Whether there will be discord or harmony in the national convention of Republican League clubs, depends altogether on which of the two factions wins the fight that is now being quitely but none the less earnestly waged outside the convention hall. That the main battle will not be made while the delegates are assembled for business now seems to be assured. The two parties into which the convention is divided are each determined and each anxious to carry its point.

Believe in Remaining Quiet.

One of the parties consists of the conservative members of the republican rank who do not believe it would be wise for any declaration of principles in the shape of a platform to be made. This faction deprecates any action which might be construed as a dictation to the republican national convention of 1896, and declares it would be in the worst possible taste if not demagogic to attempt to lay out a course for the party, whether financial, tariff or other kind.

Favor a Platform of Some Sort.

The other element is warmly urging the adoption of some sort of a platform. Those composing it argued that should the convention go on record before the country as having apparently avoided any issue of importance, but more especially the money question, it would be accused of cowardice and of being afraid to let the people know whether it stood on the side of the white or the yellow metal.

No Middle Course.

Meantime the leaders are puzzled and this morning are in a quandary. There is no middle course and to adopt either of the ones proposed would call forth a certain amount of censure. It is believed however, that the conservatives are gaining ground and that they will dominate before an adjournment is taken. Of those who want a platform adopted, all are not silver men, but all the silver men are in their ranks.

It Was a Close Fight.

The committee on resolutions is the place where the battle is to be fought. The committee organized by electing congressman John B. Robinson of Pennsylvania, chairman, and Horace G. Knowles of Delaware, secretary. It was a very close fight for Congressman Robinson and it is a significant fact that the man who came near beating him for the chairmanship was a silver man—Congressman Tawney of Minnesota.

To Formulate a Platform.

A motion, which was finally adopted, to appoint a sub-committee of nine, who should formulate a platform to be submitted to the full committee, was presented and debated at length. It was during the debate on this resolution that facts already stated as to a division of sentiment on the platform question became apparent. Senator Thurston, of Nebraska, offered the following resolution, which created a profound sensation:

A Conservative Resolution.

"We approve the declaration of the republican national convention, that: The American people, by tradition and interest favor bimetallism and the republican party demands the use of both gold and silver as a standard money, with such restrictions and under such provisions, to be determined by legislation, as will secure the maintenance of a parity of value of the two metals, so that the purchasing and debt-paying power of the dollar, whether of silver, gold or paper, shall be at all times equal. And we refer to the matter of more specific declarations to the next national republican convention, which alone has the power to bind the party or make a platform and declare principles." This resolution was declared out of order, because the motion to appoint a sub-committee of nine was already before the committee.

Milwaukee Favored.

The choice for the meeting ground of the convention in the presidential year fell upon Milwaukee.

MR. GLADSTONE'S POSITION.

Exaggerated Importance Attached to His Pairing Agreement.

London, June 20.—The sensation of the day in political circles was the announcement of the Times that M. Gladstone had withdrawn from his pairing agreement with Charles Villiers, member of parliament for the south division of Wolverhampton, known as the "father of the house of commons," from the fact that he sat in the house continuously since 1835. The liberals at first were alarmed at this action and the unionists delighted. The Times accompanied its announcement with an editorial intimating that Mr. Gladstone disapproved of the general policy of the Rosebery government, and predicted an early dissolution of parliament. It is learned, however, upon authority, that Mr. Gladstone's withdrawal is on the Welsh church disestablishment bill only. The Westminister Gazette says that all this talk about Mr. Gladstone's dissatisfaction with the government is nothing more than "rubbish."

RACED AGAINST FIRE

Steamer Yumuri Reaches Port While Burning.

Fierce Blaze Discovered in Her Hold Twenty-four Hours from Harbor — The New York Fire Boats Render Assistance, But She May Have To Be Sunk—Valuable Cargo.

Quarantine, S. I., June 20.—The Ward line steamer Yumuri arrived from Mexico and Havana last night with a raging fire in her forehold. The fire was discovered Tuesday night at 10 o'clock and steam was at once turned into her compartments and for a short time the headway of the fire was checked. The steamer was forced ahead at as great a speed as possible with the enormous loss of steam which was used to fight the fire.

Quickly Passed at Quarantine.

At the time the fire was discovered the Yumuri was off Cape Henry. She forged ahead steadily with the wind from the northwest, which gave her a list to starboard, which increased as the fire consumed the cargo. When the steamer was reported passing Sandy Hook the health officer embarked on his boat and hastened down the bay to hurry the inspection in order to avoid all delay possible. The Yumuri was met off Hoffman island and the inspection quickly made.

May Have To Sink Her.

The police boat Patrol and the fireboat New Yorker appeared off the boarding station and accompanied the burning vessel to her dock at the foot of Wall street and the hatches were opened. The fireboats began at once to pour water into her hold. If they fail to suppress the fire the seacocks will be opened and the Yumuri permitted to sink to the bottom.

The Yumuri brings $260,000 in specie which is located in the safe in the pursers room. Beneath this room in the pantry the decks are shored up with timbers to increase the strength of the deck above. The cargo consists of cigars, tobacco, bullion, skins, hides, hemp, honey, broomhuck and many other Mexican products. There were fifty-six passengers on board most of them from Havana.

THE MAXIMA CLAIM

Action To Be Begun To Force Spain To Settle.

Secretary Olney Giving Serious Consideration To Measures of an Aggressive Character — Suggested That the Line of Action May Be in the Direction of Cuba.

Washington, June 20.—The unsatisfactory manner in which the Spanish government has acted in connection with the Maxima claim, which the state department was directed to press by the fifty-third congress, has caused Secretary Olney to give serious consideration to measures of an aggressive character toward settling the rights of Mora, which Spain has conceded to the point of giving a positive promise to pay.

Olney Will Press It.

There has been so much difference of opinion among the various secretaries of state and United States ministers to Madrid since the claim originated, over its justness and the propriety of pressing it, that Mr. Olney's decision in favor of enforcing its payment is of considerable interest. Mr. Gresham believed in the merits of the claim and it is understood that he was in favor of the action which congress took recently, directing the secretary of state to press it.

Our Minister Instructed.

Secretary Olney declined to discuss the matter to-day, but it it known positively that Hannis Taylor, the United States minister to Spain, has been instructed to insist on a speedy settlement by the Spanish government, in conformity with the action of congress.

May Begin at Cuba.

The matter of aggressive action, to which reference has been made, has been brought to the attention of the government by one of its officials in the form of a suggestion, said to have been made without great seriousness at first, that the pathway pointed out by congress should be followed in the drection of Cuba, where Mora's seized plantations are situated, and the amount of the claim should be collected in the manner adopted by Great Britain in its recent trouble with Nicaragua. It is not supposed that this suggestion has been seriously considered.

ARMOR PLATE TEST.

A New and Important Experiment To Be Made at Indian Head.

Washington, June 20.—Secretary Herbert has issued orders for a more important armor test than has yet been made in this country. Heretofore the great attacks against armor at the Indian Head proving grounds have been solely for the purpose of testing plates for acceptance under contract conditions. The test just authorized is to investigate the damage that would be done to an armored ship in action, especial attention being given to the effect of smashing shot upon the vessel's framing and devices for attaching the protecting plates.

Identical to That of the Iowa.

For this purpose a complete frame from the battleship Iowa will be set up at Indian Head, the fourteen-inch armor plate will be attached to it, and the whole target will be attacked by guns of heavy calibre. The steel frame will be identical with that of the Iowa from deck to deck behind the armor belt.

Wooden Backing.

This structure which is about eight feet high and five feet through will include a sufficient number of the ribs to back the length of a plate about sixteen feet. Five inches of wooden backing, which is the amount adopted for the battleships now being designed, will be used and fastened upon this by twenty-six bolts of new and simplified design will be the fourteen-inch Harveyized plate.

Conditions as in Battle.

The ship's framing will be constructed at the Norfolk navy yard from the same material and drawings used at Cramps' ship yard for the Iowa. This frame will be attached to a hillside by timbers engaging it only at the deck lines, every precaution being taken throughout to secure the exact conditions of a battle in which the Iowa might be supposed to be engaged with a vessel of the highest power.

HE WAS LONG-WINDED

Burgomaster of Hamburg Tired the Kaiser.

Kept Royalty Standing for Twenty Minutes Listening to His Address. The Emperor's Reply Guarded. Plenty of Beer for Reporters, But No Pencils—Baltic Canal Celebration Last Night Marred by Rain.

Hamburg, June 20.—Last night a banquet was given in the banquetting hall, which is still unfurnished, of the newly built Rathhaus, which was temporarily decorated. At the banquet, after the toasts, the burgomaster, Dr. Lehmann, attired in a black gown with white ruffles, arose and addressed the emperor and the other sovereigns.

Kept the Crown Heads Standing.

He made a long, deliberate speech, keeping the emperor and the kings standing with their glasses in their hands. He wound up after twenty minutes by declaring that the canal was the greatest German enterprise, and the occasion of its opening the most notable event in the history of Hamburg. The city had never before seen such an illustrious assembly as were now its guests. He then drank to the German emperor and the German princes.

The Kaiser Spoke Guardedly.

The emperor returned thanks in an uncommonly guarded manner. His reply was mild and careful and of comparative shortness. He said he did not presume to accept the welcome which it was patent was not artificial, but spontaneous, for himself, but which was for all the German sovereigns surrounding him. The canal was a great work of peace. There are, he added, seas that divide and seas that unite. This canal unites two great seas for commercial and defensive purposes. At this instant the ironclad power of United Europe lying in Kiel harbor was the best self-evident proof of guaranteed peace.

Plenty of Beer, But No Pencils.

During the emperor's speech a heavy German journalist broke, with a tremendous crash, through a chair on which he was standing in the press gallery. Many, if not all the other newspaper men were standing on their chairs, but after the accident the police ordered them to get down. The representatives of the press were overwhelmed with drinking offers, but they were not supplied with materials with which to work.

Royalty on Foot.

The emperor walked at about 8:45 o'clock from the Rathhaus to the corner of Reesendamm and Jungfernsteig, where a special pier had been erected for the use of the emperor and his guests, who, it was arranged, should be taken to Alster island, about 500 yards distant, in small boats propelled by motors.

Reviewed by the Emperor.

At about 9 o'clock the members of the reichstag arrived at the Dammthor station and were taken to the island on launches in parties of sixty. The Veteran and Warriors' union formed a line with bands and banners in front of the Rathhaus, where the emperor reviewed them. Some of the veterans were decorated with the order of the Iron Cross. The old soldiers were addressed by the emperor before he left the island.

Rain Spoils the Illuminations.

The crowds were not so dense as it was expected they would be. This was probably due to the downfall of rain. At about 9 o'clock heavy thunder clouds began to lie over the eastern part of the city, giving a peculiar coloring to the scene. Suddenly fierce flashes of lightning began to play in the sky, and rain began to fall heavily. The downpour marred the illuminations. His majesty left the fetes at 10:30 and re-embarked for Hamburg.

Brilliant Marine Fight.

The rain ceased at 10 o'clock, allowing the fireworks to finish with a brilliant marine fight between two forts erected between the island and Lombardi bridge. There was a tremendous cannonading by the mimic guns. The burgomaster, in the course of his speech at the Rathhaus, read a telegram received from the empress, in which her majesty expressed regret because of her inability to be present and her best wishes for the prosperity of the ancient emporium of Hamburg.

American Diplomats Present.

United States Ambassador Runyon, Lieut. Vreeland, naval attache to the United States embassy at Vienna; the Hon. Benjamin F. Tracy, ex-secretary of the navy of the United States, and Thomas B. Ferguson, United States minister to Sweden and Norway, are quartered at Street's hotel.

The Visiting Seamen.

Kiel, June 20.—Many members of the crews of the American, Austrian, Roumanian and Spanish warships were given shore leave yesterday. The populace are greatly interested in them, especially the Austrians, as belonging to a country which is a member of the triple alliance, but the Spaniards excited the chief admiration for their neatness and smartness. Admiral Menard, commanding the French squadron, has visited several prominent persons ashore.

Gould's Yacht in Collision.

London, June 20.—A dispatch from Kiel says that as George Gould's yacht Atalanta was entering port yesterday she collided with the Parthenope. Neither vessel sustained any material damage.

More French Protests.

Plainfield is the best governed city in New Jersey.

Dogs will soon be as scarce in Elizabeth as mosquitos are in Plainfield.

Ninety-three in the shade, not a breath of air stirring, and commencement exercises tonight. Think of it.

The returns of the census enumeration will probably advance Plainfield from a third to a second-class city.

However guilty ex-Inspector Wm. McLaughlin may have been of the charges on which he was convicted, there is in his sentence and its attendant humiliation a pitiableness that will win him sympathy even in his time of disgrace.

Uncle Sam's court in New Jersey has "gone broke. The June term at Trenton yesterday was abruptly concluded by the discovery that there is no money to pay witnesses. All the cases were put over till the September term.—Paterson Daily Press.

The Common Council of Elizabeth have ordained that the bicycle riders of that city must carry lanterns on their wheels when riding in the streets after dusk. Judging from news reports sent out from Elizabeth and from an editorial published in last night's Journal the ordinance is not received with very much favor by the riders, for they are now demanding that all vehicles be compelled to carry lights after dusk. Such agitation as this displays somewhat of a vindictative spirit on the part of the wheelmen rather than the graceful acceptance of the provisions of the ordinance that should characterize their actions. It is ridiculous to demand or to argue that a vehicle drawn by a single horse or team should be compelled to carry lights because bicycles are. There is no comparison as to the relative danger to pedestrians of a noiseless bicycle and a vehicle drawn by horses, whether it be a buggy or a lumbering dray.

CHURCH CHIMES.

The consecration meeting of the First Baptist Christian Endeavor society tomorrow evening will be led by Fred. Smith, president of Trinity Reformed society.

The Ladies Aid society of the German Reformed church met last evening, and elected the following officers: President, Mrs. Philip Bach; secretary, Miss Mentzen Bach; treasurer, Mrs. Peter Doeringer.

A fair will be held in Voehl's new building at 220 East Front street on Friday afternoon and evening of this week for the benefit of the building fund of Trinity Reformed church. Admission for adults will be ten cents and for children five cents.

Hurt While Stealing a Ride.

Charles Woods, colored, living next to the Muhlenberg Hospital, was stealing a ride on a freight train last night about eight o'clock and when the train reached Washington street he jumped off. The train was moving quite rapidly and he slipped and fell. The right side of his face was scratched and bruised, his right eye was also injured and his right hand crushed.

He was taken to his home and Dr. Tomlinson was called. He dressed the wounds and today he is getting along nicely.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The New Brunswick Y. M. C. A. bicycle club enjoyed a run to this city last night, and were shown through the building of the local association.

It is said that C. M. Murphy will be severely dealt with by the racing board for his alleged attempt to interfere with Sims in the ten-mile race Saturday, when after being hissed he left the track. C. Baker, who won third place in this race, practically retired from the race after breaking the world's record for seven miles, and did the remaining three miles at a moderate gait for the third prize, there being no one to beat him out.

Thomas Eck, the manager for John S. Johnson, was in Philadelphia yesterday for the purpose of matching Johnson against Zimmerman, but neither the New Jersey rider nor his manager could be found, and yesterday afternoon the negotiations were dropped, temporarily at least. Eck expressed a willingness to race any distance, for $5,000 a side, and at any place outside of Asbury Park. A dispatch was sent to Zimmerman, who is in Pittsburg, stating that he would have to make a match or let the public judge who is the better man.

The proposed match between W. C. Sanger, of Milwaukee, and C. M. Murphy, of Brooklyn, has been arranged and will take place at the fourteenth annual racemeet of the Kings County Wheelmen at Manhattan Beach on Saturday, June 22d. The race is to be run in three one-mile heats, the winner of two heats to win the match. A $500 trophy will be given to the fortunate rider. George D. Gideon, chairman of the Racing Board, will referee the race. Sanger is in good form and on Monday there was but six inches difference in the finish between E. C. Bald and himself at Waltham.

The second annual century run of the Associated Cycling Clubs of New Jersey, which will be held on July 6th, promises to be a big affair, it being expected that fully 1,000 persons will make the run. The Asbury Park wheelmen have presented to the association two silver cups, valued at $100 and $50, which will be presented to the clubs sending the largest and second largest number of riders through from Newark to Asbury Park. The association will give five silk banners, one to the club from Pennsylvania taking through the largest number of survivors, one to New York and Brooklyn, two to the association clubs first and second, and one to the club from any State not eligible to compete frr the others. The route of the ride runs through Plainfield.

The Young Men's Christian Association of San Francisco has just sent the following petition to the City Board of Supervisors: "We, the undersigned citizens of this city and county, pray to the honorable Board of Supervisors to enact and enforce that it be unlawful for ladies to wear bloomers or knickerbockers, or any attire unbecoming the fair sex. We consider the above wearing apparel—and we believe all good Christians will uphold us in our theory—a perpetual menace to the good morals of this city. We have consulted eminent physicians, and they all agree that it is unhealthy for ladies to ride bicycles. Furthermore, we have great compassion for the fair sex. Hoping our prayer will be received and special attention be given by your honorable body," etc.

Tore His Cheek Into Shreds.

Patrick Crowman, a vicious character, recently released from the State Prison, assaulted Philip Honeyman, a prominent citizen of Somerville, Monday night. Honeyman was stretched unconscious by a blow on the head from Crowman's fist. John McCarthy, a bystander, who went to Honeyman's assistance, was set upon by Crowman, who encircled McCarthy's neck with his arms and tore his cheek into shreds with his teeth. A large crowd surrounded the infuriated man and would have done him violence but for the arrival of the police.

A Happy Surprise.

A very pleasant social surprise was given at the home of Mrs. George Becker on Somerset street Tuesday evening. Strawberries and cream were served in abundance.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destored forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

STRICTLY PROFESSIONAL.

A Doctor Who Never Mixes Social Talk With His Duties as a Physician.

"In my experience," said a well known doctor "I have met with many curious examples of distorted ideas of what professional etiquette should be, but the most marked case of any is to be found in a Philadelphia doctor of high standing.

"He possesses considerable skill, and this, along with many mannerisms and affections, with a startling nicety of dress always in the latest fashion, has made this physician the pet of the world of fashion, who are willing to pay exorbitant prices for indulging in a social fad. They all like him because he is so different.

"The doctor is a great stickler on the ethics of medical practice, and considers his methods the only proper ones for a physician to follow. He refrains when visiting a patient from saying anything to any person in the house, aside from asking for information concerning the case in hand, but a most polite 'Good-day' when arriving and leaving. He believes that the doctor should be apart from the man; so, in a well defined manner, he conducts a dual life—Dr. Blank as the physician and Dr. Blank as the social man.

"You can imagine how this cool professional manner seems in the homes of his friends, yet no matter how closely he may be connected when called in professionally he always maintains his attitude.

"I know of one case in which he was called in by a college chum to attend his wife. The two had been the warmest sort of friends in college, having roomed together and graduated in the same class. But, as such things go in this world, they had not seen much of each other in late years, their business keeping them apart and kind fortune having favored the man's home with health, so there was no need for a physician. But he called his friend in when he needed him. At the door he met him with a cordial greeting and a hearty handshake, only to have a cold 'Good morning' and an indifferent grasp of the hand in return.

"The man, thinking he must have some cause for his apparently cool, indifferent manner, said no more but conducted him to his wife's room, where he answered all the questions put to him by the physician. As he was going downstairs he stopped in the library, and taking up a decanter, said:

"'Allow me to give you a glass of sherry, doctor?'

"This the doctor refused, and proceeded on his way down stairs, and with a 'good-day' went out.

"The gentleman was nonplussed by his strange action. The friend of his college days so changed! His meditations was interrupted by the ringing of the bell, and on going to the head of the stairs found it was the doctor returned. But it was not the doctor; it was the man.

"The returned doctor did not wait for his friend to come down and greet him but rushed upstairs, and taking his hand was most cordial. This puzzled the gentleman more than ever, and he began to think his friend had really gone insane. But his old college chum dragged him into the library, where, without waiting for an invitation from his host, he took up the decanter and poured out two glasses of wine. Then, selecting an easy chair, he sat down with the remark:

"'Well, John, this is like the good old days gone by.'

"Then he plied all sorts of questions to the astonished man, who was so amazed that everything seemed jumbled to him. Finally he recovered himself to ask him the meaning of his actions upon his first visit. The doctor explained how rigidly he adhered to a line of ethics in medical practice, and how he never presumed that a professional call was intended to be a social visit.

"'Now,' he went on, 'I finished my professional call, went outside and waited awhile; then I made my social call, for I was anxious to see and talk to you, John. I never allow any of my patients to say I overstepped the line of professionalism even one iota.

"My life as a doctor and my life as a man are two different things altogether, and I keep them apart from each other, so that they are perfect strangers. It may seem strange, but it is an idea I have.'"

Use it in Time.

Catarrh starts in the nasal passages, affecting eyes, ears and throat, and is in fact, the great enemy of the mucous membrane. Neglected colds in the head almost invariably precede catarrh, causing an excessive flow of of mucous, and if the mucous discharge becomes interrupted the disagreeable results of catarra will follow, such as bad breath, severe pain across forehead and about the eyes, a roaring and buzzing sound in the ears and oftentimes a very offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles.

The Advance of Woman.

Apart from any question of right, would it be for the best interests of civilization to grant women a wider sphere of activity? The trend and current of the social evolution is surely in the direction of larger liberty for all, in the degree that they are able to use it. It is in the direction of the removal of barriers and needless restraints. Every attempt at such removal in the past has been greeted by loud prophecies of disaster. The aroused watch-dogs of church and state have started in full cry upon the track of the innovator with angry yelpings of alarm. But that what was might have been expected, and should frighten no one. We all inherit a residuum of antediluvian sentiments which remain suspended in our minds like mud in water and interfere with the clearness of our thinking. It is only when it has had time to settle, and we recognize it for what it is, that we gain full command of our intellects. Now, I do not pretend as yet to have full command of mine; but, for all that, I seem to have a few star-gleams of intuition which manage to struggle through the turbid medium of antiquated feeling.—H. H. Boyesen, in July Lippincott's.

While in Topeka last March, E. T. Barber, a prominent newspaper man of La Cygne, Kansas, was taken with cholera morbus very severely. The night clerk at the hotel where he was stopping happened to have a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and gave him three doses which relieved him and he thinks saved his life. Every family should keep this remedy in their home at all times. No one can tell how soon it may be needed. It costs but a trifle and may be the means of saving much suffering and perhaps the life of some member of the family. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

Sometime ago I was troubled with an attack of rheumatism. I used Chamberlain's Pain Balm and was completely cured. I have since advised many of my friends and customers to try the remedy and all speak highly of it. Simon Goldbaum, San Luis Rey, Cal. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

I have two little grandchildren who are teething this hot summer weather and are troubled with bowel complaint. I give them Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and it acts like a charm. I earnestly recommend it for children with bowel troubles. I was myself taken with a severe attack of bloody flux, with cramps and pains in my stomach, one-third of a bottle of this remedy cured me. Within twenty-four hours I was out of bed and doing my housework. Mrs. W. L. Dunagan, Bonaqua, Hickman Co., Tenn.

For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves., T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

While at Peekskill, N. Y., Mr. J. A. Scriven, a prominent manufacturer of New York City, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Such good results were obtained from its use that he sent back to the druggist from whom he had obtained it for two more bottles of the same remedy. When you have a cough or cold give this preparation a trial and like Mr. Scriven you will want it when again in need of such a medicine. It is a remedy of great worth and merit. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

Mrs. Matthews's Death Accidental.

The police have investigated the death of Mrs. Hannah Matthews, who was found dead beside the railroad tracks at Rahway Saturday night. They say the story hinting that foul play was the cause of Mrs. Matthews's death is false. The county physician, who has also investigated Mrs. Matthews's death, says there is no need of an inquest, as the case was one of accidental death.

ACCESSORY AFTER THE FACT.

BY HOWARD FIELDING.

[COPYRIGHTED, 1895.]

CHAPTER I.—IN HIDING.

It was in old Chrysalis Hall, where Cecil Dreeme so nearly suffered martyrdom and Densdeth served the devil, that I met with an adventure, not, indeed, to be compared to theirs, yet worth the telling, as I hope to prove.

Chrysalis fascinated me when first I saw its gray walls loom in Winthrop's story; and the impression made in youth survived in manhood. When, after college, and some years of drifting about the world, I found myself in New York, I would have lodgings nowhere else.

Apparently there were many others of the same opinion, for Chrysalis was crowded. The last successor of Janitor Locksley gave me little encouragement; but I was not to be turned away. I selected the apartment that suited me best of those to which I could gain access, and paid the tenant what he asked, to cede it to me. Thus I became possessed of a small bed-room and a large parlor, amply provided with every discomfort which could be expected in so old a building.

In forty years there seems to have been but little improvement in the sociability of Chrysalis. My immediate neighbors were invisible and inaudible. I had only the janitor's word that the other rooms upon my corridor were tenanted. Occasionally, when coming in late at night, I heard sounds of carousal in remote portions of the structure, and there was a piano (not to be located by any effort of the ear) which often uttered the prayer from Semiramide and never anything else. In short, Chrysalis was quite what I had thought it would be.

My arrival must have been unnoticed in a place so given over to minding its own business. I caused no commotion, for I bought my predecessor's furniture as it stood, and the trifling matter of the trunks was managed with exemplary quiet. But once, in the first two weeks of my tenantry, did I see a sign of any dweller in the rooms that opened on my corridor. That single occasion had something of mystery in it—enough to promise an adventure in a place so suitable as Chrysalis to strange occurrences.

One morning as I was dressing some one rapped smartly upon my door. It required less than a minute to make myself fairly presentable; and then I answered the knock. No one was there. I looked along the corridor. It was empty; but opposite me was a door that was slightly ajar, and in the crack of it I saw an eye that caught just enough light to be visible. It vanished instantly, and the door was softly closed.

I liked this performance very little; it looked like a trick to subject me to scrutiny. I stepped across the hall and knocked several times upon the door, but could get no response. During the day I asked the janitor about my neighbor.

"He's a queer old fellow," was the reply. "I don't know anything about him."

"At least you know his name," said I.

"Oh, yes; of course I know his name," he answered, with great frankness. "It's Smith."

I thanked him brusquely for his lesson in the etiquette of Chrysalis, and added that when I wanted to know another tenant's name I would guess at it. He nodded approvingly, and turned away.

It may have been a week later that I was returning to my room, after midnight. It happened that there was rain and I wore rubbers, which made my steps noiseless on the stone floors of Chrysalis. My corridor, which was never light, was dark as Erebus that night. The usual feeble jet of gas was out, and the high window at the end of the hall admitted scarcely a ray. The densest of the shadows lay under it, and thence, as I advanced, there came to meet me the sharp sound of metal falling on the stones. I paused, a bit startled. Then a match that made no noise was struck upon the floor and in the light of it I saw the face of Frederick Dane.

Had it been any other face I might not have recognized it by the scant illumination of the wavering, blue flame; but his I could not mistake, for I had studied it with too deep attention in the years when we were friends. I say friends, though I think his feeling toward me had never justified the name of friendship, but I had certainly preferred him to any man on earth, and would have made the last possible sacrifice to win his regard. I had known him at college and for a year afterwards, but had not seen him since. I had been told that he was dissipating his small property, and generally going to the bad.

It was with infinite pleasure that I found him again. I had had no idea that he was in New York. I did not give a second's time to wondering what he was doing there at midnight before the door of the mysterious old man called "Smith." Instead I sprang forward with a cry of welcome.

Instantly the match went out. I heard the click of a key in a lock. The door was hastily opened, and would have been as hastily closed again had I not thrust in my foot.

"Fred!" I exclaimed. "It's I. Open the door and——"

"Hush!" he breathed, in a voice that checked me instantly. "Don't speak my name. Come in."

I obeyed, wondering at his manner. He closed and locked the door. Then he lit a jet of gas, and turned toward me. I saw that he was changed. His face was thin, and less agreeable to the eye than in the days when I had thought him the handsomest fellow in the world. Not only was he very pale but it seemed to me that his face had something of the grayish hue that marks the prisoner.

"You were alone, of course?" he said.

"Yes," I replied; "but what's the matter? You were not so easily startled in the old days. Give me your hand, and say you're glad to see me, whether you are or not."

"I don't know whether I am or not," he said, with a smile that took something from the words. "It depends on whether you can keep a secret. I used to think you couldn't. At any rate I'll swear you never kept your own."

"Never was so lucky as to have any, my boy," I rejoined, struggling to preserve my good nature; "but I'll swear, in my turn, that you never knew me to betra one of yours."

"There's something in that," he replied, with greater ease of manner. "Now, look here; I'll begin frankly. I knew that you were in that room across the hall, but I didn't intend to let you see me. When you first moved in I got a glimpse of you, and, one morning about a week ago, I took means to assure myself."

"I remember that," said I. "But why——"

"I'll answer the question before you ask it. I'm living here very quietly. Nobody knows that I'm here. There are reasons——"

"Creditors?" I asked.

"Yes, confound them, and that's not the worst of it," he replied with a frown. "But don't ask me any questions. Just remember that I'm dead. If you want to see me in my grave, I'll let you in here once in a while, but if you make the smallest mistake, if you breathe a word to a living soul, if you whisper my name in the corridors of this infernal mausoleum, you will utterly ruin me. I'm Smith; remember that. You used to be my friend; prove it now. A friend in my present situation will be next best to nobody at all."

"This is cheerful," I rejoined. "How long is this agreeable situation likely to last?"

"Heaven knows. Sit down, and talk of something else. Talk of old times."

I did, and presently his mood changed for the better. We sat till the light began to creep in through the windows with their heavy curtains, and not once did we refer to our surroundings. As the light increased, he grew uneasy, and presently I stole away across the hall, leaving him alone.

IN THE LIGHT OF IT I SAW FREDERICK DANE.

From that time, I saw him frequently. He came in the forenoon while his room was being cared for. It simplified matters, he told me. Theretofore he had stood in the curtained recess of a window while the woman attended to the order of the apartment. How he secured his food, I could not guess. He had heavily bribed the janitor and that may account for it. But he looked as if he had eaten much less than would have been good for him. Late in the evenings, he sometimes admitted me to his room. It was agreed that I should not knock upon his door; he was to summon me. He seemed to take some pleasure in my society, but I fancied that he cared less for it than for the chance of assuring himself that I still kept his secret.

As to the true nature of that secret I was long in doubt. The hypothesis of debt was weak, though it fitted the man I knew him to be careless beyond measure in financial matters. But that he should voluntarily imprison himself for such a reason was beyond my credence. He was a man to keep his creditors waiting, but never to keep them searching. In my first struggles with the problem I could get no further than his own words carried me; he was in debt, but that was not the worst of it. For a poor man, I was quite in funds at that time, and I offered, with the utmost heartiness, to let him have $2,000 on his own terms. He hesitated, and then with warm expressions of gratitude, declined. I urged the loan upon him, and even went so far as to question him about his needs; but the net result to me of the entire conversation was a doubt whether money was powerless to help him or the sum I had named was too small.

I hope that there is within me the capacity for friendship, and I am well aware that curiosity can have no part in anything so high. Perfect mutual confidence may be a good thing, but the ability to get along without it is much better. Such was my conviction at that time, yet I could not help puzzling over Dane's condition. I said to myself that I was not doing my duty to him—a favorite self-deception of the curious. "In hiding," I said, "and confessedly without resources, what will be the end of the man?"

My temptation to pry into his affairs was stimulated by the discovery that a key which I had brought in my pocket from my last lodgings in a city far away, fitted the lock of his door. When he was within, the door was always bolted, but when he was away, I could enter if I pleased. I will confess that there was more than accident in this matter; I had tried my varied assortment of keys in his lock one morning when I wished to leave a note for him. On reflection it seemed best to hide my discovery from him, so I left the note close to the door as if it had been pushed under. As a matter of fact, there was not space enough, and that was the reason why I had tried the keys.

I was sitting in my room one evening when I fancied that I heard Dane without. I turned my light low, and cautiously opened the door. Looking down the corridor, I saw a shadowy figure close to the wall. Its back was toward me, as if the man had been leaving the corridor and had paused. He turned suddenly and ran stealthily toward me. As he came quite close I saw that it was Dane. He saw me, too, at the same moment; and, with a quick but noiseless movement, he pushed open my door and darted in. I heard a step in the hall. Evidently Dane had had the rare fortune to meet one of the lodgers in that wing of Chrysalis.

I closed the door. Dane had sunk into a chair

"A close call, that!" he whispered; and he pased his hand over his moist forehead.

There was a bundle on the floor beside him. I pointed to it. He shook his head.

"Wait a few minutes," he said, "and I'll take it away. It's nothing of any consequence."

It was in my heart to plead for his confidence, but I decided upon another course. I spoke of general topics. We talked for some minutes with a constraint so obvious that it would have been absurd, but for the evident deadly mystery behind it all. Suddenly he broke off in the middle of a sentence:

IT CONTAINED ONLY AN OVERCOAT.

took up the bundle from the floor, and left my room, after a moment's cautious scrutiny of the corridor.

I heard him open his own door. A little later he came out. I was listening for that. I spied upon him; he had left the bundle in his room.

I waited ten minutes but he did not return. Then I used my key upon his lock, while my heart accused me of a mean and despicable act.

He had hidden the bundle, and I was put to much trouble to find it. At last I hit upon the secret. There was a great stove in his room, but the spring day had been too warm for a fire. Opening the door of the stove I saw what appeared to be a mass of fuel ready for lightning. Two or three sticks of kindling protruded from the coal. It deceived me the first time, but after further search I tried again. And under the coal, where the kindling should have been, I found the bundle.

I opened it upon his table and contained only an overcoat of inferior cloth and poor workmanship. Certainly it had never belonged to Dane. There were indications that a much older man had worn it, and that it had seen hard service.

So much I noted with a glance. And then I saw something that struck a blow upon my heart. The lining of the garment was stained with great streaks and blotches of blood.

There was not a drop upon the outside of it; nor was there any cut or bullet hole through it. My hasty thought was that it had been used to cover the body of some one who had died by violence—doubtless by murder.

I dared not look long at it for fear that Dane would return. I wrapped it in the paper in which I had found it, and returned it to the hiding place which Dane had prepared. I was tempted to put lighter fuel under it and apply the match, but I dared not. Fire, they say, will not burn such things. Some prying fellow, in the name of the law, will always find a button in the ashes and build a gallows of it.

A NAGGING WOMAN.

DR. EDSON DEFENDS HIMSELF FROM CRITICS.

There Are Nagging Men, of Course, but They Occupy Less Exacting Positions. The Effect of Nagging Upon Children and Upon the Peace of the Family.

Dr. Edson ranges the husbands of naggers in three classes. Men of the first class are incited to brutality and violence. Husbands of the second class avoid their homes and seek solace in clubs and saloons. Those of the third class, who remain devoted to their naggers, are usually of nervous temperament, and some have been driven insane by exposure to continual fault-finding, which is more injurious than overwork. But if the irritable nagging of the woman is a consequence of ill health, when the husband understands this fact the nagging often ceases to have any injurious effect on him. The case is different with children. Nagging is equally injurious to their nervous system, whether the mother is an invalid or has no such excuse.

A vivid recollection of a visit to a summer resort is of an irritable, invalid mother and her unhappy, harassed boy. She nagged at him in the dining room till the poor child lost all appetite. One morning the father came down alone and explained that mother was not well enough to come to breakfast. Whereon the boy, with childlike frankness, exclaimed, "Oh, I'm so glad!" Then, seeing his father's reproving glance, he explained: "You know, papa, I'm not glad she's sick; but—but I do enjoy my breakfast so much more when she's not here." The woman was an egotist; her own ailments were her continual theme, and the comfort of her husband and child was wholly disregarded.

"I think mamma doesn't like me, auntie," said another sensitive child. "Oh, if she would only sometimes seem satisfied with me, and speak to me as you do to Nellie! I used to try so hard to please her, but it isn't any good; for no matter what I do she always thinks it is wrong."

One sees nervous, nagging women in charge of schools and must heartily pity them, for they are obliged to earn their living; nevertheless, they are ruining the dispositions of the children; and, in spite of almost frantic efforts, cannot maintain discipline. Oft reiterated complaint ceases to have remedial effect.

A handsome woman, whose face bore traces of a sweeter disposition in girlhood, was unhappily married to a drunkard. With her large family, small means and the misery of seeing the man return night after night in a disgusting condition of intoxication she had a heavy burden to bear. But she did not rail at the man; she feared driving him to lower depths. The results of her disappointment and worry were visited on the unfortunate children. She was not by nature a motherly woman. The children came into the world without a welcome and were made to realize it. Shaken, scolded, unreasonably accused, they had no home in the true sense of the word, and each took the earliest opportunity to leave the parents and go out into the world.

There are nagging men as well as nagging women, but as the fathers are usually absent from the home many hours of the day, they have less opportunity to destroy family peace. It is said that "the mother holds the key of the soul and stamps the coin of character." We remember Cowper's lines to his mother's picture: "Oh, that those lips had language! Life has passed with me but roughly since I heard thee last." Memories of a mother's sweet voice have led back wandering feet to paths of righteousness; but harsh words of other mothers have driven the children to the broad ways of destruction, as did a certain widow who railed continually at her children. They feared her when they were little: but as they grew older they gave back railing for railing; and every son of that mother was laid in a drunkard's grave. A little lad made desperate by the nagging of both parents ran away, crossed the sea as a stowaway, and found refuge with a relative, who obtained permission to bring him up. Under the rule of his parents he had been deceitful, driven to falsehood through fear. When loved and trusted he returned love and trust, and developed a fine character.

In another home the nagging of the mother was repeated in the children. Old grievances were dwelt upon, magnified and brought forward at most inopportune moments, and there was a continual round of petty faultfinding and retort. But a realization of her responsibility came to the mother; she controlled the querulous words and turned them into gentle ones. The children were puzzled. They did not expect the new condition to last; but it did last, and now it is rare to hear an impatient word in that house from any of its members.

One may make excuse for the nervous condition of invalids; the irritability that results from sleepless nights and long continued suffering is difficult to control, but much of the uncontrolled irritability of invalids is the outcome of self pity and lack of consideration for others. The development of egotism and selfishness in some natures is one of the evils of invalidism.

THE FLY.

And now arrives upon the scene,
In black and brown and bottle green,
The pesky fly who tickles so
The head above, the toes below.
He is no good to man or beast,
Yet's always present at the feast.
He heeds not cusses, and perhaps
Enjoys the dodging of your slaps.
Oh, drat the buzzing imp! I say.
Will nothing make him stay away?
Could I but kill him I should feel
Not so much anger. Vain appeal!
He's here to stay and play the clown
At seaside, mountain and in town.
If he would give his wings a rest
And simply use his legs, the pest,
No one would be more glad than I
To sound his praises to the sky.

THE COPPER'S LITTLE JOKE.

It Afforded Him Less Fun at His Wife's Expense Than He Had Counted On.

A great deal of amusement was caused on an east bound electric train the other afternoon by a waggish policeman, who selected his wife for his victim. The policeman had done duty at the ball park, and his wife had been to see the game. While the crowd was leaving the woman stood about the front of the park and waited for her husband to ride up town with him. He finally arrived, and the pair boarded a crowded car. Both were young and only recently married, and they enjoyed themselves hugely on the way.

The woman wore a handsome little gold watch, evidently a present from her husband. While half the people in the car were looking, and while his wife was speaking to a woman acquaintance outside the car, the policeman deftly took the watch from his wife's pocket and transferred it to his pistol pocket. When the car reached Eighteenth street the policeman remarked that it was a few minutes past six o'clock, and everybody in the car looked at the policeman's wife.

Of course she did what every one in the car expected she would. She felt for her watch. It seemed as if a sudden violent pain had attacked the woman's heart. Her face became very pale and her eyes dilated. Her husband seemed greatly alarmed and asked her what the matter was. She looked over the crowd in the car like a frightened fawn. It was a full minute before she could speak. Then she whispered in her husband's ear loud enough for the intensely interested spectators to hear:

"I have been touched; some one has stolen my watch."

Her eyes began to grow dim, and before the policeman could answer a big tear rolled down her cheek and fell in her lap.

"Here is the watch; I was only joking with you," and the policeman felt back for his pocket.

Then a look of dismay overspread his face. The watch had disappeared. He felt in first one pocket and then another and finally turned all his pockets wrong side out. He worked rapidly toward the last, and perspired a good deal. His wife looked on in open mouthed astonishment. So did the other people in the car. All had smiled and looked out the windows of the car when the woman first discovered that her watch was gone, but when her husband failed to produce it, after having told her that he had taken it, the people sat upright and watched the hunt for the missing timepiece with great interest.

Finally a quiet appearing young man, who sat in the rear of the car, arose and handed the watch to the policeman's wife.

"I just wanted to teach your husband a lesson," he said.

And the crowd of passengers gave vent to a prolonged, hearty laugh, and the policeman and his wife finally joined in the merriment, though they were a little slow to appreciate the joke.—Courier-Journal.

TO SPARE HIS DOG THE TASK.

Being a Brief Account of Why Mr. Goslington Took Up German.

"It will by no means do to assume," said Mr. Goslington, "that because dumb creatures do not respond promptly to our kindness they are insensible to it. This truth was brought home strikingly to me once in the case of a dog that I owned. That this dog was not impervious to gentle treatment was clearly shown by the fact that when you petted it on the head it would wag its tail; thereby showing not only that it understood the kind treatment, but that it was pleased with it all through. But I observed that when I spoke to the dog when it was not looking at me it paid no attention. This was surprising and at first rather disturbing, but the dog seemed in other respects so kindly that I did nothing about it.

"One day when a German friend of mine was visiting me, and when I had called the dog with the usual result I asked my friend to call him to see if he would mind him any better. He did call, and naturally enough, being a German, he called in German. To our great surprise the dog turned and came joyously bounding toward us. The simple fact was that the dog understood the universal kindness of touch and eye, but the only spoken language he knew was German, from which country, as I subsequently learned, he had been imported only about ten days before I bought him.

"The only question now was whether I should teach the dog English, or whether I should learn German. I thought it would be easier for me to learn a new language than for the dog, and that is how I came to take up the study of German."

EFFORTS ARE REWARDED

Eighteen Graduates From the High School.

FROM STUDENTSHIP TO THE ALUMNI

Music Hall Filled With Friends of the Young Men and Women, Who Who Applaud Their Efforts—Dr. Raymond Tells of the Beneficiency of Education—The Prizes and Awards.

After years of earnest and persistent application to studies which would equip them to go out into the world to grasp with the sterner realities of life, nineteen young men and women stepped from the studentship to the alumni of the High School last night. The evolution was made in Music Hall where the commencement exercises were held, and to which point it seemed as if half the city had wended their way when the eye was cast over the vast audience who had pre-empted every seat and then overflowed into filling the available standing room in the rear of the hall. The audience contained the intelligence, wealth and fashion of Plainfield, and as viewed from the stage presented a kaleidoscope of an endless variety of beautiful gowns surrounding symmetrical forms of fair attendants, the effulgency of which was relieved to a certain extent by the conventional attire of their male escorts. A thousand or more fans moving to and fro gave a zest of life to the scene, while the busy hum of two thousand voices previous to the opening of the exercises talking of as many different incidents and phases of graduating events of previous years, imbued all with that qui vive feeling that varies the monotony of life and makes it worth living.

Previous to the opening of the exercises the Seventh Regiment Orchestra of New York, under the leadership of W. R. Rodgers, rendered an overture entitled "Light Cavalry." The music which was discoursed by these musicians was of a high rank, and therefore appreciated by the audience.

At the conclusion of the selection the graduating class marched on to the stage, and took seats in a semi-circle, followed by the members of the Board of Education, Prof. H. M. Maxson, Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards and Dr. A. V. V. Raymond. The young lady members of the class were attired in white gowns. The class is as follows: Frances Estelle Bailey, John Vanderveer Beekman, Jr., Thomas Dezelle Blair, Valentine Laura Chandor, Frederick Coriell, Edward Osborne Clark, Edith Marion Darby, Henry Baldwin Drake, Laura Louise Emmons, Mabel Force, Clara Augusta Force, Helen Augusta Hazen, George Augustus Horne, Charles Burdette Morse, Etta Raybert, Robert Elwood Sebring, Edgar Irving Serrell, Bertha Shotwell Thorne, Isaac Edward Titsworth.

The invocation was offered by Dr. Richards, and after "Gems From Little Christopher" had been rendered by the orchestra, President Probasco of the Board of Education announced the salutatory and an essay by Miss Helen Augusta Hazen, who took for her subject, "Methods of Charity, Past and Present." Miss Hazen spoke in a clear, firm tone, without notes, and carried the attention of the audience with her throughout her essay, which was as follows:

Mr. President and members of the Board of Education; tonight I offer you a glad welcome in the name of the Class of '95, toward whom you have always shown such a kindly spirit, and in whose education you have so heartly co-operated with their instructors.

Citizens of Plainfield, you whose bounty has given us the education, the help, which we know will ever be valuable to us, to you I extend a hearty welcome. Equipped with this education, we go forth to cope with the great world well armed; some of us to join in instant combat, while others of us linger to make our weapons still more bright and keen.

We stand here tonight as witnesses for one of the greatest uses to which modern charity has been devoted. The public schools of today are but the perfected free educators of the Romans, those stern avaricious old warriors, who founded their common schools, not for the purpose of benefitting the poor, but for the purpose of guarding themselves against the evil which would result if the ever-increasing multitude of children were to grow up, uneducated and unrestrained to work destruction, in time, upon the aristocratic class, the patricians. The public school is but one way in which the State copes with vice; 'tis the one sure way in which charity wages war with sin and pauperism.

You may ask, perhaps, what is Charity. To define this word is one of the most difficult things imaginable. It is so broad that no concise meaning can be found for the modern use of the term. The word itself means "love." In the ages which came and went, after the Great Master ascended, the word lost its beautiful fundamental meaning and became debased to "almsgiving." Those of you who are familiar with the revised edition of the New Testament, will remember how completely the word "charity" has disappeared from its pages and the word "love" taken its place.

What Charity, that trust left us by the Most Compassionate One, is to Christianity. Liberality was to Paganism; but Charity and Liberality are as widely separated from each other as Christianity from Paganism. Charity gives to alleviate a man's distress, to lessen his great need, but Liberality gave for the sake of display, or for gaining some office or high honor. Let us now take a look at the great world before the birth of Charity, before Christianity came.

In Athens, we find Liberality most flourishing, since, by nature, the Greeks were more benevolent than the Romans. It was at Athens that the nearest approach to a systematic relief of the poor was made. Those, who through bodily weakness or infirmity could not earn their own livelihood, were relieved by the State. The State also brought up, at its own expense, the orphans of citizens who had fallen in war, maintaining and training them until they were eighteen years of age, then dismissing them fully equipped.

Later, Athens became corrupt, the State money was distributed, in the form of bribes, among the rabble; work was neglected and the Athenians fell lower in both economy and morals.

In Rome, the same method of distribution was employed, only on a very much larger scale. While in Athens the money exacted from the allies was somewhat small, in Rome "the spoils of a conquered world were given to the people in the form of money, banquets, and theatrical displays."

The free distribution of corn was another evil in Rome, in fact one of the greatest, since by it was the number of poor citizens increased, honest labor destroyed, and the people themselves weakened morally and physically.

There was one institution, however, among the Romans, the endowments for the education of poor children, which deserves commendation, though founded not through charitable but political motives. The capital set apart for this purpose was invested at a moderate rate of interest, and the income maintained and educated boys and girls, chiefly those free-born. There is surely some ground for believing they were founded from motives of humanity, as well as political reasons, since girls, also, shared in the privileges.

Under the law of Israel, "whose God was the only true God," we find no actual system of poor relief. There never was, and never could be, much poverty among the Israelites, for the reason that they lived plainly and respected work as a duty imposed upon every man by God. There were poor in Israel, of course, but their condition was much improved by several good laws. "The olive tree was not twice shaken, nor the vineyard twice gathered, nor the sheaves of corn, left by the gleaners, to be gathered up—all that belonged to the poor. All debts, also, were released in the seventh year." The Jews were merciful but not charitable, they were liberal in almsgiving but not ostentatious about it. Still, as now, beggary was unknown among them. The Emperor Julian certifies to the fact that, amongst the Jews of his time, there were no beggars. Yet even to the Children of Israel, the divine Charity of Christ came as a revelation.

Tracing the history of charity methods through the early years of the Christian church, we find that the early Christians gave, not only of their abundance, but also of themselves, their time and personal labor; such charity was always accompanied by great self-sacrifice.

"Almsgiving had then nothing of that weak humanity, as apparent in later times." To the poor, necessities only were given, and all cultivated a life of simplicity. Willingly did those early Christians open their doors to receive the sick, the orphan and the stranger.

At first the relief of the poor was congregational, but, "during the Middle Ages, hospitals and monasteries became the distributing points of a charity which resolved itself into a wholesale almsgiving." In the beginning Charity was crowned with an ample blessing, since "in the Christian Church there were actually no beggars and none suffered want."

But almsgiving brought a curse upon the Church of later days. Beggars were produced by the wholesale; they fairly swarmed around the doors of the monasteries and churches. And the monks encouraged them; for "they reckoned their treasures in Heaven by the number of beggars daily fed on earth."

Yet a day of disaster followed because of that vast system of indiscriminate almsgiving. Nowhere was the fall of Monasticism attended with greater misery than in England, for it turned out upon the world those destitute of means and without ability to work. In 1601, the first poor law was passed. Under this law each parish took care of the disabled and forced the able-bodied to work. This law relieved the distress prevalent at the time, and forms the basis of the present English poor law.

Now let us consider the great works and reforms which charity has accomplished in this present century.

First in England, our Mother Country, we find that early in this century, the jails, "those schools of crime," were purified of their abuses, that the laws for debtors were improved, that the white slaves—the poor oppressed women and little children of Great Britain—were released from their terrible life in the crowded factories under the tyranny of brutal masters.

Since 1870 there have been established all over England, common schools known as "Board Schools," attendance upon which is made compulsory. There have been established free libraries, reading rooms, and art-galleries; sanitary matters have been regulated; hospitals, charitable associations and trained nurses provided for the sick and suffering poor.

To give a brief account of the modern charity methods in America would be impossible. But let us consider a few of the leading, the most successful methods. In 1872 the State Charities Aid Association was established Its plan grew out of the thoughts, experiences and benevolent purposes of one woman, Miss Louisa Lee Schuyler.

The object of the society is two-fold: to encourage interest in the New York State charity institutions, and to make the present pauper system more efficient, reforming it in accordance with the most enlightened views of Christianity, science and philanthropy. It was through the efforts of this organization that Bellevue is now the admirable institution it is. Nor did the society confine its labors to New York city alone, but spread out over the whole State, co-operating with other charitable associations already formed. Well does it carry on its work and prove itself worthy of the motto chosen for it, "Not alms, but a friend."

There are other institutions doing excellent work. Each summer brings to us reports of the different Fresh Air Societies and the Floating Hospitals. Year after year we read of the many homeless children who have been sent from New York to good pure homes in the great West, where they may grow up to be worthy citizens.

All over our great Union there are scat-

PRETTY HOME WEDDING.

PERFORMED AMID FLOWERS AND CONGRATULATING FRIENDS.

Miss Lillie Dunn Garretson Becomes Mrs. George Macintyre—Rev. Dr. Richardson the Officiating Clergyman.

Yesterday afternoon at five o'clock, surrounded by a bower of flowers and ferns, took place the marriage of Miss Lillie Dunn Garretson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Garretson, to George Milton Macintyre.

The bride looked charming, attired in pale gray faille francaise, trimmed with point lace, and carrying a bouquet of white bridal roses. She entered the parlor on the arm of the groom, preceded by Kittie Garretson, sister of the bride, who was gowned in white, and acted as flower girl.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. W. Richardson, owing to the illness of the bride's pastor, Rev. Cornelius Schenck.

Mr. and Mrs. Macintyre received the hearty congratulations of the guests present for their future prosperity and happiness, and the many costly and useful presents also received gave evidence of the high esteem in which the popular couple are held.

A wedding supper was served, after which the bride and groom left on the 6:40 train for New York, and from there they will go to the Catskills to remain about ten days.

On their return they will take up their residence for a time at the home of the bride's parents on West Front street.

The decorations of the rooms were principally green, and in the hall smilax was artically trimmed about the stairs which ended in a handsome bouquet of white and pink roses.

Guests were present from Somerville, Roycefield, Brooklyn, Cleveland, Bayonne and Plainfield.

Mr. Macintyre is the junior member of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Co.

The happy couple left the house amidst a shower of rice, and as the carriage passed through town a large pair of old shoes were seen hanging from the springs, which were fastened with white muslin.

The bride wore a traveling gown of brown that was very becoming.

Where Education Does Not Educate.

It is a fact to be regretted that every year at the commencement exercises, both in Plainfield and North Plainfield, there are people present who usually remain in the rear part of the building, and their interest is so small that they persist in talking and disturbing a large number of people who are anxious to hear. It is strange that with the educational facilities of these two places, these certain people never seem to be cognizant of other people's feelings.

More of An American Than Ever.

The Daily Press has received the following letter from Peter B. Wright, dated June 8th at Berlin, Germany:

Just a line to let you know of my safe arrival here. I have visited Paris, London, Ireland, Scotland and Holland. From here I go up the Rhine to Lepseic, from there to Switzerland, Norway, Sweeden, Austria, back to London, Paris, and then home. I have been very successful and have enjoyed every step of the way; but I am more of an American than ever, and I would not give up my own land for any other on earth.

A New Business Block.

It is understood that Powlinson & Jones, the West Front street furniture dealers, have purchased of O. M. Hetfield of Dunellen the vacant lot on East Front street just east of Marsh, Ayres & Co.'s place of business. The lot has 43 feet frontage and is 210 feet deep, and the purchase price is said to have been $200 per front foot. A large three-story, modernly equipped building will be erected which will be utilized by Powlinson & Jones for their business.

The Tennis Club Tea.

The Hillside Tennis club will give an afternoon reception at the club grounds tomorrow afternoon. Mrs. L. Lovell will receive the guests of the club, asssisted by Mrs. H N. Borden, Miss Lowell, Miss Walz, and Miss Gilbert. The courts will be open all day, and tea will be served at four o'clock.

Another Church for Plainfield.

A Swedish free mission church consisting of seventeen members was organized in the Grace P. E. chapel, last evening. The officers elected were as follows: President, Rev. M. Ahlberg; secretary, Axel Strandberg; treasurer, Z. Pearson; collector, J. Johnson; deacons, Peder Thomson and Z. Pearson. Rev. A. P. Nelson, of Orange, assisted the pastor.

House Quarantined.

Lucy Jennings, of 215 Richmond street, a daughter of Andrew Jennings, is ill with the scarlet fever. Dr. Jenkins is attending her. The house is quarantined.

THE FINALE.

Delightful Reception in the Casino Closes the Commencement.

"What's the matter with '95," rang out on the clear night air last evening, or rather this morning, as the reception to the Class of '95 of the High School came to an end, and all who were present united in spirit, if not in voice with the reply, "She's all right," for of all the commencements receptions, this was by far the best and the most enjoyable.

The Casino was very prettily decorated with trailing vines and the class colors, red and white. The arrangements had been made by a committee from the classes of '93 and '94 and showed their excellent taste. The committee consisted of Miss Millie Langden, chairman; Miss Mattie Barrett, John Goddard, Miss Mabel Mitchell, Ray Carpenter, Thomas Cuming, Miss Edith Lane, Miss Florence Smith and Miss Alice Leland.

About three hundred of the graduates, the alumni and their friends were present during the evening and attended a model reception and dance. The Seventh Regiment Orchestra furnished the music and rendered a fine programme of sixteen dances which came to an end about two o'clock. The ticket committee consisted of Thomas H. Cuming, Norman Probasco and S. Clinton Crane.

LITTLE GIRLS' FESTIVAL

Being Conducted in the Voehl Building For a Good Cause.

The fair and festival which is being held this afternoon in the Voehl building, and which was arranged by the little girls of Trinity Reformed church, is well worth attending. An effort has been made to make it a success, and the store is very prettily trimmed with flags, bunting and chinese lanterns. The proceeds will be devoted to the Sunday-school.

Those who are in charge are as follows:

HURT IN A RUNAWAY.

The Misses Coard Narrowly Escape Serious Injury.

Miss Mabel and Miss Alice Coard, of East Ninth street, met with a serious accident yesterday afternoon about five o'clock while they were out driving on Sixth street.

They turned from Sixth street into Sycamore street and the horse became frightened at the breaking of a shaft. Miss Alice Coard jumped from the wagon and was not injured, while Miss Mabel remained in the carriage til she was thrown out. It was first thought that she was fatally injured, and was carried to the porch of Mr. Adams' house nearby. Dr. Berg was called and discovered that there was a bad scalp wound back of the right ear. He dressed the wound and later a carriage from Hedden's livery was sent for and she was taken to her home.

The horse was captured near the residence of J. W. Yates. The wagon was a complete wreck.

Where Teachers Will Go.

The teachers in the Irving school will spend the summer as follows: Miss VanDeuzen at her home, Alton, Wayne county, N. Y., Miss Wood leaves tomorrow with the Honeyman party for Europe, Miss Lee at her home, Sheffield, Mass., Miss Filmer at her home, Gloversville, N. Y., Miss Benz and Miss Scott, Oswego, N. Y. Miss Benz will go to New Brunswick in the fall where she has secured a position. Miss Stillman goes to Woonsocket, R. I., to spend the summer with friends.

Lemonade a Feature.

The Rev. M. E. Dwight has been secured to speak to men in the assembly hall of the Y. M. C. A. on Sunday, at 4:15 p. m. The music, as usual, will be an interesting feature. Iced lemonade will be furnished free before and after the meeting.

—Mr. and Mrs. John Coard wish to express their appreciation of the kindness shown to their daughters yesterday at the time of their accident.

BOROUGH GRADUATES.

Brilliant Audience Gather To Hear the Exercises.

A. M. POWELL DELIVERS AN ADDRESS.

Recitations by Misses Woolston and French, Who Give Evidence of Careful Training and Study—President McCutchen Presented the Diplomas in a Few Appropriate Words.

That North Plainfield has an institution of which she is and may be proud was evidenced last evening when a large and brilliant audience gathered to witness the commencement of many years of earnest effort, high and lofty ambitions, and a hopefulness that was impressive. It was the twelfth annual graduating exercises of the North Plainfield Public School, that was held in Warren chapel at eight o'clock.

The scholars of the school marched in to the inspiring music rendered by Miss Randolph, the pianist, and took seats on the platform, which was also occupied by Principal C.E. Boss, President Samuel St. John McCutchen and the members of the Board of Education, together with members of the borough council.

The school sang "The Holy City," by Adams; and "Blow, Gentle Breeze," by Booth; under the direction of Wm. E. MacClymont. The rendition of both was highly creditable and showed excellent training.

Principal Boss then introduced Miss Adah E. Woolston, the first graduate, who recited Longfellow's beautiful story, "A Roman Legend." Everyone listened with pleasure to the rendition, which was perfect. Especially noteworthy was the clear enunciation of the speaker and the ease and grace with which she gave every line. The next graduate was Miss Maude A. French, who gave "The Lost Galleon" by Harte. It was a masterly effort, and the clear, strong, voice of the speaker could be heard in every portion of the building. The manner in which Miss French rendered her selection gave evidence of careful study that brought out all the fine details of the subject.

Both graduates received flattering applause for their accomplishments. After the singing of a sprightly song, "On Life's Journey," by Veazie, Mr. Boss introduced Aaron M. Powell, who spoke in part as folows:

Members of the class of '95 I congratulate you heartily. I sympathize with you warmly, knowing that feeling with which you are stirred. You came to the halls of our schools under certain conditions of mind and thought. You cannot go back to those conditions. You think now of life and responsibilities. Your education is never finished, but the graduate who has completed his or her task at this point is to be commended. This is no ordinary school. Your opportunities are quite beyond the ordinary. What you were, is the past; what you are, is the present. Education changes the outlook in life very much. Let me illustrate this. On one occasion I went out for a walk in the country with a friend, who was somewhat of an expert on microscopic investigations. It was early one summer morning just after a shower, and as we walked along the road we passed several pools of water. In one of these my friend caught a butterfly, and holding it a few minutes let it go. I noticed in his hand a very small pointed instrument, and with that he separated a very small portion of dust from the butterfly and fixing it on a powerful glass I looked and to my surprise saw what seemed to be a perfect feather with beautiful colors. With the naked eye I would have passed along without that knowledge. What that glass did education does for us in the larger sense.

A few years ago I was driving with a friend through the Catskills to the Mountain House, and we saw the beautiful valley of the Hudson, a wonderful picture of natural beauty. We were overtaken in a thunder shower and drove in a barn. There we met a good kind-hearted farmer. He told us many interesting things and we told him who we were. As closely as he had lived to the mountain he had never been on the summit. In the springtime they had taken a very large range to the Mountain House, and it required six horses to draw it up the steep grade. That fact interested him and he said he was going to the top to see that range. It was the measure of the limit of view in his case. Thus we see that education enlarges the outlook.

James Russell Lowell once said: "Education means not only the opportunity to earn our daily bread, but after we earn it we know how to sweeten it."

Ralph Waldo Emerson was the greatest philosopher the country has ever known, and in his boyhood he struggled hard for an education. He acted as a waiter in college in order to get enough money to get an education.

Whittier, whom it was my privilege to know and love, was a poor Massachusetts farmer boy, who only had three months of school in his boyhood days. A friend taught him shoemaking and in that way he secured enough money to gain a little knowledge. I am afraid these young men here tonight have never known what such an effort is. Whittier was twenty years old before he owned a copy of Shakespeare. "Ally yourself to some great cause" was the poet's great motto.

Louise M. Olcott was a poor girl, working as a servant. Her first writings were refused, but today her books are read the world over. We must make the most of opportunity.

My closing thought is this, that there is too much tendency nowadays to pleasure. There is too great a fondness for it. We read a few days ago in the papers that the costliest prize offered at Yale College for the highest attainment in a certain branch was not offered because the professor had discovered that there was not a student in the college who was deserving of it.

Does this reflect on the time spent in playing football baseball and other games.

A little later we read in the papers about the seniors at Columbia College who enjoyed a smoker and dinner at Sherry's, New York, and the latter probably included sherry. Students are much the worse for such indulgencies.

The New Jersey Legislature investigating committee shows what we need in Jersey, and it's the coming men and women who will be called upon. In Colorado men and women are placed on an equal footing, and may the time come when this shall be the case in New Jersey.

At the conclusion of Mr. Powell's address, President McCutchen in a few well chosen words presented, on behalf of the Board of Education and the citizens of the borough, the graduates with their diplomas. The school then sang "The Song of the Vikings," and thus passed into history another very successful and profitable event.

The following is the names of the graduates and subjects of essays:

An effort will be made to secure the meeting of the Union in Plainfield in September.

MR. BARRETT OBJECTS.

He Refuses to Allow the City to Use the Smock Farm Until Next April.

J. Y. Barrett, who has a lease extending to April 1st, 1896, for the Smock farm, which has been purchased by the city for sewage beds, told a Daily Press representative this morning that he would not allow the construction of the main outlet sewer on the land, as long as his lease was in force, unless paid for the privilege. He also stated that he would not permit any more test pits to be made on the land unless he was given a bonus of $600 for the surrender of his lease.

On this farm is the Coriell family cemetery, the headstones over some of the graves dating back 120 years. Whether or not the Coriell family will permit the removal of the remains involves a delicate question.

Park Club Celebrators.

The following are the committee of the Park Club who have charge of their Fourth of July fire-works display and reception: B. A. Hegeman, Jr., William J. Roome, Edwin T. Douglas, Julius E. Erickson, Charles A. Reed and William G. Runyon.

No Better Place.

There is no better place to have your summer wants supplied than White's. The immense business that this concern is doing enables them at all times to offer the latest novelties at most moderate prices. Their advertisement tells an interesting story.

KIEL CANAL FETES

To-day Is the Chief Day of the Celebration.

The Ceremony of Laying the Last Stone of the Great Waterway To Take Place at Noon—Yesterday's Grand Naval Procession—Marblehead in Line—Americans Cheered.

Hamburg, June 21.—To-day is the great day in the Baltic canal fetes. The ceremony of laying the last stone of the canal—the keystone of the bridge at Holtenau—will take place at noon. It will be followed by the dedication of the canal and the grand parade of the assembled fleets. Visitors continued to arrive this morning by thousands. The police estimate that 180,000 visitors slept in the city and suburbs on Wednesday night and that 70,000 more arrived yesterday.

Entering the Lock.

Yesterday the dispatch boat Grille entered the locks at Brunsbuttel, followed by the Hohenzollern. As the latter passed into the canal a salute was fired by artillery stationed at a little distance from the entrance to the lock, while the soldiery, composed of cavalry, infantry and pioneers, lining both banks, presented arms. At the same time a military band played the German national anthem.

Order of the Vessels.

The Grille started first as a scout. Then came the Hohenzollern with the emperor; the Kaiseradler with the German kings and grand dukes; the North German Lloyd steamship Kaiser Wilhelm II., with the other German princes; the North German Lloyd steamship Trave and the Hamburg-American line steamships Columbia and Augusta Victoria, with officials and members of the reichstag. Next came the foreign yachts, including the Osborne, the British admiralty yacht Enchantress, the Italian yacht Savoia, the French dispatch boat Surcouf, the Russian Grosjaseiji, the United States cruiser Marblehead, the Spanish Alfonso XII., and the Roumanian Mircea.

A Brilliant Scene.

The scene was a memorably brilliant one as the kaiser drove along the river front to embark on the Hohenzollern. Every available space was packed with people and the crowd cheered incessantly. At 10:30 p. m. everyone who was expected to go through the canal on board the Marblehead was on board that vessel, though she did not leave her berth until 1:10 in the morning.

On Board the Marblehead.

Among those on board were Admiral Kirkland and staff, Captain Evans, Captain Shepard, the lieutenants, ensigns and marine officers from each ship of the American squadron, the Rev. Mr. Tripp, chaplain of the cruiser San Francisco and the fleet surgeon and the fleet paymaster. The Marblehead sailed slowly down the Elbe and anchored at Brunsbuttel, awaiting her turn to go into the canal.

Cheers for the American Cruiser.

The weather was perfect when the Marblehead at 9:40 started into the canal, the entrance to which was beflagged at every possible point. The Marblehead is very popular, owing to the fact that her officers have shown every possible courtesy to visitors, and she was cheered last evening by the occupants of hundreds of steam and electric launches and thousands of people on shore.

Home, Sweet Home.

The American warship was given a magnificent reception at Rendsburg. Here there are three swing bridges. On the approach to one of them was a band that played "Home, Sweet Home," as the Marblehead passed Salutes were exchanged with the officers ashore, the warship dipping the admiral's flag. The third bridge is in front of a great barracks.

Cheers for Red, White and Blue.

Several times during the day English expressions about America were shouted from the shore. Near Holtenau a man led the cheering by calling for "three cheers for the Red, White and Blue." They were given with the greatest enthusiasm.

Cut the Thread.

The Hoenzollern at 4 o'clock cut the thread which had been stretched across the entrance to the canal and began her passage through to Kiel, the bands on shore playing national airs and the crowds cheering. At 11:30 p. m. the Hoenzollern was in sight of the Holtenau locks at the east side of the canal. The immense crowd of people who had assembled on the Holtenau Festplatz to witness the spectacle set up a mighty cheer as the imperial yacht was sighted. Five minutes later she had steamed up to the locks, which she entered at 12:35. The emperor stood upon the high bridge, behind the mast, attired in the full uniform of an admiral of the German navy, suggesting the well-known picture "With Steam Full Ahead."

An Imperial Salute.

The bands of the regular and veteran troops struck up "Heil Dir Riegerkranz," which the kaiser acknowledged by a salute. At 12:40 all of the ships in the bay fired the imperial salute. It was a grand spectacle. On each side of the lock was drawn up a company of the First Foot guards of Potsdam, with a band, and a company of the Kaiserin's Flensburg regiment were lined on the north shore in front of the harbor office, with the marine band.

Continuous Cheering.

The admirals and generals stood upon the centre rampart which divides the sections of the lock. The immense crowds kept up continuous cheering as the Hoenzollern passed through and went to her anchorage, followed by the Kaiseradler. The harbor was teaming with pleasure boats of every description, which swarmed about the warships, the American vessels receiving their full share of attention.

All Was Glitter.

The Hohenzollern anchord just beyond the lower gates. She presented a beautiful sight. Her white hull, guns and brass glittered in the sun, while a strong wind stiffened her flags until they appeared as though made of tin. On her decks were many officers in gleaming uniforms and orders.

Tried To Sing American Songs.

The crowds cheered and waved handkerchiefs and hats as the Marblehead passed slowly along, running at about six knots per hour and making few ripples. Groups of people gathered at every kilometre. They always cheered and sang. They often attempted to sing American songs. Great enthusiasm was everywhere excited by the sight of the stars and stripes.

Marblehead Honored.

There were infantry pickets at every hamlet, and huzzars at the larger places. At Kudenese a little uniformed band played "Climbing Up the Golden Stairs." Here a large detachment of hussars rendered honors. Even in the most isolated places solitary pickets stood at "attention" as the American cruiser went by. The Marblehead flew the stars and stripes from her foremast, an immense ensign astern, and the German imperial standard from the mainmast. Capt. Kohlman was on board of her, representing the German admiralty.

Rural Spectators.

As the Marblehead proceeded into the interior the sight from her decks grew more interesting. At every hamlet there were gathered countrymen who had arrived on hay wagons, milk carts and other country vehicles. They were attired in all sorts of costumes. They had probably never seen a warship before and they made the most of the opportunity that presented itself.

Our Warships Lauded.

London, June 21.—The Daily News has a special dispatch lauding the United States warships as the only ones at Kiel having anything bright about them, owing to their being painted white, with bright yellow funnels and air-pipes. Their slender, elegant forms excited general admiration. Next to them the British vessels were the most praised.

Disorderly Demonstrations in Paris.

Paris, June 21.—A crowd of people who are opposed to the presence of the French squadron at Kiel made a manifestation of their disapproval around the Strasburg statue last evening. They afterward marched in procession along the Boulevard des Italiens to Montemarte, where they became disorderly. Several arrests were made.

"PRINCE" LOOZ'S CASE.

His Sanity To Be Looked into by the Brussels Officials.

Brussels, June 21.—A medical examination will be made into the sanity of the self-styled Prince Looz Corswaren, who was arrested here in April for swindling tradesmen and jewelers in different continental cities. It is said that the "Prince," when seeking credit, represented that he was engaged to a Miss Bloomfield of New York, the owner of large paper mills, as well as to Mrs. Coleman, a widow residing in Chicago, who, he said, was worth $45,000,000. According to the police the "Prince" in February, 1893, swindled French and German jewelers out of nearly $200,000. At that time it was believed that he had gone to America.

COL. MAPLESON MARRIED.

His Bride Was Madame Millenberger, Sister of Senator Robb.

London, June 21.—The Post will today say that Col. Mapleson, the well-known operatic manager, was married Wednesday in the English church in the Rue d 'Aguesseau, to Madame Robb Millenberger, a sister of Senator Robb, of New York. Mr. Mapleson's witnesses were Lord Terence Blackwood in behalf of the British ambas-ador, Lord Dufferin, who is Lord Terence's father, and Captain Chuchward. The bride's witnesses were Ambassador Eustis and J. H. Robb.

THE ITALIAN CABINET SAFE.

Not Affected by the Riot in the Chamber of Deputies.

Rome, June 21.—The riotous scenes in the chamber of deputies growing out of the socialist motion to extend general amnesty to persons condemned by courts-martial for political offenses, which led to an exchange of blows between several deputies, have not shaken the position of the cabinet. The chamber of deputies will now take up the work of passing the budget.

HAZEN ARRIVES IN LONDON.

The Washington Secret Service Officer Inspects Howard's Plant

London, June 21.—Mr. Hazen of the Washington secret police has arrived in London and inspected the plant of Mendel Howard, who was recently arrested for forgery in this city. Mr. Hazen declares that Howard has the most complete forger's outfit that he ever saw. Howard's trial will take place to-day.

Castillo, Nicaragua, June 21.—The United States engineer commission, which is inspecting the route of the Nicaragua canal, has arrived here. The commission is here for the purpose of commencing the inspection of that part of the canal route known as the "divide." This is where the heavy rock cutting is located.

Destructive Forest Fires.

Bellefonte, Pa., June 21.—Forest fires are raging on the Muncy and Allegheny mountains. Miles of valuable young timber has been ruined and several saw mills and thousands of dollars worth of lumber destroyed. The woods are very dry and there is no way to check the flames.

DECIDE NOT TO MEDDLE

Republican League Steers Clear of Silver.

The Subject Referred to the National Convention—White Metal Advocates Are Jubilant and Claim That They Won a Victory—Disappointment in Several Quarters.

Cleveland, June 21.—The work of the eighth convention of the National League of Republican clubs was practically ended last night at 6 o'clock, when the committee on resolutions finished its deliberations and formulated its address. A few minutes before the convention, after an all-day session, had adjourned until this morning at 10 o'clock. Had it stayed in session a short time longer the report would have gone before it and a speedy disposition might have been made of it.

Will Not Meddle.

The report was not a surprise. As was predicted it leaves everything to the next national republican convention. Neither the money question nor the tariff question is even remotely referred to. The report is based on an old article of the National League of Republican clubs, which provides that the league shall not meddle in any way with affairs which come properly within the province of the party convention.

Not Pleasing to All.

There is no doubt that the adoption of such a platform by the convention will cause dissatisfaction in some quarters, but there is less doubt that the convention will adopt it. The committee on resolutions was unanimous on the vote on it. The resolution reported by the sub-committee differed from the one finally adopted in that the former was based on the Minneapolis silver plank which declares in favor of bimetallism "under proper restriction," and which the free silver men consider a blow under the belt.

Silver Men Jubilant.

Consequently the silver men are jubilant and are claiming they have won a victory, but the single standard advocates do not grant this, and the more substantial of the delegates say the convention could not do otherwise than adopt an address similar to the one which will be presented to-day and still be consistent.

McAlpin Elected President.

General E. A. McAlpin was elected president of the league by acclamation, and Milwaukee was unanimously chosen as the scene of the national convention without contest. The date is to be fixed by the executive committee.

WHEN IS A MAN CONVICTED?

A Question Raised in an Application for Pardon.

Albany, June 21.—It will be recalled that Judge Barrett, in the case of Police-Inspector McLaughlin, took occasion to announce last week that a conviction was not complete until sentence had been passed by the court. This delaration gives additional interest to an application for pardon filed with the governor by Michael P. Ryan of New York. He was indicted and found guilty of grand larceny in 1890, but Judge Martine suspended sentence in his case. The question is raised now in the excutive deparment as to whether the governor can act, in the light of Judge Barrett's decision. The constitution says that the governor has power to grant a pardon after conviction. Therefore unless Ryan has been convicted the executive has no jurisdiction. It is interesting to note that the supreme court of Massachusetts has held that a verdict of guilty rendered by a jury constitutes a conviction.

THE BAYARDS RECEIVE.

Andrew Carnegie and Wife and Mrs. Leslie Among Those Present.

London, June 21.—The reception given by Ambassador and Mrs. Bayard at their residence in Eaton square yesterday afternoon was not so largely attended as was their last reception, owing to the races at Ascot. Among those present were Messrs. King and Carnegie and wives; Mesdames Waldo Richards and Frank Leslie, Viscount and Lady Deerhurst, Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British ambassador to the United States, and his wife; the Earl and Countess of Darnley, and Lord and Lady Mount-Stephen.

NORWAY'S KING DISGUSTED.

He Will Ask Nobody To Form a Cabinet.

Stockholm, June 21.—Following the refusal of ex-Minister Bonnevie to form a cabinet, the king will ask nobody else to undertake the task. He will return in disgust to this city from Christiania to-day. It is doubtful that he will ever again go to Christiania to appoint a ministry. Emil Stang, the Norwegian prime minister, will retain office for a while.

Knights of Malta.

Philadelphia, June 21.—The supreme grand commandery of the ancient and illustrious Knights of Malta, which is in annual convention in this city selected Brooklyn as the place to hold the next annual convention and the month of meeting was changed from June to October. Charters were granted to nineteen new commanderies, together with the grand cammanderies of Delaware and Wisconsin.

Two Miners Killed.

Hazleton, Pa., June 21.—Peter Demorit and Adam Lawsasky were killed at the Eckley tripping yesterday afternoon. A big clod of earth which overhung the opening in which the men were at work became dislodged and fell, burying them. Both were married.

The President in Luck.

Cottage City, Mass., June 21.—Menhaden in large schools have made their appearance in Buzzards bay and Vineyard sound and a fleet of steam fishermen was in Buzzards bay yesterday. Bluefish have struck in and some striped bass have been taken.

The Second Mrs. Tanquerey.

London, June 21.—"The Second Mrs. Tanquerey" was revived at the St James theatre last evening. Miss Evelyn Millard's Paula was finely played and the house became enthusiastic and gave her repeated recalls.

"MY FOOD DOES ME NO GOOD."

In any city there are many possible ways to travel from one point to another. But between the food on your table and its destination in the body there is only one road—directly through the stomach. There is no going around the stomach or forcing a passage through it. Here the food is detained a while for better or for worse. Here it must be digested—that is to say, changed, liquefied and assorted for assimilation—or, failing that, it must lie here and rot, generating poisonous principles which enter the blood and set up a diseased action throughout the system. This is indigestion or dyspepsia—the condition that exists when a person says, "My food does me no good."

Certainly not. How can it? The more he eats the more he suffers. The road is blocked. No use putting more grain in the hopper when the mill cannot grind. Here are some of nature's protests: Loss of appetite; distress after eating; heartburn; palpitation; flashes of heat and cold; the rising of nauseous acids and gasses into the throat; furred tongue; dull and aching head; pains in the chest and back; weariness, fatigue and worry; loss of sleep; cold hands and feet; yellowish eyes and skin; weakness and trembling; constipation; failure of nervous force and courage, etc., etc. Out of this seething blockade in the stomach may come any of a dozen local complaints—a common form of pseudo consumption among them. Yet you must eat or starve. Miserable dilemma.

Drastic measures won't do. Take a very little light nourishment at first and immediately after it a dose of the Shaker Digesting Cordial, the only radically effective remedy for indigestion or dyspepsia—prepared by the Shaker Community at Mt. Lebanon, N. Y. It will relieve at once and cure quickly. Made from cultivated medicinal herbs and plants grown by the Shakers. Pleasant to the taste, painless and harmless.

FRANCE NOT SATISFIED

No Settlement Yet in Her Trouble with Venezuela.

Not Expected That She Will Make War on the South American Republic for the Expulsion of Minister Montclair—May Delay Sending Another Representative.

Washington, June 21.—From the tenor of recent dispatches from Venezuela, it is inferred that France is still dissatisfied with the South American republic for its practical expulsion in March last of the French minister, Mr. Montclair. Count Magliano, the Italian minister, who was the unwitting cause of the trouble between France and Venezuela, returned to Caracas several months ago for the express purpose of restoring the diplomatic harmony between the two countries.

Relations Still Strained.

Private dispatches received in Washington several weeks ago stated that he had been successful. More recent advices, however, would indicate that these reports were unfounded, and that the entente is still strained. It is understood that the government of France feels that Venezuela should have asked for Mr. Montclair's recall, and not taken summary action by sending him his passports and thus compelling his immediate withdrawal from the country.

Had No Alternative.

To this Venezuelans reply that such was the indignation of the people when Mr. Montclair's strictures upon Venezuela became known, that the Crespo administration had no alternative but to act promptly. Had the circumstances connected with the affair been of a different character, and no popular indignation existed, Venezuela would, it is said, have accepted the usual method of complaining to the French government and securing Mr. Montclair's removal through the action of the Paris foreign office.

Hostile Movements Not Expected.

To have followed this course at the time, however, would have necessitated a delay of several weeks and in the excited state of public feeling, the consequences of such a delay might have been dangerous. It is not expected that France's irritation will lead her to make war upon Venezuela, but it is thought that France may delay for some months sending a diplomatic representative to Caracas, in order to emphasize her dissatisfaction with the treatment accorded to Mr. Montclair.

CHICAGO PAY-ROLL FRAUDS.

Several High City Officials Said To Be Implicated.

Chicago, June 21.—Commissioner of Public Works Kent says that if sustained in his effort by the legal departments of the city, he expects to bring into the department of justice four of the highest officials of the late city administration on the charge of having wilfully and knowingly aided, abetted and directed the padding and robbing of the pay-rolls of the city between Oct. 1, 1894, and April 1, 1895.

One Confession Secured.

Another pay-roll fraud was revealed last evening in Comptroller Wetherell's office. The expert accountant, Harper, and Paymaster Mehan detected Patrick Liddy attempting to represent himself as a man on another roll and obtain the salary due the second individual. Besides these, two or three others are said to be implicated, but their names are withheld. Liddy was placed under arrest and made a full confession.

THIRTEEN NEW PRIESTS.

Ordination Services at the Cathedral at Baltimore.

Baltimore, June 21.—Solemn ordination services were conducted at the cathedral yesterday by Bishop Curtis, of Wilmington, Del., who officiated in the absence of his eminence Cardinal Gibbons, now in Rome. Two hundred seminarians in white garments added to the effect of the scene, sitting at the right of the altar, which was ablaze with candles. The front pews were filled with relatives of the young men who received orders. Sisters of charity, with large, flaring white bonnets were conspicuous in the congregation. Thirteen priests were ordained.

BIG INCENDIARY FIRE.

Six Horses, Nine Head of Cattle and a Barn Burned.

York, Pa., June 21.—The large barn and outbuildings owned by Jesse Deardorff, eight miles northwest of this city, were destroyed by an incendiary fire yesterday. Six horses, nine head of cattle and twelve hogs perished in the flames.

Cut Her Tongue Nearly in Two.

Columbus, O., June 21.—Mrs. W. W. Bond fell down a stairway in her house yesterday and struck her jaw upon the steps in such a way as to cut her tongue almost in two. The surgeon attending put eight stitches in to hold the severed portion in place while it grows on. Mrs. Bond is a sister of Congressman Charles H. Grosvenor, of this state.

Cornell Commencement.

Ithaca, N. Y., June 21.—The twenty-seventh annual commencement at Cornell occurred yesterday. The degrees conferred included arts 29, philosophy 24, letters 1, science 24, agriculture 4, architecture 13, civil engineer 29, mechanical engineers 36, electrical engineers 31, bachelors of law 76.

Religious Workers at Bellefonte.

Bellefonte, Pa., June 21.—Five thousand young religious workers from the counties of Lycoming, Clinton and Centre met in a grand rally at Hecla park near here yesterday. Three religious meeting were held. A chorus of 500 voices furnished the music.

Altgeld Hanged in Effigy.

Bloomington, Ill., June 21. — Gov. Altgeld was hanged in effigy here at midnight by college students, who are indignant at the abolition of the high school, a recent act by the governor.

A Pedestrian Ordered Out of Town.

Middletown, Conn., June 21.—Joseph Wood, who claims to have walked from Leadville, Col., yesterday asked the police to send him to an insane asylum. He was ordered out of the city.

STARVED AND OVERWORKED.

The Ship Reed's Crew Then Thrown Into a Cuban Prison.

Philadelphia, June 21.—Six sailors, who were discharged from the ship Emily Reed, now unloading sugar at the Spreckles Sugar refinery in this city, went before United States Commissioner Craig last evening, claiming American citizenship, and cited their late captain, E. W. Simmons, to appear before the commissioner to-day and show cause why he should not pay each of them $46 in wages. The sailors told a story of starvation, overwork and captivity in a Cuban prison.

Starved and Overworked.

The men shipped on the Reed, from New York, April 2 last for San Fuegeus, Cuba, being engaged at $18 per month. From the beginning of the voyage, the men claim, they were fed on salt herring and decomposed pork, and when San Fuegeue was reached on April 27 this diet was continued. Being compelled to work at loading sugar from 5 a. m. until 8 30 p. m., and the diet not being improved, the seamen rebelled and complained to Captain Simmons.

Chained in a Cuban Prison.

The captain took them before the acting United States consul, who, the sailors say, remanded them to jail where they were chained to a long bar and made to lie upon a stone floor. Twice a day Spanish soldiers would bestir them with bayonets and put them to work in the jail.

Compelled To Re-sail.

The incarceration lasted for twenty-five days, and then when the loading of the ship had been completed, the half dozen sailors were compelled to sail on the Reed to this port, which was reached on Tuesday. Seaman O'Brien stated today that when he and his companions asked Captain Simmons for their wages, the captain declared that they had forfeited their pay. The commissioner will hear the case to-day.

MADGE YORK MURDER CASE.

Sensational Rumors Regarding a Change in Gentry's Defense.

Philadelphia, June 21.—Sensational rumors have come to light that there will be a change in the defense in the trial of James B. Gentry for the murder of actress Madge Yorke. It is hinted that the defense will endeavor to show that Gentry killed the girl because he believed that her love for Miss Lida Clark, her actress friend and companion, was of a morbid and unnatural character. These rumors have reached the ears of Miss Clark, who is now in this city.

Her Testimony Should Hang Him.

Miss Clark was the only witness to the murder. She indignantly denies that she was favoring the defense to avert an attack upon herself. "I am heart and soul against Gentry," she said, "and my plain story of the murder as I shall tell it on the stand, ought to be the means of hanging him. There was no provocation for the murder. No purer girl than Madge ever lived, and I only wonder she could have fallen so desperately in love with the man who took he life."

HARVARD WILL DECLINE.

Will Not Accept the Oxford-Cambridge Challenge.

Ithaca, N. Y., June 21.—The Oxford-Cambridge challenge to Harvard-Yale for general athletic games will be declined by Harvard. The reasons are given in a letter just received here by a member of the Cornell athletic council from a member of the Harvard graduate committee. The letter says: "Harvard can hardly do anything but decline, not because of our strained relations with Yale, but because it would be highly unbecoming for us, being in the third place, to be one of the two American colleges to meet the Englishmen. It would not be courteous to the I. C. A. A. or friendly to the U. of P., who has vanquished us this year and who originated and most actively promoted this year the plan of international intercollegiate games."

He will see they are delivered while the exposition is open.

WHISKEY TRUST WAR

Climax in the Legal Battle Reached at Last.

An Order for the Sale of the Property Will Probably Be Handed Down To-morrow — Re-organizers Are Happy—The Lessors May Yet Cause Trouble.

Chicago, June 21.—The climax in the whiskey trust legal battle which has been waged for several months was practically reached last evening in Judge Showalter's court at the conclusion of the arguments on the petitions of the reorganization committee of stockholders for a sale of seventeen distilleries and the Peoria headquarters, coupled with the offer of $9,800,000 for that part of the property. While the judge did not say in so many words that he would enter a decree providing for the sale of the distilleries, he intimated as much, and did say after hearing all the lawyers representing the many interests that he would consider the matter of the order promptly and render his decision, which will probably be to-morrow.

Re-organizers Happy.

The re-organization committee lawyers here, Levy Mayer and ex-Judge Moran, were jubilant, and felt so confident that an order would be made that they telegraphed their New York clients to that effect. They will regard the granting of the petition as the most substantial victory won so far, and think there will be smooth sailing now. By August 1 they expect to place the property bid for in the hands of the re-organization committee.

Terms of the Sale.

The terms of the sale order will provide for advertising thirty days, and if no bid in excess of $9,800,000 is received at the public sale the receiver will transfer the estate to the stockholders, who practically own it now. The court will require of the purchasers that they make all claims of creditors a prior lien on the property. The Greenhut-Morris opposition has already filed claims aggregating $590,000, but the re-organization committee do not believe the claims will have to be paid after adjudication.

Claims of the Lessors.

The question of the claims which lessors of distillery ground might bring against the estate in the event of a sale was presented to the court by Moble B. Judah, who appears for Greenhut and Morris. He warned the court that the lessors, when they found their rentals were not paid, might present claims for the whole period and the possible aggregate of liabilities in that connection was $2,340,000. It is the opinion of the reorganization lawyers that the lessors cannot collect a cent because they entered into an unlawful contract under the supreme court decision.

OCEAN STEAMSHIP RIVALRY.

Reply of Sir Edward Grey to the St. Louis Resolutions.

London, June 21.—In the house of commons yesterday Sir Edward Grey replied to the question put by A. J. Donelan, one of the members for Cork, concerning the complimentary resolutions signed by Sir Julian Pauncefote, among other passengers of the new American liner St. Louis, at the conclusion of her initial trip across the Atlahtic, and concerning the effect of such action on British interests. Sir Edward Grey explained that the resolutions drawn up by the passengers of the St. Louis were nothing more than the usual thanks to her captain for a sucessful voyage, and that Sir Julian signed the document in his private capacity and not as a British ambassador. Moreover, there was nothing in the resolutions which reflected upon British shipping; they were not compiled by the ambassador and were not couched in diplomatic language.

Jerseymen seem to be filled with the spirit of '76 to a greater extent this year than ever before.

The silver question proved too ticklish a question for the amateur politicians of the National League of Republican Clubs to take a stand on.

The man who says this country is going to the dogs is the man who is going down hill himself, and who is so mean that everyone else is greasing the track for him.

The raising of several postoffices in Union county from the third to the second-class affords better than anything else the evidence of increasing growth and prosperity of a section of which Plainfield is the pride.

The Daily Press is surprised to see such an estimable and influential newspaper as the Elizabeth Journal lend its aid to the ridiculous movement which has been inaugurated by Elizabeth bicyclists, seeking to have the common council pass an ordinance compelling all vehicles using the streets after dark to carry lights.

The Passaic county grand jury refrained from presenting an indictment for Sunday ball playing, but made a presentment against a small band of Salvation Army worshipers who, it is alleged, make more noise than is necessary. Grand juries sometimes do queer things now-a-days, and this instance is about the queerest that has has been made public.

City Attorney Connolly, of Elizabeth, last night informed the Excise Board that every license application must have the names of twelve freeholders as signers, none of whom had signed any other application in a year. This decision caused consternation to many liquor dealers, who, owing to the warfare against them by the Good Citizenship Union, are unable to get the requisite signers.

Editor Kingdon of the Mount Holly News has been writing sarcastic editorials about Assemblyman M.E. Matblack, of Burlington county. This has aroused the ire of the legislator, who has shaken his finger in the true Georgiawiscian style under the editor's nose and threatened to cowhide him. The action of the Assemblyman is accounted for by the fact that he is young in public life.

It is all well enough to jest about the ideal, theoetrical and cloud-scraping essays of the graduates, but the fact cannot be disguised that the subjects discussed by the High School graduates last night abounded in practical ideas and conclusions that were only attained by the writers after earnest research and the application of logical arguments. But to apply these principles to a cold, unsympathizing world is quite another thing.

tered institutions of aid: the People's Palace of Jersey City, the Boffin's Bower of Boston, the Wayfarer's Lodge of the same place, the great Public Baths, the recent College Settlements and thousands of other societies, private and public, large and small, everywhere.

Although the Jew will not believe in Christ, still he is one most diligent in doing deeds of charity. The Baron de Hirsch is the central figure in the movement for liberating the oppressed Jews in Russia. He offered ten million dollars a month for the relief of emigrants from Russia and Roumania to the United States. The main object of this fund is education—to educate these foreigners in agricultural and mechanical arts.

So I might continue and tell you more yet of the wonderful methods which modern charity employs. The aim today is to develop self-respect in the needy one, to aid him by personal friendship, by indirect rather than by direct assistance.

Charity ever grows broader: methods will change and former needs pass away, but charity itself will ever remain, for "the poor we have always with us."

"The old order changeth, yielding place to new,
And God fulfills himself in many ways."

The spirit of true charity says today:

"The Holy Supper is kept indeed
In whatso we share with another's need:
Not what we give, but what we share,
For the gift without the giver is bare:
Who gives himself with his alms feeds three,
Himself, his hungering neighbor, and Me."

"An Oriental Pole" was rendered by the orchestra, after which President Probasco said that when the time came for the Board of Education to select a speaker for the commencement exercises, they decided to invite Dr. Raymond. In response to their letter of invitation he wrote that although he had declined several similar invitations he would accept this one. Dr. Probasco introduced Mr. Raymond as "one who Plainfielders had always loved and always would love."

Dr. Raymond was greeted with enthusiastic applause and spoke substantially as follows:

He said he could never forget the six years of residence and work in this city, and he was especially pleased to be here at this time in view of the fact that he was now engaged in an educational line of work, as President of Union College. The large attendance at the exercises was a tribute to the class, which represented achievement, for this is what the world appreciates now. Remembering that the class stood as a representative of the public schools, he spoke of education as of value to the world. The high school, he said, was constantly developing and pointing out the direction the nation is taking and it is only a step from the high school to the college.

One of the beneficient things of education is the recognition of the right of women to the best the world affords. Every year the interests of women are becoming more closely identified with those of the commonwealth. Education gives man a dignity and tends to bring out things that would be otherwise undeveloped, for the educated man is blessed with keener appreciation and more liberal ideas. Not until we can appreciate the building up of man can we appreciate the value of education. The influence of education passes the mark of scholarly faces, and reaches out and benefits the whole community.

Popular government based upon personal liberty is constantly involving intricate and responsible questions, as is evidenced in this country today. The government is in the hands of a few. In America the people do not govern so much through the leaders as the leaders do through the people. Every great moral reform has been gained through a change of leaders. We are trained to look upon those in whom we have confidence, and therefore the great need of a government to have intelligent people who are able to decide about the proper public policy without leadership. This is where education is needed to bring the people up to this standard of being able to recognize without being lead. One potent influence in government at present is the desire to make money. As a nation we have been developing our material success. Political leadership has fallen into the hands of men who succeed in business. But it is not always the best business men that make the best law makers. In the progress of making money a man must necessarily put his own interests before others. But in public life it is different. Officials should put the peoples' side first. It is not easy, though, to change the methods of a man's life, and the probabilities are that he will continue the same policy in his public capacity that he does in his private life. This merely develops men to look a little way into questions. Men are needed who can go through, expose and answer falicious arguments. What is wanted then; is men who can appreciate the eternal rights of principles, for the public are prone at first to support superficial theories.

When men dwell together in the unity of the spirit they will dwell together in success and peace. All great reforms are agitated around a great question which is individual liberty. However, the best thought of the nation is not what emphazises individual liberty so much as obligation. Every great force needs to be governed by intelligence. If the mission of education is to better the world I admonish you to further fit yourself along these lines.

The oration and valedictory was made by Thomas Dezelle Blair "On The Value of a Classical Education," and was as follows:

The most distinguished professional men bear witness with an overwhelming authority in favor of a course of education in which the training of the mind shall be the first object and the storing of information the second.

So said Gladstone after he had taken time to reflect upon his own education. From his statement we know not whether he holds in mind a classical or scientific course, but anyone familiar with the life of this English statesman will remember that he was especially brilliant in Latin verse composition. At the same time we find him locked in his room pouring over the great classics of Homer. So without a doubt Gladstone here refers to a course founded at least upon classical study. Surely such a course has well trained and informed his mind, for he has long ranked as the most sagacious and far-sighted statesman in all England; and statecraft requires great wisdom and ability.

In order to train the mind a study must possess disciplinary power. In this respect the classics are unexcelled. They are of such complexity that all the mental powers must be concentrated in the effort of mastery or nothing will be accomplished. Wonderfully complete they are too in their structure. Language is the medium of communication between man and man: to express the thought exactly, the medium must be very clear and distinct—a principal thoroughly embodied by the Greeks in the structure of their marvelous language.

But why are not modern languages as effective as the ancient for discipline? All modern languages are second-hand. To understand anything completely one should examine the root as well as the branches. So, with modern languages, an accurate understanding is greatly assisted by a previous acquaintance with those great sources of language—the Greek and the Latin. When once the classics have been mastered a modern derivative language may not only be readily acquired, but appreciated.

Some would insist upon a scientific to the exclusion of a classical course. But upon what is scientific language based? Why, upon the Greek and Latin, as every word of science plainly shows. The English language does not possess that rare ability which the Latin and Greek have—the ability to combine two and sometimes three words together to form a new word with a double or triple meaning. In fact the German is the only modern language capable of this operation. So, for scientific nomenclature, we borrow from the ancients. Therefore to thoroughly understand the language of science one must be pretty well acquainted with the classics. Without them the words which clothe the thought fall flat and have but a vague significance; with them the subject is thoroughly understood and enjoyed.

Observe the benefit derived from a single lesson in Greek or Latin. The student has been assigned his task and is beginning it. First, he considers the inflectional form of each word; then he finds the meaning, choosing carefully and holding in mind the idea of the author; last comes the translation, which in poetry requires language most beautiful and expressive, in oratorical prose words most forcible and vigorous. Further, questions in mythology or geography may arise. Thus, we find the powers of observation, memory and judgment brought into play together.

Now that the mind has been trained let us see how it is stocked. Herein lies the greatest value of the classics. Look to literature. Its masterpieces find their origin in Greek. There poetry reached its perfection. Read and compare an epic poem of today with the Iliad or Aeneid. The style is unchanged. Why is it? It is because the Greeks developed the style to such a point of perfection that no better could be employed. To reach such an ideal meant years of hard, honest, painstaking labor, beginning with ballads and ditties, advancing steadily and at last reaching the grand, sublime poems, which by dint of good fortune we possess at the present day. In all that the Greeks attempted they seemed to excel. Although without examples, with no resources from which to draw, yet all their works of art are models at the present time and have never been surpassed. Their imagination was given full play.

In the tone of their literature there is such distinctness and freshness of thought that it has the special charm of originality, while modern literature is so thoroughly saturated with the ideas of the ancient that it seems like a mere reproduction. The characters of mythology hold such a prominent position in all literature that it is difficult to read intelligently without having first studied the classics. For these various reasons the works of Greece and of Rome are worthy of consideration until the time when the structure of literature may be built upon other foundations.

But why cannot the same result be gained by reading translations? In the first place the discipline obtained by the study of language immediately disappears; besides a vast amount of good there is a certain amount of satisfaction gained by "digging out" a translation for oneself; secondly, we are reading one man's ideas in another man's words; and further we are very often reading altogether different ideas.

Yet in spite of their unexcelled disciplinary and literary values, there has been a decline in the study of classics. It was necessary and inevitable. A hundred years ago there was little or no classification of scientific facts, but meanwhile the scientific world has been wonderfully disclosed. The change has been gradual. As scientific truth was discovered the cause of science found warm advocates. Many regarded science as a surer road to wealth—an idea which is quite prevalent at the present day. As though man's chief end were to acquire wealth and in so doing to sacrifice breadth and fulness and richness of life—to sacrifice the training and discipline of those mental faculties with which he has been endowed! Not to say that science does not discipline the mind, but it leaves largely undeveloped that power of exact discrimination between words, which, by custom, have grown almost synonomous; it does not bring one in contact with that wealth of imagination, fancy and inspiration which abounds in the classics. Nevertheless, the new study has steadily grown in favor till it holds a footing on an equality with the classics.

The majority of the supporters of each course are fully confident that the triumph will be theirs in the end, yet those less prejudiced are manifesting a conviction that a combination of the two courses will produce the more thorough education. In fact, science and literature are so closely allied that they are wholly inseparable. What would poetry be without nature? How soon it loses its hold upon our interests when nature is overlooked! The best poet—that is the one who delights us most and whose impressions are the most lasting—is he who is the greatest lover of nature. On the other hand, how quickly science becomes dry and uninteresting, unless it be written in such language as to hold the reader! So while science has grown into a position of acknowledged importance in the educational world of the present time, yet science without the culture of the classics is crude and unfinished. Today that man is well educated who has laid a solid foundation of classical culture and has not neglected to strengthen in with the massive materials of scientific truth.

VALEDICTORY.

Gentlemen of the Board of Education, in the name of the Class of '95, I thank you for what you have done in holding high the standard of the Plainfield High School. In bidding you farewell, we take this opportunity to express our gratitude, a gratitude which will deepen as the years increase.

And, in parting with you, teachers of the Plainfield High School, the Class of '95 sincerely thanks you for your long labors of patience, you have been the instruments of our education. In education, as in manufacture, the result depends as largely upon the tools as upon the material worked. For all that you have been us we thank you.

My dear classmates, tonight we are about to enter upon a new era of life, the importance of which we cannot now realize. In one respect it is similar to that one from which we are departing, it will be what we make it. We have completed four tedious years of experience; let us forget that of the past which may be unpleasant, and look only to the future; let us make this new epoch a grand success by doing our very best in the little things. We are about to be thrown out upon the world which has often been called a hard master, yet many have braved the storms, and afterward sailed into the sunshine of success. What these have done, we may do.

Together we have toiled in geometry; some of us have found great pleasure in the study of astronomy and geology, while others have taken delight in Greek and Latin. There have been times when certain passages were difficult, when problems were hard, but such times only prepared us for the more difficult, and we ever remembered that every cloud has its silver lining, which appears the brighter in proportion to its greater degree of darkness.

Tonight we meet together for the last time; some of us enter upon business life which is ever open for the energetic and ambitious; others will extend their education by study at college. In either case if we are true to the best that is in us, we will be true to others, and so as we bid each other farewell, my parting words to each member of the Class of '95 are: Be true to yourself.

The exercises were concluded with the presentation of diplomas by President Probasco, who addressed a few appropriate words to the class.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destored forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

JACK BENNER HURT.

Jumped From a Wagon and Fractured Two Bones in His Leg.

Jack Benner, of Fanwood, sustained injuries yesterday that will confine him to the house for some time. Not far from his house on South avenue he met a friend with a horse and wagon coming to Plainfield. He asked for a ride, which was readily granted, and soon after the girth holding the shaft broke. This frightened Mr. Benner and he commenced to yell at the horse. The animal was scared, and seeing the shaft near his head started to run. Mr. Benner climbed through the wagon and jumping out of the rear end he fractured two bones in the ankle of his left leg, and slightly injured the right knee. A horse and wagon happened along and he was taken home, when Dr. B. Van D Hedges was called and made him as comfortable as possible.

The broken girth was quickly repaired and the man came to Plainfield.

It will be some time before Mr. Benner will be able to walk.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S DONKEY.

How She Bought the Animal at a Great Bargain from a Peasant.

During Queen Victoria's recent sojourn at Cimiez she was accustomed, every afternoon, to ride about the environs of Nice in a little carriage drawn by a sober looking donkey named Jocko. The history of this reliable and highly prized animal is interesting.

The queen was at Acquisgrana two or three years ago, and one morning was passing along the border of the lake when a peasant went by, leading at the end of a rope a well built donkey, which would have been handsome had it not been so thin as to excite a suspicion that its last meal had been scanty and many days before. The queen addressed the peasant and asked him if the beast was for sale.

"That depends upon the conditions, signorina," the man replied, "for if I sell him, how will I be able to gain my living?"

"How much did you pay for him?"

"A hundred francs."

"I will give you two hundred and you can then buy another."

It was thus that Jocko passed from the peasant's possession into royal hands and for the first time in his life had enough to eat.

The story of the adventure spread far and wide, and whenever the queen went out thereafter she was sure to encounter at least a dozen emaciated and badly curried donkeys, which she was importuned to buy. Naturally these attempts were unsuccessful, but the owners lost nothing except their time, which is the least valuable of commodities in that easy going land.

The next year, when her majesty returned to Acquisgrana, the master of Jocko chanced to see his old donkey again. When he viewed his fat body and tightly stretched, shining skin, covered with a gold mounted harness, he exclaimed:

"I regret bitterly that I did not sell myself with my donkey."

INNOCENT CAUSE OF THE WAR.

The Dutch Sold Slaves Into Virginia 276 Years Ago.

The death of the son of John Brown, of Ossawatomie, recalls the man of the marching soul. Was the war between the States precipitated by the deeds of John Brown or by the election of Abraham Lincoln? The deeds of the one and the election of the other were but incidents of the moral contention which had been carried on for many years between slavery and abolitionism, between the one which had to be ever aggressive if its existence were to be maintained, and the other, which had either to take up the arms of resistance or to surrender ignominiously. The war, as Mr. Seward said, was an "irrepressible conflict." "I believe," said Mr. Lincoln, long before his election to the Presidency, "that this Government cannot endure permanently half slave and half free. It will become all one thing or all the other."

The war was brought on neither by John Brown nor John C. Calhoun; neither by Abraham Lincoln nor Jefferson Davis, nor yet by Benjamin Franklin, who was the president of an abolition society before the Revolution. The Dutch slave traders who first introduced African slaves into Virginia 276 years ago must bear a large share of the responsibility for it.

ENGLISH ESTIMATES OF EDISON.

A Practical, Shrewd, Clever Man, with Infinite Capacity for Work.

The position which Edison fills in the popular mind is one of the most remarkable incidents in the history of invention. To many he is the embodied genius of electric lighting, and he is the popular conception of the greatest living scientist, but the fact is that the luster of America's real scientist has been paled by the glare and artificial glamour surrounding Edison and all his works. These distorted views have been, to a great extent, fostered by ingenious mechanical contrivances, such as the phonograph and other novelties, which are above all things amusing. It would be idle for us to say that he has done nothing of note. He is undoubtedly a clever man, but there are many who are better electricians, and more who are better mechanics.

His ability lies rather in organizing the work of a staff of trained experts, which, in its way, is unequaled. Edison has allied with his mechanical skill men of remarkable business aptitude. It is this combination of talents which has doubtless raised him above the majority of men. There are men possessing greater skill in mechanics and men with greater commercial gifts, but the two are seldom combined. We are not called upon to analyze his extraordinary popularity. He doubtless has deserved it. But a moderate estimate would be that he is a practical, shrewd man, with (what we believe is too generally underrated) immense physical endurance, and, consequently, with infinite capacity for work, and an untiring energy.—Electric Review.

A FLYING MACHINE.

A RIDE ON ONE OF CARL MYERS'S AIR BICYCLES.

The Machine a Modification of the Balloon and Dirigible to Some Extent. Uses to Which It May Be Put. A Motor Needed

A reporter of the New York Sun took a ride through the air recently on the flying machine or air bicycle invented by Carl Myers. Mr. Myers lives at Frankfort, Herkimer county, N. Y., in the beautiful Mohawk Valley. He has done much good work for the Weather Bureau of the United States by means of scientifically conducted balloon ascensions, both with passengers and without, and has made it possible to obtain important data as to atmospheric densities and dryness, wind currents and other elements over valleys and plains.

The air bicycle is a curious and ingenious affair, and looks like a large balloon or bag shaped like a boat turned bottom uppermost. It is rounded on top and flat at the bottom, slightly hollowed toward the center, as an inverted boat would. The bag is filled with hydrogen. Atttached to the netting which covers the bag are two stays that support a very light but strong skeleton of steel. On this is placed a bicycle saddle, with a bicycle handle in front and cranks and pedals below. Instead of wheels the pedals operate a piston rod, which extends about fourteen feet ahead, and on which is fitted a hollow tube racheted to or cogged into the mechanism operated by the pedal. At the extreme end of this tube is a rigid steel arm, which, when at rest, lies at right angles to the head, and about six feet nearer the rider is a corresponding arm rigidly fixed on the tubes.

On these two arms of steel is stretched a piece of light canvas hanging perpendicularly down in the same plane as from chin to feet of the rider, and looking like the topsails of a ship beating to windward. When the pedals are operated the steel arm at the extreme end of the shaft is turned back and forth, and this action twists and untwists the sail into a right and then into a left hand helix such as would be produced by taking a square sheet of paper with one hand at each end, and twisting the hands in opposite directions.

This action of the cloth produces a current of wind, which strikes backward and upward against the under surface of the balloon and causes it to soar up in the air. The machine is like the toy balloons one buys at the dry goods stores for children, which do not rise by themselves, but blow under them and up they go. The entire weight of this machine is about fifteen pounds. The hydrogen is made from water by a patent process of Myers, and its purpose is simply to counteract the weight of the rider.

There is no rudder. To rise it is only necessary to lean backward and work the pedals; to descend one lean slightly forward; to turn to the right or left one leans in the direction desired. In short, it is like riding a bicycle, except that there is no front wheel to turn.

He had two of the machines on the lawn, and after fully explaining them, Mr. Myers jumped on one—or rather, he stepped across the frame as it lay balanced on two trestles—and drew the saddle tight up to his body by means of the handles. Then he gave a spring in the air and as the bicycle rose six or eight feet he leaned back slightly, worked the pedals and steadily rose to about forty feet. Then he circled round the house, returning to where the reporter stood and descended at his side.

"Do you understand the working?" he asked. "Then get astride and try it yourself. Don't jerk when you spring upward; go very slowly, and don't be in a hurry about your feet. There is plenty of time, and if not quick enough you will simply land on your feet and be ready to try again. I'll follow you as soon as you are up."

It looked easy enough, and the reporter did as he was told. He gave the required spring and up he went, light as a feather.

"Take your time," came from below. "Quietly now; lean back a little! Here! I come," and in another minute Myers was alongside, about 20 feet away. Rising to a height of about 50 feet the two circled around for some time, until the reporter was as much at home as if on a bicycle on the road, the only curious sensation being that of a very powerful wind blowing past his face without touching it. This was caused by the helix blowing into the inverted boat above.

"Now, come along," said Myers, "and I'll show you the country."

The machines were under perfect control, and even the slight head wind had no effect. Mr. Myers said that a head wind up to ten or twelve miles an hour was an advantage as far as labor speed was concerned.

Owing to the backward tilt of the spindle the head wind rushed underneath, forcing it upward instead of backward only. This is easy understood when in the saddle, but perhaps is rather mystifying to any one but an aerial expert.

Finding that the reporter was content with his achievements, and would go no higher, Mr. Myers cried "Good by" and ascended to about 1,000 feet, it seemed, in a few minutes, circling round and round the valley, eventually descending and rejoining the reporter at the lower elevation.

The Business Revival.

Facts count. The New York Times has attempted to keep some track of the advances that have been made in wages in various parts of the country. Its list is getting to be a long one, covering about 200 firms, employing about 128,000 persons. While men may disagree as to the causes of the business revival, there can no longer be dispute as to the fact.—Philadelphia Record.

While in Topeka last March, E. T. Barber, a prominent newspaper man of La Cygne, Kansas, was taken with cholera morbus very severely. The night clerk at the hotel where he was stopping happened to have a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and gave him three doses which relieved him and he thinks saved his life. Every family should keep this remedy in their home at all times. No one can tell how soon it may be needed. It costs but a trifle and may be the means of saving much suffering and perhaps the life of some member of the family. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. ACCESSORY AFTER THE FACT.

BY HOWARD FIELDING.

[COPYRIGHT, 1895.]

CHAPTER II.—THE MURDER OF THE USURER.

It was late, but I resolved to read the riddle that night. There could be no great difficulty in it. I would but search the files of the newspapers until I found a crime in which such a garment as that old overcoat figured with prominence.

Already I had my suspicions. I remembered dimly certain details of the murder of Jacob Kohnfeld, the usurer. Was there not a missing overcoat in the case?

The crime was about a month old. It had been the reigning sensation, when I arrived in New York, but I had been too busy to read the stories carefully. After what had happened, it is safe to say that I missed not a single fact or theory. It was morning when I finished my work. Then I returned to my room, and proceeded at once to arrange the facts that I had collected. When theories had been sifted out, I found that the story of the Kohnfeld murder was extremely simple. The man himself had undoubtedly been what is known as a "fence," in other words a receiver of stolen goods. His dealings had been principally in jewels and plate; and he had thriven to such an extent that in his later life he had almost entirely abandoned his traffic with thieves for the safer if not honester business of usury.

He had become known as one who would wait for dead men's shoes, if well paid for his risks. Dissipated young men who were the heirs to fortunes that death must soon transfer, resorted to Kohnfeld; and he also loaned money secretly upon the jewelry of extravagant women, holding the gems in pawn while his clients wore "paste" which he provided.

Kohnfeld lived in an old wooden house that age had made as gray as a spider's web. His visitors came by night, or if that could not be managed, they entered an undertaker's shop next upon the right, and passed through a door in the wall between the two buildings.

The usurer's daughter cared for his house, and was its only occupant. It was she who found his body on the morning after the crime in the room where he always received visitors. Her cries brought the police, and the work of detection was at once begun. Kohnfeld had been stabbed in the throat. He had fallen before the door of his safe, which the murderers had afterwards rifled. Documents of various kinds were scattered about the usurer as he lay dead, and most of them were steeped in his blood.

As to the robbery which followed the murder, there was much mystery. Kohnfeld's books of account had been burned in a grate, evidently for the purpose of obscuring the thief's trail. However, the daugher had a fair idea of what was in the safe. She was sure that there was very little money and no jewelry of any worth. No client of Kohnfeld's would have expected to find such valuable things there, for it was well known that he trusted chiefly in the security of a safe deposit company's vault.

In his own safe, however, were many notes and obligations, valuable only to those who had signed them; and in that collection lay the undoubted motive for the crime. That it was done by one of Kohnfeld's clients was nearly certain, for he was evidently encountered face to face, and there had been no outcry. A bottle of liquor and two glasses on a table were evidence that he had been entertaining some one. The glass which seemed to have been his own was crushed as if his hand had closed convulsively upon it at the instant when the fatal stroke was delivered. Indeed, little more than the bottom of the glass remained intact. His right hand had a hundred small gashes, bearing out the theory that, as the usurer had raised his glass to drink, the murderer had thrust with his knife across the table.

So secret had been Kohnfeld's dealings that it was impossible to learn whose written obligation was missing after the crime. The similar documents that were found upon the floor bore names that surprised even the police. There must have been many an unquiet mind in what we call society just after this tragedy, but the police were discreet and very little unpleasant information leaked out. Former clients of Kohnfeld made haste to buy their pledges of his daughter, if they were able to raise the money, for they feared the inquest and the trial. There had been an inquest without damaging disclosures, and there seemed to be no prospect of a trial, for such a formality requires the presence of the accused.

The police had been at work on many clews. The newspaper had described a new murderer every day. There had been two arrests, which had resulted in the immediate discharge of the prisoners. The man most strongly suspected was a recent client, who was known to the daughter only as Mr. Erwin. She described him as a tall and strong young man, elegant in manners and dress. It seemed that the woman had noted his attire more carefully than his face, concerning which she could say no more than that there was not much of it to be seen, for the man was heavily bearded and wore spectacles. She had never seen him except with his hat on—a fact that I regretted, for Dane's wavy light hair was exceedingly notable. Otherwise her description fitted Dane only too well, for beards and spectacles can be put on as easily as names.

There had been missing from the room an old overcoat belonging to Kohnfeld. It was accurately described, and I could not doubt that the garment I had found in Dane's stove was the one referred to. The theory of the police was that the coat had been taken to hide the blood stains on the murderer's clothing. The medical testimony at the inquest had left no doubt that the assassin had been drenched. He could not have passed through the streets in that condition. Kohnfeld's overcoat had been his salvation.

Of course, from my point of view there was no need of further investigation. I was confronted by a clear alternative: to shield the murderer or to give him up.

And though I had a full appreciation of the sacredness of human life—even such a life as Kohnfeld's—and had never questioned seriously the right of our avenging laws, there was no hesitation in my mind. Really I could not ask myself the question what I would do. I knew, as a matter of prophecy, what I should do, and that was enough. So long as my brain, or my purse, or my physical strength could interpose a barrier between Frederick Dane and the law, I would not fail him. I loved him no less as a murderer, though my soul loathed his crime. I am aware that my conduct is indefensible, and I am therefore the more proud of it. Friends with consciences are but fair-weather friends in a thin disguise.

Continuing the story of the crime as it appeared in my notes, I found two other items of interest. One related to a footprint of the murderer in his victim's blood. It permitted of accurate measurement. The other had to do with some bonds which had been taken from the safe. These bonds were really the only intrinsically valuable articles known to have been stolen. Miss Kohnfeld could say no more about them than that her father had got them from his safe deposit box on the day of his death. He had expected to sell them to a man whose name she did not know. The purchaser had not called. The bonds were issued by a Western city, but she could not tell its name. They were easily negotiable, and were worth about $45,000.

A Central Office detective had woven a fine-spun theory regarding these bonds. He had found a peculiar mark in the blood upon the floor, and another mark on the blotting pad that covered Kohnfeld's table. From these, by measurements and shrewd observation, he had evolved his theory that the murderer had dropped the package of bonds upon its edge in the blood, and had caught it before it could fall over. Then he had wiped the edges of the bonds upon the blotter. It would be necessary, of course, for him to take further precautions to remove the stains before he could dare attempt a sale. He would probably scrape the paper, if he had succeeded in preventing the thick blood from fully penetrating it. By such marks the bonds might be identified if the officers of the law were fortunate enough to find them.

I will say frankly that I searched Dane's room for those bonds; but if they were there he had hidden them too well for my poor wits. It was then eight o'clock in the morning. Dane seemed not to have returned during the night. I ran out for the morning papers, and scanned them with deadly fear; but there was no mention of an arrest in the Kohnfeld case. My friend had not yet been taken.

It was evident that the time had come when I must have his confidence; but I wished to be sure of just what I would say. I decided to take the day for reflection. After a brief sleep that, because of dreams, was worse than waking, I went out and roamed about the city. I saw Kohnfeld's house, and in conversation with the policeman on that beat obtained many important details of the crime. Then I gave him money and learned something worth knowing. It was rumored, he said, that the detectives had found a list in Kohnfeld's handwriting of all the money due him. This had been compared with all notes and obligations that could be discovered, and it was seen that several were missing. The murderer had been too shrewd to take his own and no other.

I went at once to police headquarters and secured access to Supt. Brynes, whom I had had the pleasure of meeting under most favorable circumstances some years before. I told him that I was investigating the case in the pay of one of the newspapers, and had got wind of a recently discovered list of Kohnfeld's debtors. He said that there was such a list and that he would show it to me; but he put me on my honor not to publish it. I promised, and he laid the list before me, together with another which displayed the names of the debtors whose acknowledgments had been found. There were eleven more names in the first list than in the second—Frederick Dane's name and ten others. If he were quote "Erwin" the alias had been adopted only with the usurer's daughter. But that was a minor point.

When I saw my friend's name I fancied that my face betrayed no sign. But the shrewd man who watched me said at once:

"So you knew Dane, eh? Well, he hadn't anything to do with it, my boy. Don't you put his name into the paper, whatever else you do."

I'm not a Byrnes, but I can see through a church door when there is nothing in the way. It was as clear to me as daylight that the police knew Dane to be guilty and were in search of him. The Superintendent's trick was too old; if he expected me to combat his statement he was disappointed.

We talked some minutes longer, and then I took my leave. I had not been drawn into any statement about Dane.

It was not quite 3 o'clock. I went to a bank and drew out all my money—about $3,000. Then I secured from a friend's safe the deeds of certain real estate which, together with the money, made up the sum of my possessions.

The deeds, by great good fortune, I converted into cash. Then I consulted certain sources of information regarding routes of travel, and about 8 o'clock I dined—very modestly for a man with more than $40,000 in his pocket. However, I had sacrificed nearly as much in my real estate transactions and had no right to feel rich.

It was just before 9 when I approached Chrysalis. The evening was dark and foggy, with splashes of rain. As I passed the side of the stone pile I saw a man come out of the small door—the so-called "secret" entrance. It was Dane. He turned toward the Square, holding an umbrella low down over his head.

Instantly I saw a figure start up from the shadows and follow him. I followed, too, until at last I lost them both through lack of skill.

So they were playing with him! They knew his hiding place; their spy was on his track; yet he was not arrested. Why? How absurd not to have thought of it before—the bonds. They believed that he had hidden them, and were tracking him day by day, until he should have courage to secure his blood-stained booty from its hiding place. Then the game would end.

I had secured my money partly for Dane's use and flight, but more to have a bribe at hand. It seemed that I should have no time to spare.

After vainly seeking the lost trail I returned in deep dejection to Chrysalis. Its halls had never been gloomier nor its faint echoes more like the footfalls of ghosts. I walked slowly up the corridor that led to my room.

Suddenly a form brushed by me—Dane! He had something under his coat which he clapsed against his breast with his right arm.

"Come to my room," he whispered as he passed. "Not now. Later. In an hour or more."

He vanished among the shadows that stood guard before his door. I waited a few minutes, expecting to see the hall filled with officers. There was no sound. Dane must have thrown his pursuers off the track. Yet it could be only for the briefest interval. He must not remain there. His hiding in Chrysalis was by this time a jest with the police.

I rapped on his door. There was no answer. I dared not call his name.

I ENTERED, AND WAS FACE TO FACE WITH A MAN WHOM I HAD NEVER SEEN BEFORE.

My key was in my room. I secured it, after a search which nervousness prolonged. Then I returned to my friend's door. I hoped that he had not drawn the bolt. My key turned in the lock. The door yielded.

I entered and was face to face in a moment with a man whom I had never seen before. Dane was not there.

The man stared at me across the table, on which lay Kohnfelt's coat and the packet of bonds, with other objects which I did not doubt were redolent with murder.

I closed the door behind me; locked and bolted it. A calm had come upon me through reaction of the nerves, and it produced a strange effect of utter silence, in the midst of which I was presently surprised to hear the throbbing of my heart. I spoke to drown that sound.

"You are a detective?" said I.

He nodded.

"Where is he?"

"Dane? I don't know. It's none of my business. I am only concerned with these things."

He pointed to the objects on the table.

SOMETHING TO WEAR

PREVAILING FASHIONS ARE VARIED IN CUT AND COLOR.

The Fullness of Sleeves and Skirts is Lessening. General Effects Above the Waist Are However, of the Balloon Series.

Fashion, like flowers, unfold in rapid succession as the season advances, and the first warm day brings out the soft light colors of summer attire; but it is the details, rather than the outlines of fashion, that reveal all the elements of novelty in the latest modes.

Skirts and sleeves reached the limit of fulness and stiffness some time ago, and their proportions have been diminishing since the extreme styles of the late winter, so the really new things in fashion are seen in the accessions of dress, that give it variety and chic, and have multiplied into a diversity of styles so bewildering that it is difficult to choose.

The wide collars, ruffs and ruches which are a revival of the Henry IV. period, are a distinct feature of the season's fashions, and the latest fancy in these miniature cape effects is a collar of ecru linen batiste trimmed with applique designs of white lace and cut sailor shape in the back with long points in front arranged to fall loosely.

Nearly all the bodices are in contrast with the skirt and sleeves, which are often alike. Mousseline de soie is as much used as ever, and charming waists for taffeta silk gowns are made of black silk muslin, lined with white chiffon and made in blouse fashion over silk of the plain color, which predominates in the pattern. The white silk muslin under the black makes it the more transparent. Black lace insertion, with an irregular edge, sewn in stripes on black chiffon, which is also lined with white and made over a color, supplies a very pretty waist. Yellow lace is generally used for a finish for this style of bodice. It may be arranged in a frilled band down the front, or, where black muslin is used, plain yellow insertion may be set in crossed—in squares to form a yoke.

Elbow sleeves are the prevailing style for summer dresses, especially for young ladies, and afternoon as well as evening gowns sport this style of sleeve, made with one or two large puffs, as fancy dictates.

The ineviteble box plait which appears on so many waists of all kinds seems likely to endure throughout the summer. The latest fad is to cut or fold the plaits so they will round out instead of being flat, and they are often trimmed in some manner, either on the edge with frills of chiffon or lace, or striped the entire width with rows of lace insertion and in some instances the plait is made of plain silk in a contrasting color.

Mohair materials are fast gaining in popularity, and some of the latest and most stylish gowns are made of alpaca. It comes in stripes, self colored spots, and plain colors, and in the better qualities is delightfully smooth and glossy. It looks very much like the kind worn years ago, but it is called alpaca poil de chevre, and gray is a popular color.

Simple gowns for traveling and morning wear are made of black and dark alpaca, with Eton coats and plain full skirts, with only a facing of hair cloth at the bottom.

Openly Admired by Gov. McKinley.

Gov. McKinley has a very pretty custom of doffing his hat to his wife before beginning his day's work at the Capitol, which has elicited many a compliment from men and women who have observed the daily incident. Governor and Mrs. McKinley occupy a suite of rooms in the Neil House, which stands opposite the Capitol. In the morning, when the governor crosses the street, he walks forty or fifty feet to the left of the main walk in the Capitol grounds, and courteously lifting his hat bows reverently to Mrs. McKinley, after which he proceeds slowly to his office. After lunch the same thing is repeated, and this custom has been observed during the entire time Gov. McKinley has been in the State House.—Cleveland Leader.

THE ALUMNI RECEPTION.

CLOSING ANNUAL EVENT OF THE BOROUGH PUBLIC SCHOOL.

Clarence Murphy Elected to the Presidency of the Association—An Evening of Pleasure.

A closing and pleasing annual event in North Plainfield school life is the reception which is given by the alumni association. A large number of the members, including the '95 graduates, gathered in the school hall last evening and thoroughly enjoyed the occasion.

The hall was prettily trimmed with blue, white, purple and pink bunting, and well arranged through the rooms were several banquet lamps that shed a soft glow on the charming young women and their gowns, which combined to present a picture of beauty, while the young men were gallant in their attention to their fair partners. President John McLaughlin called the meeting to order and the roll was called by Secretary Walter Raynolds.

It showed that many whose names were called were missing. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved, after which Robert Clark and Clarence Murphy, who were appointed a committee to arrange a constitution, reported through Clarence Murphy. He read the constitution which had been prepared, and it was adopted as a whole.

The nominating committee then presented the following names for officers for the ensuing year: President, Clarence Murphy; first vice-president, Walter Place; second vice-president, John Steiner; secretary, Robert Clark; treasurer, Roswell Loizeaux. The secretary cast ballots for those named, and they were chosen unanimously.

President McLaughlin on retiring from office made a few remarks thanking all for their faithfulness.

The new president then took his his seat, and thanked all for the honor conferred.

Miss Alice Barlow rendered a pleasing instrumental solo, which was followed with a tenor solo by Robert Clark. Both received hearty applause, as did also the violin solo by Edward Waring, and the soprano solo by Miss Alice Carroll.

The rest of the evening was then devoted to dancing, for which excellent music was furnished by Rogers.

Delightful refreshments were served during the evening, and it was rather early in the morning when the young people left for their homes.

Trouble at Rutgers.

Dr. John Jacob Cooper, the professor of logic and mental philosophy at Rutgers college, was caricatured by the class of '95 in their recent play, when a student taking the name of "J. K. Hooper" was made up to resemble to a nicety the professor. Dr. Cooper did not see the play, but was told what occurred. He had previously had trouble with some of the members of the senior class, and took umbrage at the affair. When the diplomas for the graduates were presented to him for signature, he declined to sign them, and the diplomas do not yet bear his name. The members of the class are greatly exercised over the matter, and threaten to take some action in concert.

Tracking Escaped Prisoners.

Eight men, who are supposed to be the prisoners who escaped from the Middlesex county jail in New Brunswick over a week ago, were discovered in a cave in the woods about one mile north of Somerville yesterday. A posse was organized to capture the crowd, but a sentinel who was on the lookout saw the posse coming and gave the alarm. All the eight men got away. It is believed that they have not gone far, and are said to be in the woods near where they were first seen. The authorities are keeping a sharp lookout to see if they can again see the gang.

REJOICED OVER A DEATH.

STERLING PEOPLE WERE BITTER AGAINST MURDERER BERGMAN.

Built Bonfires and Shot Off Fire-Works When the Announcement Came that He Was Dead.

The hanging of August Bergman at Morristown on Thursday noon was followed at Sterling, five miles from this city, with a general rejoicing among the silk mill employes who constitute the inhabitants of that little hamlet.

It was there that the murder of his brother over the nonpayment of a $2 loan was committed by Bergman. The murdered man was an employe of the silk mills and was very popular among the other workmen. All through the trial of Bergman for the murder they were very bitter against him, and when the news reached Sterling Thursday afternoon that Bergman had expiated his crime on the gallows, there was a general rush to celebrate the event.

The 300 employers of the silk mill hustled around and procured old boxes and wood to build an immense bonfire and around this a general time of rejoicing was had. The available fire arms of the town were brought into use and the air fill with noise made by firing them off. The village store had procured a big stock of fire works for the Fourth of July trade, but the stock was soon exhausted by the purchases of the celebrators.

ANOTHER SUCCESSFUL FESTIVAL.

Trinity Reformed Little Workers Reap Considerable Profit.

The festival held in the Voehl building, on East Front street, yesterday afternoon and evening, was a great success.

The young girls of the Trinty Reformed church Sunday-school who planned it are working earnestly to secure money for the new Sunday-school room, and they succeeded admirably in this affair. The sum of $40.98 was realized from the sales, and nearly everything was sold.

The store looked very pretty decorated with ferns, flowers, flags and lanterns, and then there wss a choice display of articles on sale.

During the evening a gypsy happened in, gorgeously costumed, and did a rushing business with a grab-bag.

The little girls have won praise and commendation for their efforts and they are highly pleased with the result.

A KICKING HORSE.

Broke the Fence Down and Then Took a Base Ball Slide.

A horse belonging to John Beekman of East Third street, was severely injured last night. Mr. Beekman brought the horse from the barn and tied him to the fence. He then prepared a quantity of flaxseed to poultice the animal's hind feet. Just as he neared the horse the feet went in the air and a kicking time resulted A lage portion of the fence was torn away and the horse ran out the driveway at a lively gait. When he reached the sidewalk he slipped on some boards and made a base ball slide across the street to the gutter on the opposite side. A portion of the rail from the fence still hung to the halter strap, and as hs ran down the street toward Watchung avenue this rail kept striking him on the forelegs. After much difficulty the animal was caught on Watchung avenue and brought home.

Dr. Herbert was called and found it necessary to take several stitches in a deep cut in the left fore leg, which was a result of the accident.

A BLOOMER RIDER.

She Varies the Sex of the Blue Ribbon Century Run.

The Blue Ribbon Century run of the Manhattan Bicycle Club of New York left West Forty-second street, New York, this morning, passing through Weehawken, Rutherford, Newark, Elizabeth, Cranford, Westfield and Plainfield. They arrived here about 9:40, and were not making fast time. The party included about thirty-five cyclers, and among them was one woman in bloomers. As they passed through Park avenue a crowd of sympathizing wheelmen were stationed at the corner of Fourth street and cheered the riders on. It seemed to give them new life and vigor, for some of them looked awful tired.

John Rickert and Frank Smith, of the Crescent Wheelmen, were among the riders and held front positions. The party stopped at Campbell's club house for a few minutes, after which they continued their journey going to Metuchen, New Brunswick, Princeton, Trenton, Bristol, and Broad street Philadelphia. On the return they leave the Quaker City tomorrow morning at 5:45, retracing the same route. While in Philadelphia they will be the guests of the Century Wheelmen.

CHURCH CHIMES.

Matters of Interest in the Local Religious Organizations.

The Christian Endeavor meeting at the First Baptist church last evening was led by President F. E. Smith of the Trinity society. It was the consecration service.

No one should fail to go up to Union Village on Wednesday afternoon and evening, June 26th, and enjoy the good things that the ladies of the Methodist congregation are preparing for their many friends who expect to attend the festival. A royal welcome awaits all.

The Golden Rule Circle, King's Daughters, of North Plainfield, composed of young misses who are earnest workers for the cause, have set a very good example for some of the older societies, as they are now putting into practice what they learned of theory. They now have two young girls from New York, that their society have been entertaining for some time, that they may enjoy the fresh air of beautiful and healthy Plainfield.

A resident of Bull Frog city in speaking of the extension of the fire department and the organization of a hose company in that community, said that the residents there thought that if an assistant chief was to be elected it was no more than proper that that officer should be selected from their locality, as therein resided both active and exempt firemen among its citizens.

A MINISTER'S TRIBULATIONS.

Rev. Mr. Van Doren Has Been Having a Hard Time in Spotswood.

Rev. W. H. Van Doren, pastor of the Reformed church at Spotswood, has put his case in the hands of Woodbridge, Strong & Sons, lawyers, with instructions to proceed against some persons who have been accusing him falsely. Mr. Van Doren has been busy lately gathering data to show the regard in which he is held in the community. He says that it is a notorious fact that Spotswood is a hard place for preachers, several having been hounded out of the place within the past few years. He is occupying the parsonage until a successor is elected.

The following resolution was enacted in the consistory of the Reformed church in view of the slanders that had been circulated:

Whereas, Certain peasons in our church and community have circulated, or have caused to be circulated, grave and malicious slanders aginst our pastor, Rev. W. H. Van-Doren, which, after the fullest investigation by a committee of the elders of this church, are found to be false. Therefore be it

Resolved, That we hereby express our most indignant protest and condemnation of such conduct as unworthy the name of Christian, and assure our pastor of our hearty sympathy in this sore trial and of our unshaken confidence and esteem for him, and pledge for him our regard and support.

Flemington and the Fourth.

Plainfield is to have a huge Fourth of July celebration in which all societies and business men will join. There will be a parade, games, and fireworks in the evening. It is some years now since Somerville has been awake enough to do anything of the sort.—Somerset Democrat.

Plainfield, although much larger than Flemington, proposes "to have a huge Fourth of July celebration in which all societies and business men will join." While Plainfield and all the surrounding towns are to enjoy themselves on that great National day, Flemington, poor, helpless, newspaper-ridden Flemington, has to remain in the background, "for fear," as the Bound Brook Chronicle alleges, "that everybody will get drunk." And this is the County Seat of Hunterdon county! Shame! Shame!—Hunterdon Gazette.

A Needed Improvevement at Pond's.

For a long time the Pond Tool Machine Works have had their own system of fire protection about their building, including water pipes, hydrants and hose. It was the calculation when it was put in to have it uniform with the city system, but by an error the fire plugs were a size too small to permit the use of the regular city connections. To overcome this a graduated connection was carried by each hose cart for the especial use at Pond's if ever found necessary. But all this inconvenience will now be overcome for the system at the tool works is being equipped with the same size as is used by the city. This will greatly lessen the risk of a fire getting much headway in the valuable plant.

At Trinity Reformed.

Rev. J. F. Riggs, D. D., who preached so acceptably to the Trinity Reformed church people Sunday, June 2, and who has been secured to officiate the remainder of the month of June and all of July, will commence his engagement tomorrow. Dr. Riggs is a very able divine, and Trinity church will no doubt be well filled with an appreciative congregation at all the services during his stay in Plainfield.

LEAL'S SCHOOL CLOSES, TOO.

Y. M. C. A. HALL FILLED WITH FRIENDS OF THE INSTITUTION.

Prof. Fox of Johns Hopkins University Illustrates the Life of An English Student—The Graduates.

The Y. M. C. A. Hall was handsomely decorated last evening to celebrate the closing exercises of John Leal's School.

After a few remarks by Mr. Leal to the graduates and lower classmen, George L. Fox, head master of the Johns Hopkins University, was introduced. Mr. Fox was a classmate of Mr. Leal at Yale. He held the attention of his audience through the first part of the evening with a description of the largest public schools in England, showing the difference between the English and the American public schools.

Later in the evening all the lights were turned off and the audience was carried, with the use of the stereopticon, on an imaginary journey through Rugby, Eaton and Clifton. Picture after picture was cast upon the wall showing the handsome buildings of the large schools. Many pictures brought before the eyes of the audience a very vivid view of the boat racing in England which is one of the greatest sports of the English school boy. Cricket is another of their favorite sports, and the audience was very much pleased to see some of the fields of England with the cricket team in white uniforms all in position.

Toward the later part of the evening Mr. Fox noticed that his time was nearly over, and when he spoke to Mr. Leal of closing, the audience broke forth in an enthusiastic applause, and Mr. Fox needed nothing else to convince him that he should not stop before he had exhausted his supply of pictures.

The lecture was very interesting as Mr. Fox has visited all the schools of England and took all the pictures with his own camera.

Fagging in England corresponds to hazing in America. When a boy first goes to school he becomes a fag and for the last two years he is a fag-master. The fags are required to do just whatever the fag-masters may command.

Mr. Fox once asked one of the English boys why he stood fagging as he could not find one American boy who would. The boy looked up at Mr. Fox and said, "Mr. Fox, what do you do with the American boys when they are awfully fresh?"

A little after ten o'clock the audience dispersed well pleased with their evening's entertainment, and feeling greatly instructed.

The graduating class was as follows: C. W. Abbott, H. M. Hall, L. A. Chase, J. F. Middleworth, George Bull, Lewis L. Thomas, Henry Talmadge, C. T. Walz, Stanley Hunter, E. F. Dorman, A. R. Sampson and Swan Hortwell.

The decorating committee consisted of the class of '95 with A. R. Sampson as chairman.

Levy saying he had melted it up for old gold.

Regular size, 50c and $1.

FOR THE FRESH AIR FUND.

DELIGHTFUL FESTIVAL CONDUCTED BY BRIGHT LITTLE GIRLS.

A Craig Place Lawn Resplendent With Beauty of Fair Faces and Artistically Arranged Booths.

If the large number of children who are recipients of the blessings that are extended through the fresh air funds of New York could have taken a peep at the scene presented at 40 Craig place yesterday afternoon and evening their hearts would have jumped for joy and perhaps they would have realized more fully than ever how the money which sends them to the country is earned.

Loving little hearts and hands in the neighborhood had planned to raise money that they, too, might add it to the fund which gives the closely-confined children of the large cities an opportunity to see the green fields and enjoy a romp in the bright, clear sunshine of the country, over hill and dale that is luxuriant with fragrance and beauty, and so they got together and, with Tina Voehl as their leader, planned a fair to be given on the lawn of Mr. and Mrs. John Carney and Mr. and Mrs. David King's residence. It took days of work, but when they commenced the affair soon shaped itself into a reality.

There was the lemonade well built of stone, over which was an arrangement of greens and ferns, that made it a delightful spot to receive a glass of this cooling and refreshing beverage and then Hattie Messerschmidt and Nellie Vermeule, who were in charge, were so pleasant that it kept them busy looking after their many customers.

Near by was a candy booth, which was a perfect beauty. Here, too, greens and ferns had been put into excellent service, and the roof was artfully made by the little hands. At this place Addie Carney and Sadie Winckler held the attention of their customers, until they had secured some of their money.

In one corner of the yard was the fancy table, and a cozy place it was, all enclosed with a profusion of the prevailing articles, ferns and greens. And such a complete stock of fancy goods on sale was tempting enough to capture the money that Nellie Valiant, Mabel Stevens and Carrie Pangborn were successful in securing.

An attractive spot was the ice-cream booth. It was in the shape of a bower, and covered with cotton, it had an appearance of winter, which was in perfect hormony with the articles on sale. At this place Mamie Bogert, Bessie Valiant and Stella Swain served cream in a most satisfactory manner.

In another corner of the yard was placed the cake booth which was attractively made with greens and ferns. Ethel King and Addie Marsh had charge, and they knew just how to cut the cake so it would please everyone.

The whole scene was as pretty a picture as anyone would care to look at, and then the electric lights that were scattered here and there gave the place a very brilliant effect.

The waitresses, Maggie Fritz, Winnie Carroll, Mabel Wright, and Aggie Morse, all dressed in white, were always on duty and ready to serve their patrons.

There were also several Japanese lanterns hanging about the grounds, and a strip of red, white and blue bunting added much to the general effect,

Of course the little girls had help, but they deserve unlimited praise and credit for their undertaking.

To Mr. and Mrs. John Carney and Mr. and Mrs. David King, perhaps more than anyone else, is due the very picturesque scene presented, and they, assisted by Edward and Henry Sebring, put in the wires for lights, while the Electric Light Company very kindly gave the current.

Albert Vail also assisted materially. Mr. Tier was very kind in donating two gallons of ice cream, as was also John Morton, who gave enough ice to answer every purpose.

In the centre of the yard the girls had several tables that were prettily decorated with vines and cut flowers. In the afternoon the attendance was excellent and about $25 was cleared; in the evening the attendance increased very much. Everything was disposed of and the sum realized fully pays all for their labor.

People Know Him.

Abrams, the shoe dealer, whose ad appears in The Press, is not a new comer to Plainfield. He has been here a number of years and has established a reputation for low prices, good goods and fair dealings that has built him up a large and substantial business.

CAMBRIDGE TO RESIGN

The Duke Will Retire from the British Army.

For Thirty-Nine Years He Has Been Commander-in-Chief of Her Majesty's Forces—A Courageous Commander, But Not a Brilliant Field Officer.

London, June 22.—The secretary of state for war, Mr. Campbell-Bannerman, announced in the house of commons yesterday afternoon that the Duke of Cambridge, the commander-in-chief of the British forces, will resign command of the army on Oct. 1. The post, he said, will not be abolished, but will be modified.

In Command Thirty-nine Years.

The Duke of Cambridge has held the position of commader-in-chief of the British army since 1856. Of late years, his natural conservatism has taken the form of a detestation of anything in the shape of innovation or improvement, and there is no doubt that his obstinacy has blocked the progress of many needed military reforms. It is only fair to add that he has displayed great energy and conscientiousness in the discharge of routine duties, and has never shirked either trouble or responsibility.

Not a Brilliant Field Officer.

He bore himself with personal courage in the Crimean war, but his career as a commander in the field was not brilliant. The statement that the position of commander-in-chief will not be abolished—as the radicals and many liberals in Parliament have demanded—but modified seems to point to the succession of the queen's third son, the Duke of Connaught, as titular chief, with the real power in the hands of such men as Field Marshals Wolseley and Roberts.

THEY WANT MEANY.

Trouble Over Three Players in the Pennsylvania State League.

Scranton, Pa., June 22.—President John Hanlon, of the Pennsylvania State league, came here yesterday for three Scranton players who are claimed by the state league. They are Meany, Eagan and Huston. They were members of the Harrisburg club which disbanded, but before it disbanded Meany was sold to Scranton. Mr. Hanlon claims that the players are the property of the state league, and says that the Harrisburgs were practically disbanded before Meany was sold to Scranton. He is willing to waive claim on Huston and Eagen to get Meany. Huston and Eagan say no state league club will be willing to take them and pay them their back salaries. It promises to develop an ugly fight and will go to Nick Young for a decision.

CHINA'S INDEMNITY LOAN.

A Chance for It To Be Taken Up by American Investors.

Washington, June 22.—Officials of the Chinese legation say that the American capitalists who are negotiating in China to secure the loan of 200,000,000 taels which China is about to pay to Japan, are by no means urging a vague or futile suit and that they stand quite as good a chance of securing the loan as any other money representatives.

Main Loan Still Open.

Some misapprehension has been created by cabled statements that China had closed her loan in Paris. It is explained by the officials here that this loan is a subordinate one of 16,000,000 taels to cover the surrender of the Liao Tung peninsula. The main indemnity of 200,000,000 taels carries no guarantee by Russia and France, and it is this main loan which is still open and to which the attention of the American investors is attracted.

Would Bring Gold for Silver.

There is much speculation as to the result of the loan if it is secured by the American parties. It is said that the first result would be the shipment of an unprecedented amount of silver. But as China's bonds are payable in gold, the ultimate result would be to bring back gold for the silver paid to Japan.

Could Readily Meet Payments.

It is pointed out also that the interest on the entire loan will not exceed $5,000,000 annually, so that the Chinese customs receipts of $23,000,000 will readily meet the interest charges and provide a sinking fund for the redemption of the bonds, which will probably run for twenty years.

HOWGATE FOUND GUILTY.

Verdict of the Jury After a Long Discussion An Appeal Taken.

Washington, June 22.—The Howgate jury after several hours' discussion, brought in a verdict of guilty on each indictment, one indictment being for forgery and one for falsification of accounts. The jury added a recommendation to mercy. An appeal on a bill of exceptions has been taken to the district court of appeals and will probably come up in September.

The Enterprise men exploded powder and tried to smoke the others out. This has been going on for about thirty-six hours. Several men were overcome by smoke and one was badly cut about the face. Guards have been placed on duty, but fighting with explosives is continued. The Rico-Aspen men are taking out the ore and the Enterprise men are smoking them. The ore in the disputed territory is worth $300 a ton.

THE CHINESE TREATY

Interesting Details Given Out at Washington.

The Territory Ceded To Japan and the Money Indemnity—Condition Regarding the Inhabitants of the Country Given Up—Li Hung Chang's Successful Efforts.

Washington, June 22.—Copies of the full text of the treaty of peace between China and Japan and of the documentary history of the negotiations have been received in this city. The general purport of the document signed at Shimonoseki, Japan, April 17, 1895, and ratified by exchange of signed copies at Chefoo, China, May 8, 1895, has already been made public, but many interesting details have not been furnished by telegraph. The territory ceded by China to Japan, including all fortifications, arsenals and public property thereon, is described as follows:

The Territory Ceded.

The southern portion of the province of Feng-Tien, the line of demarcation begining at the mouth of the river Yalu; thence to the mouth of the river An-Ping; thence to Feng Huang; thence to Hei-hang; thence to Ying-Kaw; thence by the river Lino to its mouth. All the places named are included in the ceded territory. Also all the islands belonging to the province of Feng-Tien in the eastern part of the bay of Lino-Tung and in the northern portion of the Yellow sea.

Formosa and All Its Connections.

The island of Formosa, together with all the islands appertaining to it. The Pescadoras group, that is all the islands lying within the 119th and 120th degree of longitude east and 23d and 24th degree of latitude north. The alignments of the frontiers described shall be verified and marked by a joint commission, whose work shall be done within a year.

The Indemnity.

Of the 200,000,000 Kuping taels $160,000,000 in gold indemnity to be paid by China, half is to be paid in one year in two equal instalments, the last payable in seven years. Interest is fixed at five per cent., but if China pays the whole sum (she may anticipate payment of all or any part of it) within three years, all interest shall be waived and the interest for two and a half years or any shorter period if then already paid shall be included as part of the principal.

Regarding the Inhabitants.

Inhabitants of the ceded territory desiring to reside outside may do so and two years is given them in which to sell their real estate and retire. Inhabitants then remaining in the territory shall, at the option of the Japanese government to be deemed Japanese citizens.

Occupation of Wei-Hai-Wei.

Three separate articles relate to the temporary occupation of Wei-Hai-Wei by Japanese troops. The force shall not consist of more than one brigade; China is to pay one-fourth of the cost of the occupation, fixed at 500,000 Kuping taels ($400,000). The territory to be occupied shall comprise the island of Liu-Kung, and a belt of land five Japanese ri wide along the entire coast line of the bay. Civil administration shall be in the hands of Chinese officials, who must conform, however, to the orders given by the commander of the Japanese forces in the management of the troops.

Original Demands Modified.

A study of the documentary history of the negotiations shows that the original demands of Japan were materially modified before they took final form in the treaty under the protests of Li Hung Chang, the venerable Chinese plenipotentiary—the amount of indemnity was reduced from three hundred to two hundred million taels with easier terms of payment. One place, Wei-Hai-Wei, was accepted for temporary occupation instead of two, including Feng-Tien-Fu (Moukden) in the province of Sheng-Kin; the opportunity of substituting a financial for a territorial guarantee, and other modifications.

KENT WILL BE RELEASED.

He Was Serving a Life Sentence in England.

Washington, June 22.—Secretary Olney has received a cablegram from Ambassador Bayard announcing that the British home secretary has decided to release, under ticket-of-leave, John Curtis Kent, an American citizen sentenced to life imprisonment in 1883 for alleged participation in dynamite plots. It was clearly shown that Kent was innocent.

WILL NOT HANG NEXT WEEK.

A Writ of Error Granted in the Case of Murderer Genz.

Jersey City, June 22.—Chancellor McGill has granted a writ of error in the case of Paul Genz, who was sentenced to be hanged next week for the murder of Clara Arnim in Hoboken. The writ will be argued at the court of errors and appeals during the November term. The murderer has acted in a queer manner since his imprisonment and the current opinion is that he is insane.

Killed by Lightning.

Galveston, Tex., June 22.—During a severe rainstorm, accompanied by thunder and lightning the new orphans' home, just being erected here, was struck by lightning. Fred Sefers, who was at work on the roof, was instantly killed, and Fred Hartell and a boy named Mann were injured by falling timbers.

Will Declare for Professionalism.

New York, June 22.—It is announced here that A. E. Weinig, of Buffalo, the crack long-distance bicycle rider, and Pat O'Connor, of Syracuse, the famous pacemaker, will to-day declare for professionalism and hereafter ride only for cash prizes.

Catholic Church Rumor Denied.

Chicago, June 22.—The report that Bishop Dunne of Dallas, Tex., was coming to Chicago to act as coadjutor to Archbishop Feehan, is denied by Chancellor Muldoon.

Almost Wiped Out by Fire.

Omaha, Neb., June 22.—The business portion of Odell, Gage county, Neb., was almost totally destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon.

BUSINESS IS BOOMING

Encouraging Reports from All Quarters.

The Rise Too Fast, Probably, in Some Sections—Encouraging Crop News and Confident Replenishing of Stock Important Influences in the Steady March Forward.

New York, June 22.—Dun's resume of the condition of trade for the week just closing will to-day say: He who sees a setback in business at this time must be gazing through a telescope pointed by mistake at some other country. From all parts of the United States, the best advices obtainable tell of a rising tide of trade and industry, which threatens here and there to mount too far and too fast. The volume of all business is by no means equal to that of 1892 as yet, though in some imporant branches larger than in that or any other year. Daily payments through clearing houses in June are 26.9 per cent. larger than last year, though 8.6 per cent. smaller than in 1892, the last of full business at this season. A rise of more than a quarter in a single year is the more significant because, in spite of recent advances, the prices of commodities as a whole average a fraction of one per cent. lower than a year ago.

Causes of the Rise.

Two influences of tremendous power contribute to the rise, encouraging crop news and confident replenishing of stocks which have been for two years depleted to the utmost. When business payments have so long been 15,000 millions yearly less than before, it is not strange that the increase should be at the rate of 11,000 millions a year when faith in the futures inspires general replenishment of stocks. Excepting too heavy rains in Texas, crop reports this week have been highly encouraging. Future injury to cotton cannot be predicted, but as yet nothing indicates a yield below 7,500,000 bales, which would not be supposed to threaten famine if the commercial and mill stocks were remembered, now exceeding by 2,500,000 bales a full consumption until September 1

Iron Works Crowded with Orders.

The rush for supplies in iron and steel resembles a "bear panic" in the stock market. Because prices are mounting everybody hurries to buy, so that they mount higher. Bessemer iron has reached $12.65 at Pittsburg, the Bar association has advanced common to $1.15, the Wire Nail association puts up the price to $1.50 per keg, the steel rail makers have raised the price to $24, eastern and southern furnaces have both raised prices again 50 cents per ton, and structural beams are 1.35, and angles 1.25. It is undeniable that works in operation are crowded with orders, and others which have been idle for years are preparing to resume.

Woolens and Cottons.

Sales of wool at the chief markets, 3,113,700 pounds domestic and 3,844,400 foreign, are larger than in any previous year for the same week, and in three weeks of June have been 19,516,065 pounds, of which 10,631,700 were foreign, against 16,983,600 in 1892, of which 7,764,800 were foreign. Orders for men's woolens are a little better, and the Washington mills have opened their Clay worsteds at an advance of about 2½ per cent., though some lower grades are reduced in price. Advances continue in cotton goods, and are sustained by unusual demand and scarcity at a time when the mills are generally anxious to clear off old stocks.

Boot and Shoe Trade Booming.

Shipments of boots and shoes for the week have been the largest ever known in any week, 101,425 cases, and for three weeks of June have been 11 per cent. larger than in any previous year. Many shops are stopping, though most have orders to August or September. Evidences of better employment of money in the interior multiply, but funds continue to gravitate hither, and one large loan for an Olneyville mill, with good New York endorsement, was placed for forty-five days at 1½ per cent. per annum, although commercial loans are more freely offered and taken.

Business Failures.

Failures for the second week of June show liabilities of only $2,092,382, of which $702,357 were manufacturing and $1,327,625 were trading, against $2,917,535 in all for the same week last year, of which $688,137 were manufacturing and $2,220,766 were trading. Failures for the week have been 228 in the United States against 214 last year, and 31 in Canada against 25 last year.

LAWRENCE CALLAN DEAD.

He Was 94 Years Old and a Retired U. S. Supreme Court Messenger.

Washington, June 22.—Lawrence Callan, an old messenger of the supreme court of the United States, is dead, at the ripe age of 94 years. He began his service in 1858, by appointment of William Thomas Carroll, then clerk, and he continued actively on duty until 1877, when he was retired, retaining a nominal connection with the office.

Believed To Be Escaped Convicts.

Somerville, N. J., June 22.—Eight men, who are supposed to be the convicts who escaped from the Middlesex county jail in New Brunswick, over a week ago, were discovered in a cave in the woods about a mile north of here yesterday. A posse was organized to capture the crowd, but a sentinel who was on the lookout saw them coming and gave the alarm. All the men escaped.

To Open Indian Lands.

Washington, June 22.—Judge Lamoreaux, commissioner of the general land office, has prepared a proclamation to be submitted to the president for approval opening for settlement the land of the Uncompahagre Sioux Indians in Utah. The reservation contains about 220,800 acres.

Mott Confessed His Guilt.

Utica, N. Y., June 22.—A. C. Mott, 70 years old, charged with counterfeiting in Canastota, confessed his crime, but when arraigned pleaded not guilty.

New Bank Authorized.

Washington, June 22.—The bank of Blossburg, Pa., capital $50,000, has been authorized to begin business.

SWELLS FROM A TUG.

Caused the Damage to the Pennsylvania Crew's Shell.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 22.—An accident that occurred to Pennsylvania's shell just as it was about to leave the boat house for the starting point caused a postponement until Monday of the race between Cornell, Columbia and the University of Pennsylvania, which was to have taken place here yesterday, and disappointed thousands of people who had made the trip up or down the river and had sat two hours or more in a discouraging rain.

Swells from Gov. Morton's Tug.

The boat had been placed in the water alongside the float and the crew had left it and gone on board the launch which was to tow it up to the starting place. The only man left on the float was Mr. Ellis, a director of the union of the university. The shell was about to be fastened to the launch when a series of big swells began to roll in. They were produced by the tug J. C. Hart, which had been secured by Governor Morton and family for viewing the race.

A Costly Privilege.

The tug came down the river shortly before 4 o'clock, and was permitted to cruise over the course, a privilege denied to all other craft except the yacht Nirvana and the two revenue cutters, Hudson and Manhattan, which were doing police duty in keeping the other boats away, and the steamer which carried the reporters. The Hart, after going down the course, started back and passed the Pennsylvania boat house, which is about midway of the course on the west shore, not far off shore.

Badly Damaged.

The Pennsylvania men must have seen the waves coming, but it was evidently too late to save the shell. She was tossed aloft on the crest of the first roller and came down with a crash on the edge of the float. Three holes were stove in her side, and the skag was broken. The shell was nearly filled with water, and as the oarsmen rushed to her assistance and raised her stern the water rushed forward and strained the boat badly in the bow.

TWO SEAMEN INJURED.

Boiler of an American Warship Launch Explodes at Kiel.

London, June 22.—The Post will to-day publish a dispatch from Kiel saying that at eight o'clock Friday morning the boiler of a launch belonging to the American warship San Francisco exploded. Two men were seriously and two slightly injured. The launch was returning to the ship with provisions at the time of the accident. The launch and the sufferers were taken to the San Francisco by a long-boat from one of German warships.

No News in Washington.

Washington, June 22.—The navy department had no confirmation from Admiral Kirkland of the explosion of a boiler on one of the cruiser San Francisco's launches. Engineer-in-Chief Melville cannot account for such an accident under any other supposition than that the water ran too low.

Best Tube Boilers Made.

The boilers of the cruiser's launch are of the water tube type designed by Chief Engineer Towne, who recently resigned from the service to become superintendent of Cramp's ship yard, and are believed to be better than any other water tube boilers in existence. Exactly the same type is used on the cruisers Cincinnati and Raleigh.

Explosion Considered Impossible.

These boilers have remarkable steam making capacity but contain very little water, the feed pumps having to be kept going almost continually. A dangerous explosion of such a boiler has heretofore been considered impossible, as they are constructed on the principle that in case of over pressure they will allow a small break to relieve the strain without damaging the entire boiler.

ROSEBERY'S DEFEAT

A Cabinet Council Summoned for This Afternoon.

London, June 22.—A cabinet council has been summoned for this afternoon. Mr. Campbell-Bannerman, secretary of state for war, will offer to resign because of the reduction by the house of commons of the vote for a supply of small arm and ammunition contained in the war estimates. A section of the liberals urge the ministers to call a general party conference to consider the matter of dissolving parliament.

War Secretary's Salary Cut.

The government was defeated yesterday on the motion of William St. John F. Brodrick, conservative, to reduce the salary of the secretary of war by $500 on account of an alleged deficiency in the army stores and munitions of war, chiefly cordite. The motion was adopted by a vote of 132 to 125. The unionists are jubilant at such an unexpected victory.

Press Comments.

London, June 22.—The Graphic (Conservative) will to-day say that it is virtually impossible for the government longer to retain office. The Morning Post (Conservative) will say that the only course the ministry can pursue with dignity is to recognize the full effect of the vote and announce the dissolution of parliament with the least possible delay.

CAMPOS IS NOT DEAD.

The Spanish Minister at Washington Receives News to That Effect.

Washington, June 22.—Senor Dupuy de Lome, the Spanish minister at Washington has just received a dispatch from the captain-general of Cuba as follows: "Gen. Martinez Campos is quite well in Santiago de Cuba, and the news reported of his being wounded is not true."

Will Make No Concession.

Amesbury, Mass., June 22.—The committee from the striking weavers of Hamilton mills, accompanied by T. P. Cahill, secretary of the Textile union, held a conference with Agent Quinn yesterday afternoon, setting forth their demands and grievances. Mr. Quinn would make no concessions.

Vacheron Demurrer Overruled.

Albany, June 22.—In the bribery case of Assemblyman Vacheron, Judge Clute overruled the demurrer of the defendant and the day for the trial will be set by agreement of counsel of both sides.

Insurgents Bob Up at Cartajena.

Havana, June 22.—A band of twenty-five insurgents under Mariano Pino has appeared at Cartajena, in the Cienfuegos district.

Sailormen and Others Are Loth To Leave.

The Canal Fetes Close in a Blaze of Glory—French Warships Take No Part in the Fireworks Display and Leave During the Night—Their Action Causes Much Criticism.

Hamburg, June 22.—This city is still crowded to-day with a surging mass of humanity, although many of the visitors who came here to participate in the opening of the North Sea Baltic canal left this morning. Thousands of sailors and soldiers in every variety of uniform are in the streets or in the public resorts, all mingling in the heartiest of good comradship. The hotels, restaurants and temporary booths are feeding a constant stream of visitors, whose appetites have been sharpened by the excitement of the day.

Frenchmen's Actions Criticized.

The action of the French warship last night in taking no part in the fireworks display, remaining dark and dreary amidst the brilliant illumination of the other visiting vessels, causes severe comment here. Their departure during the night is also mentioned.

The Ceremonies at Kiel.

Kiel, June 22.—The keystone of the North Sea-Baltic canal was laid by Emperor William yesterday and the ceremony was witnessed by a multitude of people whose ardor was in no way diminished by participation in the fetes of the day and night before. Never did the harbor of Kiel present so animated an appearance. The bay was filled with vessels of every description, from the coasting hooker to the sombre, majestic looking warships that swung lazily at their anchors. Here, there and everywhere on the water scudded sail boats and steam and naphtha launches. All the vessels were gaily decorated. Ashore the scene was, if anything, more animated.

Arrangements Excellent.

The arrangements at the scene of the ceremony were excellently devised. A small sandstone obelisk here commemorates the construction of the original canal a century ago. Two grand stands of vast proportions had been erected for guests and ticket holders.

Arrival of the Imperial Party.

The emperor left for Holtenau on board a steam launch. He wore the uniform Gardes du corps. The empress, wearing a crushed strawberry gown, accompanied him. Shortly before 11 o'clock the waiting crowd broke out into shouts of "Der kaiser komnt!" The imperial party arrived at the keystone at 10:55. Their arrival was the signal for deafening cheers. His majesty was met at the jetty by Chancellor Hohenlohe, who conducted him to a marquee. The emperor walked to his place with martial bearing. He acknowledged the enthusiastic greetings smiling.

The Stone Closed.

His majesty having taken a standing position befor the dais, Chancellor Hohenlohe asked the imperial assent to commence the proceedings, and then read a document relating to the canal, after which the kaiser approached the stone, which was flanked by a battalion of marines, into which Chancellor Hohenlohe's document, giving a history of the canal, with a set of coins of the reign of Emperor Frederick III., was placed. The stone was then closed and the emperor, who was handed a mallet by the Bavarian plenipotentiary in the Bundesrath, tapped the stone thrice.

It Was a Pretty Scene.

As his majesty gave the stone the first stroke a detachment of artillery stationed on the hill behind the platforms fired a royal salute, which was followed by salutes fired by the warships in the bay and the bands played "Heil Dir Siegerkranz." It was a pretty scene. After the three blows had been delivered the emperor said: "In memory of Emperor William the Great, I christen this canal the Kaiser Wilhelm canal, in the name of God, in honor of Emperor William I., for the weal of Germany and the welfare of nations."

The Empress Participates.

After the emperor had tapped the stone with a mallett he empress stepped forward and performed the same act, followed by the crown prince of Prussia, the prince regent of Bavaria, the king of Saxony, the grand duke of Baden, the grand duke of Hesse and many others.

Reviewed the Warships.

At the conclusion of the ceremonies at the keystone the emperor went on board the imperial yacht Hohenzollern, where he took luncheon. Salutes to his majesty were fired by several warships in the bay. Later the emperor's yacht steamed through the lines of the German and foreign fleets lying at anchor. The spectacle was a magnificent one.

Miss Herbert on the New York.

Miss Hebert, daughter of the United States secretary of the navy, with a party of friends, was on board the American cruiser New York.

Grand Banquet.

As soon as the naval review was finished a grand banquet was held in the imperial marquee at Holtenau, where 1,066 guests sat down to dinner, which lasted a long time. The great hall in which the kaiser's banquet took place, is built on the south side (Kiel side) of the canal. It was built in the form of a vessel of the seventeenth century, an idea of the kaiser himself.

The Kaiser and Cleveland.

At dusk the scene on the water was one of unparalleled beauty. All the warships were outlined with a fairy-like tracery of lamps, and some of them had brilliant displays of fireworks. Altogether the display was the most brilliant ever seen here, and probably finer than ever seen in Germany. The fireworks display of the Americans was the most admired. The New York, the temporary flagship of the squadron, had a magnificent design sixty feet long against her funnels. It read: "America sends hearty greetings to Germany upon the completion of the canal." Set pieces, pictures of the emperor and President Cleveland, each forty feet squre, were also displayed.

Russians Examine the Columbia.

Hundreds of officers have inspected the American vessels. They are especially interested in the Columbia. The Russian officers have thrice examined her minutely.

The Dover Index asks, "How soon will the coming woman be here?" What is commonly called the coming woman is here now, but not in such numbers as she will be later on.

"Plainfield is the best governed city in New Jersey," says the Plainfield Press: and in view of the fact that the city government is almost unanimously Republican, while the Plainfield Press is Democratic, such a statement is as creditable as it is significant.—Elizabeth Journal.

The Journal man should remember that The Press is an independent paper, though it is no discredit to be a Democrat. But it is better to have things correct, you know.

The Courier-News of yesterday takes occasion to say that Plainfield is not a well governed city. The Daily Press reiterates what in stated on Thursday: "Plainfield is the best governed city in New Jersey." There are, of course, violations of ordinances in Plainfield, as there are bound to be in every community. But the ordinances are more rigidly enforced and less violated in this city than in any other in the State, and this, granting the Courier-News editor the intelligence that the Daily Press does, must be acknowledged by him.

Dr. Mary D. Hussey's unpleasant experience on a railroad train last week with a beast who bore the semblance and wore the clothing of a gentleman is one that is of entirely too frequent occurrence in public conveyances and in public places, and she is entitled to the thanks of her sisters for making such a determined effort to secure the fellow's punishment. It is unfortunate that the average woman when thus insulted prefers to appear unconscious of it, dreading the unpleasant publicity which an attempt to secure the punishment of the offender would necessitate, and the fellows that indulge in such rascally practices are emboldened to indulge in them by that very sentiment. The Newark authorities and the daily papers in their publications in regard to the matter seem to have united to make the case as unpleasant for the complainant as possible, while shielding the defendant by discharging him from custody and concealing his name. We admire Dr. Hussey's spunk, and believe that every right minded man and woman in the community will wish her success in the effort to secure the punishment of the offender and the protection of her sex. —East Orange Gazette.

Mason reports that there 1,003 children between the ages of 5 and 18 in the school district, an increase of 29 over last year. The annexed portion of the town was formerly in the district, so that the increase did not come from that quarter.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destored forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

GLADSTONE ACTIVE YET.

The Veteran Statesman is Happy at Hawarden.

Miss Alice Livingston, an American, has recently interviewed Mr. Gladstone, and what he said to her is reported in the Boston Transcript.

Mr. Gladstone came in, smiling, and walking with marvelous lightness and elacticity.

"I should like so much to hear how Mr. Gladstone passess his days—just the programme of one of the days which telleth another," the daring young woman implored after a few minutes. The Grand Old Man smiled.

"If you are really good enough to be interested in so small a thing," it is easily told, and in a few words. During our trip abroad, the physician's orders were merciless. Breakfast was to be taken in bed, at the late hour of 8:30. All necessity for such a lazy habit of life has passed away, however. We rise about 7:30, attend morning service at the village church, to which, as it is scarcely a mile away, we usually walk. After that, we breakfast, althouffh I am ashamed to say, I have sometimes of late felt the necessity for a cup of tea or coffee, which is kindly given me at the rectory if I require it. I do not know that I would recommend the habit, but I am myself very fond of reading a book as I dress, in the morning. It was thus that I read a couple of months ago, the 'Life of Professor Owen,' with extreme enjoyment and profit.

"I have found my pleasure in some attempts at literary labor, and therefore I can scarcely refer to it as work, when I say I spent some hours before luncheon in writing. I am at present engaged upon a new edition of Bishop Butler, who, to my mind, was one of the noblest men and wisest writers who ever blessed the earth with his influence. This work, if I must call it so, has brightened my few holidays for the past ten years.

"I have heard that another book on much the same lines will soon be ready for publication, probably before my own can see the light, but I do not for this reason allow myself to be discouraged. I shall persevere until the end is reached."

"You sometimes read novels, do you not, Mr. Gladstone?"

"Yes. I allow myself some light reading usually each day, after dinner."

"Do you ever go to the theater, Mr. Gladstone?" was asked.

"I seldom find myself equal to or inclined for theater going, of late, but I cannot so far as to say that I have given it up. I confess, however, that a quiet game of backgammon in the evening, when I have laids aside a book, has for me a great charm. It is a game which scarcely can be excelled by any modern invention—assuredly not superseded."

"Will you tell me what is your favorite study?" the young woman inquired, emboldened by his good nature.

"There are many answers which I might be tempted to give to such a question," replied Mr. Gladstone. "Yet the one which I would regard afterward with the most satisfaction would be—theology. It has been the study of my life, though I am, at 85, but on the threshold as a learner."

—Work of laying sewer pipes on West Second street between Liberty street and Plainfield avenue, was commenced yesterday.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Master Louie M. Hummer has the admiring glance of the young ladies as he glides through the streets of the city on his handsome new wheel.

Through the down town agency of J. Hervey Doane, Oscar S. Teale has purchased a Cleveland lady's wheel for his daughter, Miss Anna Teale.

In riding the ball of the foot only should cover the pedal, and the saddle should be so adjusted that when the pedal is at its lowest point the foot will rest firmly upon it.

We are are likely to have bicycle Derbys, bycycle St. Legers and bicycle Suburbans before long. The wheel is supplanting the horse everywhere, and bicycle racetracks abound. —Tribune.

The annual century run of the Metropolitan Association of Cycling Clubs will take place on July 28th. The route will be from Weehawken to New Brunswick, returning via Belleville, Orange, Plainfield and Metuchen, nearly every mile of which is over splendid macadam roads. A silver watchcharm will be given to all survivors. Entries can be made with A. Stahl, 47 Warren street. There will be no less than thirty clubs represented on this run.

It is stated on good authority that there will be no professional league formed this season. But by the beginning of next season a professional league will be formed, with all the most prominent class B riders in it and with the leading manufacturers of wheels at its back. The National Assembly, at its meeting next February, will pass an amendment providing for a professional class, to be known as class C, and over which the racing board will have control.

Two prominent riders will turn professionals today, and they will start in the races at Philadelphia. According to T. W. Eck, all the first Class B men of the country will jump immediately after the National meet at Asbury Park. A. E. Welnig, of Buffalo, who will change his colors today, is said to be the fastest Class A man in New York. He holds the fifty-mile competition road record, and he is a fast man at almost any distance. Patrick O'Connor, of Bofton, is a Class B man, and he has been in this country about a year and a half. He was the champion amateur of Ireland, and he will go abroad with Johnson in August.

Austin Corbin, who owns the new bicycle track at Manhattan Beach, has announced a scheme for the promotion of professional bicycle racing on the new track, and will offer purses aggregating $15,000 for a series of races to be run there this summer. Willis B. Troy has been selected to manage the track and has been clad with authority to deal with all the leading professionals in the world for races at the beach. It is proposed to open the professional season on July 20th and continue the meeting weekly until September 15th. In additional to professional events class A races will be run. Harry Wheeler, the American professional, who is now in France, and who recently met with a mishap while practising, has been communicated with, and is expected to arrive in the course of a few weeks with some representative foreign racing men. In the races to be run the prizes will be distributed as follows: $100 to first, $70 to second, $35 to third, and $15 to fourth. It is intended to ask the L. A. W. to assume jurisdiction over the professional events. Should the league refuse it is likely that the old National Cycling Association of America will take charge. It is known that Chairman Gideon, of the Racing Board of the L. A. W., and several of the leading officials of that organization, favor professional races, and it is believed that they will look after the new professional interests.

I have two little grandchildren who are teething this hot summer weather and are troubled with bowel complaint. I give them Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and it acts like a charm. I earnestly recommend it for children with bowel troubles. I was myself taken with a severe attack of bloody flux, with cramps and pains in my stomach, one-third of a bottle of this remedy cured me. Within twenty-four hours I was out of bed and doing my housework. Mrs. W. L. Dunagan, Bonaqua, Hickman Co., Tenn.

YOUR SCALP! During the heats of summer does it become irritated and invite an occasional friendly scratch? To wash it is well, but not too often, lest your hair become "brash" and stiff. But treat it twice or thrice a week with our Petroleum Hair Tonic—a little rubbed in with your finger ends, and you will find the feeling of comfort and coolness truly delightful. Positively nothing equals it as a balm for the woes of your scalp. Sprinkler bottles 50c. Only at

REYNOLDS'S PHARMACY, PARK AND NORTH AVENUES.

While in Topeka last March, E. T. Barber, a prominent newspaper man of La Cygne, Kansas, was taken with cholera morbus very severely. The night clerk at the hotel where he was stopping happened to have a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and gave him three doses which relieved him and he thinks saved his life. Every family should keep this remedy in their home at all times. No one can tell how soon it may be needed. It costs but a trifle and may be the means of saving much suffering and perhaps the life of some member of the family. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. Sometime ago I was troubled with an attack of rheumatism. I used Chamberlain's Pain Balm and was completely cured. I have since advised many of my friends and customers to try the remedy and all speak highly of it. Simon Goldbaum, San Luis Rey, Cal. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. THOUGHTS WHILE FALLING.

Harrington's Brisk Thinking While Going Down with the Smokestack.

Few men have had such a terrible fall as Seth Harrington and lived to tell it. He gives a remarkable account of his descent through ninety-five feet of space. Harrington is one of the men who fell with the 110 foot smokestack at Jones & Laughlin's Southside mill during a recent storm. Frank Woolem of Four Mile Run and Frank Grady of South Twenty-seventh street were the other riggers at work when the accident occurred, but both escaped serious injury. They were both half way down the stack when it fell.

Harrington was working on the inside of the stack, putting on the rim. He was compelled to come out over the top and go down the outside. He had gone down the steps, or iron handles, about fifteen feet when the stack and scaffolding succumbed to the gale. Harrington struck on the roof of the boiler house, crushed through it, and was held fast on the steam dome. His escape from instant death is little less than miraculous.

The injured man's story of his experience during the few seconds he was flying to what seemed certain death is interesting, and gives information on how people feel when all support is withdrawn from them at any great height.

"You see, when people who are not used to high places fall, they become nearly dead with fright before they are half way to a stopping place," said Harrington last evening at the Southside Hospital. "Scared? Well, I guess I was, but I never lost my head, for I knew the one chance in a million for life would vanish if I did. I felt just as sure that my time was up as I did of reaching ground. They tell me that a drowning man will, in the last five seconds of consciousness, think of all the wrongs he has committed in his life, think of all of his friends, ask to be forgiven by God and man, and many other things, but it seems almost impossible for one thousand minds to think of half as much in ten minutes as I did in the two and a half seconds that I thought were my last. It seemed like two minutes and a half to me, and I thought I never was going to alight.

"It would take me a day to tell all I thought of. Why, I recalled nearly every event of my life, many of them having never before entered my mind since they occurred. Not only that, but pictures of events after my supposed coming death flashed through my mind. My first thought was of my family and friends. I don't think I said 'good by' aloud, but I said it, bidding them all a farewell. I felt miserable to think I was about to die without seeing them again. I even thought of poor Woolem and Grady, who I supposed were flying to the same fate.

"Why, I even pictured myself laid out and my friends, one by one, coming up and taking a last look at me. Even the news of my death passing from one friend to another and how I supposed they would take it came to me. No; I would not go through it again for Jones & Laughlin's whole plant."

Harrington admitted, however, that between the thoughts of friends, etc., he was wondering if he was going to land on "something soft."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

HOPE'S FLATTERING TALE.

Deceitful, False and Hollow the Insurance Agent Found It.

The life insurance agent bit his lip, kicked the wall and threw a book at his cat. Then he felt better, but not much better, for fate had been treating him unkindly, not only punching him unmercifully while he was up, but beating him fiercely while he was down.

"I'll tell you my miserable story," he said to a chance caller, and perhaps evoke your pity. There were three of them, partners in crime, I believe, and I persuaded each of them to make an application for $15,000 life insurance. And it took a lot of persuading, too. First of all I gave them a dinner, then took them to the theater and then bought dolls for their little girls. Each of them touched me for a small loan. I could afford these little attentions, as my commissions on the business would have been about $1,000.

"I was hugging myself at the prospect of the commissions, and every time one of them felt doubtful about being able to afford so much insurance I gave him a meal or a box of cigars to 'jolly' him along.

"They were all three examined on the same day, and all three were rejected. Though they looked healthy they had about all the diseases under the sun and they knew it. They had boarded at some time or other at the expense of almost every insurance agent in town."

The Nagging Woman Again.

Dr. Edson's recent articles in the North American Review on this subject provoked replies from women, which are now in turn answered by him. He repeats that "with a woman who is a confirmed nagger, 'a cursed shrew,' as Shakespeare calls her, neither exercise nor fresh air nor any other agency of which we have knowledge will do any good. She must simply be endured by those who cannot get away from her. I wonder sometimes whether these women realize for a moment how intensely they are detested." Further, he wishes to emphasize the danger to those who are slipping into the habit. "I hope some women reading these articles will seriously ask themselves whether it is worth while; whether the danger of becoming real naggers is not confronting them; whether they are willing to look forward to a time when they will be detested by every one, and to one when their husbands and children will rejoice over their deaths. They can stop now, but it is sure that the habit will grow on them until they reach a point where they will not be able to stop."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

CHAPTER III.—THE MAN WHO SOLD HIMSELF.

The man-hunter is not confined to the domain of romance. Under the mask of calmness which my adversary wore I could detect the eagerness and passion of pursuit. He had begun the chase perhaps with the cold sense of duty, or under the spur of the large reward upon the heel of his necessity. But once upon the scent a new ardor possessed him. He had pressed on without rest; so much I could read in his lean face. And at that moment when the first flush of triumph was on him, I must win him to dishonor. For I had resolved to bribe him if it were possible; if not, I might do worse. Physically he was not my equal, though large of frame and tall. Supposing that I wrested his spoils from him in that room, and bound and gagged him, Dane might still go free.

"How much money" said I, speaking very slowly, "will you sell those things for?"

He was hastily wrapping them in a great piece of paper.

"You want to bribe me," he rejoined. "No; it won't do."

"The reward," I said, "is less than $10,000. I will give you twenty thousand, cash in hand, this night!"

He passed his hand over his forehead as if dazed. I saw that I was appealing to one who loved money, and I took courage

"Quick!" I cried, "decide. Here is the cash. It will make you comfortable for many a day and no one need know. Tell your superior that these evidences were not here. Who knows it but you? Who can swear to it?"

"No one. What will you do with them?"

"Burn them in that stove. Is there any metal?"

"The knife."

"I'll take it. No one will suspect me."

"No; I'm safer still. I know what to do with it. Look here. You tempt me. I am pressed for money. Who knows whether the reward will ever be paid? Give me thirty thousand——"

"Twenty-five!"

"No, thirty. I'll take no less. You have as much there. Speak quick before I am an honest man again."

"Done! Here is the money."

I counted it out to him with trembling hands. He put it into his pocket. His face became ghastly pale and his lips quivered.

I had never seen a man sell himself before. The bargaining had been different from what I would have expected, but then the man was clearly exceptional. The quick change in his mental attitude and the readiness of decision on so grave a topic were doubtless part of his nature, and suited to his profession. Yet I would have expected a man with so resolute a face to make a longer fight against corruption.

"Now to destroy them!" I replied. "We must have the hottest fire that the stove can stand."

"But can we wait?"

His voice trembled. The courage had gone out of him; it had fled with his honor as I marked even in that moment of excitement.

"Some one might come," he went on huskily. "Remember I am deeper in it now than you are. Neither if us must be found here with this stuff in sight. Certainly not I. If Dane should come——"

"Of course if only Dane comes we are safe. We must risk the others. It's better than carrying the bundle through the streets."

While speaking I was piling the fuel—of which, fortunately, there was a good supply—into the stove. A moment and the flame leaped up. The draught was magnificent. In ten minutes the stove was ready for Kohnfeld's coat. The blood-stained garment, torn into shreds, smoldered and fought the flame, but vainly. The buttons were of wood, covered with cloth. There was nothing that could not be reduced to ashes. Indeed, I marveled that it had not been destroyed long before. But blood guiltiness muddles the wits.

The shoe with its blood stain was worse fuel than the coat, but by the time it reached the fire there was such a heat as no leather could resist. That witness of the crime passed into ashes. There was little else but the bonds. I was about to put them into the fire, but first I noticed the edges which had been deftly cleansed of blood, though not without leaving a trace of the murderer's work.

"Stop!" cried the detective. "We must not burn those. They should be returned to Miss Kohnfeld. They are rightfully hers."

"True; I will attend to that. Or, on second thought, it is better you should do it. That will seem natural; and if you are true to your bargain to me, you will invent a story which will help clear Dane."

"He will not be convicted," was the reply. "I know the evidence. Without my testimony regarding the finding of these things here, he will escape."

"And that testimony you have sold to me?"

He bowed.

"Now for the knife," said I. "Would it not be well to wrench off the handle, which is of wood, and burn it?"

"A good idea."

He drew the knife from under his coat. I split the handle with a blow, and it fell from the blade.

At that moment we heard a sound at the door. The handle was softly turned. Then came the shock of a strong shoulder against the wood, and I heard a low voice.

"The police are upon us!" I whispered.

I gathered up the pieces of the broken haft with a sweep of my hand, and in a flash had fitted them together, to see if I had all. A piece was missing. It would be equal to all the other evidence!

"YOU MUSTN'T BURN THOSE."

I groped upon the floor. The perspiration fell from my forehead like rain The room, under the influence of that roaring fire, was like an oven; and excitement blazed in me as hotly.

I heard the door strain, under steady and strong pressure. I turned to my companion. Despite the heat his face was like white paper.

"Is there any way out of here?" I whispered.

"The window!" he replied. "You must stay here, otherwise we shall both be followed and overtaken. Remember I have still the knife blade to dispose of."

I ran with him to the window. He pushed it open cautiously and stepped out. The rough stones gave him footing; he made his way rapidly downward and sidelong.

After one moment's pause at the window to feel the cool air on my face, I hurried to the door, drew the bolt, and put my trembling hand upon the knob. The door was opened by pressure from without. I nearly died of relief at sight of Dane, alone.

"What are you doing here?" he cried. "I knew it was you. Did you not hear me call your name?"

I was too deeply agitated to speak. I could only take his hand, while tears rolled down my cheeks.

"What tomfoolery is this?" he cried, but not unkindly. "Why have you built that fire?"

I was myself by this time.

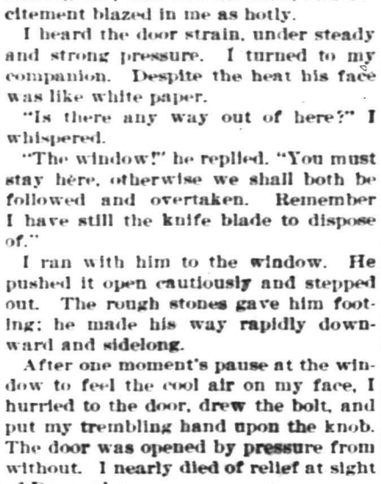
"Dear old boy," I said, "this night has saved you. I have bought your life and I have burned the evidences of your transgression."

His face paled and then flashed scarlet. He staggered back.

At that moment there was a rap at the door. Before I could stay him, Dane opened it. His action seemed purely mechanical; he was like an image endowed with motion.

A uniformed officer of police entered.

"We've got him!" he cried.



"WE'VE CAUGHT HIM!" HE CRIED.

And in that instant it flashed across me that the fragments of the knife handle were still where they had fallen! Dane was lost unless I could destroy them.

I sprang forward, but the officer advancing, interposed his bulky body without seeming to wish to do so. I dared not force my way by him. I waited, grief-stricken, for the arrival of the men to whom he had addressed his cry of triumph. No one came. There was no sound of men in the corridor.

"So you've got him, eh?" he said. "Where is he?"

"In the janitor's room," replied the officer. "We found him crouching against the side wall of the building below here."

The officer waved his hand in the direction of the street.

"He seems to have had a bad fall," he continued. "I should say he must have tried to climb down from a window. I shouldn't be surprised if he was done for."

"I'll be with you in a minute," said Dane.

The officer went out. Dane turned to me.

"Now, in the name of heaven tell me what you've done," he cried.

I stammered out my story.

He seized me by the shoulder and held me face to face with him.

"Wake up!" he exclaimed. "Get your wits together. You've had this thing by the wrong end. I'm a detective. I've been watching this man called Erwin for days and days.

"He was suspected of Kohnfeld's murder, but he was only a name at first. No one knew who he was or where he had gone. I traced him to this place, and got this room because it was next to his. He knew that he was shadowed, though at first he could not tell by whom. I kept him so worried that he could not destroy those evidences of his crime which are now ashes, thanks to you.

"Laboriously I gathered them. The coat I found hidden in the cellar of this building. The shoe was there also though not in the same hiding place. But the bonds I could not find. I decided that he would have to find them for me. Many a night I tracked that man, and one of the best shadows on the headquarters' staff tracked us both."

The figure I had seen to follow Dane was explained.

"We thought he would surely lead us to the bonds," he continued, "but we were always disappointed. At last I found them. They were in the custody of a person with whom Erwin communicated secretly, in the course of his nightly walks. That confederate is now under arrest. I got the bonds and was bringing them back with me this evening when I encountered you in the hall.

"Meanwhile Erwin eluded the shadow and got back to Chrysalis. He came to this room. It was his only chance—to find the accumulated evidence and destroy it. It was mere chance that kept me away so long. I was trying to make connections with the shadow. It is possible that Erwin counted on that.

"You know the rest. Erwin must have been dazed when you appeared. It's lucky for you that he was. But his shrewdness, which is more than mortal, enabled him to take advantage of your error in supposing him to be a detective. He left this room with thirty thousand dollars and the bonds; and if he'd got away heaven only knows when we'd have caught him. You'd have been an accessory after the fact—indeed, you are one now, but I guess we can get you out of it all right. You may have to do a little lying to get your money back; for instance, you might say he found you here and bound, gagged and robbed you. We'll see about that.

"Now, a word more to post you about the case: I was put on it because I knew Kohnfeld. I'd had dealings with the old villain to my cost. Indeed, I owed him a good deal of money—which by the way I shall have to pay mighty soon out of my share of the reward.

"Erwin, by the way, is a very high-class crook. I feel considerable satisfaction in beating him. About the time when you first found me here the case was looking all wrong and I was very blue, as you doubtless noticed. That accounts for some peculiarities of my manner which helped to mislead you. Well, I forgive you; yes, and thank you too, most heartily. To pass now from myself to the other person who has been under suspicion I will tell you that Erwin had had dealings with Kohnfeld, and the old 'fence' had advanced him money. He was forcing payment by means of documentary evidence of Erwin's many crimes; and he lost his life and the documents at the same time."

"Why didn't Erwin burn those things in his room?" I asked.

"He hadn't any stove," replied Dane.

"There's only a grate. It was safer to hide them. Come, let's go and see him."

We were too late; Erwin had been removed to a hospital. He died within a few days.

I was never forced to tell the story which Dane had suggested. He secured my money for me and hushed up the whole affair.

Dane and I are closer friends than ever. I know he thinks less than nothing of my intellectual capacity, at least as applied to matters in his chosen field, but that need not affect his regard for me. Was not our old friend Wamba rewarded for his devotion? And he was a fool by right of descent, being the son of Witless, who was the son of Weatherbrain, who was the son of an alderman.

THE CANNIBAL BOA.

THE SNAKE THAT SWALLOWED HIS COMPANION IS DEAD.

He Lived to Digest His Friend, and Survived Several Months, but Died Apparently of Another Ailment. The Victim Was 9 Feet Long and the Other but 11.

It is announced that the famous boa constrictor in the London Zoological Gardens that swallowed his companion is dead.

The extraordinary tragedy in which this snake figured is a matter of record. The recently deceased snake, it appeared, was on excellent terms with his roommate, a somewhat smaller boa constrictor. One night some pigeons were given to them. In the morning the keepers found only one snake in the cage and no pigeons. The only possible conclusion was that the big snake had swallowed his friend.

A careful examination of the evidence in the case made one theory appear probable. This was that one snake had had a pigeon in his mouth and that the other had seized it, perhaps playfully. When a snake has closed his jaws on a large object he cannot relinquish it, owing to the fact that his numerous teeth slant backward and that the jaws are distended. In this case the bigger snake, it would appear, was absolutely compelled to swallow the smaller.

The big snake did not die of indigestion, but survived the tragedy many months. Possibly sorrow preyed upon him, for he recently died in generally broken health.

Shortly before the snake's death the superintendent of the gardens wrote this account of the case:

"Since January, 1894, the two fine specimens of the common boa lived together on friendly terms in one of the large compartments of the reptile house. The snakes are usually fed at dusk once a week, and on the evening of Oct. 5 Tyrrel, the keeper of the reptile house, placed two pigeons in the den of the two boa constrictors. The larger one seized one of the pigeons, and no doubt swallowed it, after which the keeper closed the house and left. On his return the next morning he was astonished to find only one boa in the compartment instead of two, and from the enormously increased size of the remaining one he concluded at once that the larger boa had swallowed its companion. That this was so was evident to all who visited the house.

"The enormous enlargement of the creature's body was most remarkable. It had no longer the power of curling itself round, as snakes usually do, but remained extended nearly its full length in a straight line, and appeared to be at least three times its normal size in circumference. It was almost painful to see the distended skin, which had separated the scales all over the middle of the body. After examining the snake my expectation was that it would ultimately disgorge its companion. I have, however, been disappointed. Recalling to mind a former and very similar case in which the decomposing body of the snake swallowed caused the death of its destroyer, I had much doubt about the digestive powers of this animal. But in the present instance the snake has not only digested its companion, but has regained its appetite as well as its normal size.

"On Friday, Nov. 2, the keeper, finding the creature moving about as if in search of food, placed a pigeon in its den, which was seized and swallowed immediately. I have had this voracious serpent measured, and find it to be eleven feet in length. The one which it swallowed was about nine feet in length."

Florence Nightingale at 75.

On the 15th day of May she celebrated her seventy-fifth birthday—as great a woman and as great a public benefactor, and as much of a heroine as she was forty years ago, when she went forth from her comfortable home in England, not as a mere nurse to attend to the wants of the wounded and dying British soldiers in the Crimea, but as a fearless organizer of a great field hospital system, which the British war office authorities, staff officers and generals had looked upon as a mere matter of afterthought in the preliminary arrangements of one of the most difficult campaigns in the history of the civilized world.

Miss Nightingale loathes anything in the form of publicity. To journalists she never opens her mouth, nor even her door, but to any one who seeks advice on a question affecting the interests of the sick or those who nurse them a hearty welcome and a word of encouragement and counsel are always cheerfully accorded. She has a very comfortable home on one of the best streets in the West End of London, but spends most of the year at Claydon House in Buckinghamshire, the home of her sister, Lady Verney.

She is a tall woman, rather stout, with gray hair and fine, open face. Although a great sufferer she does not show a trace of it. She has not known what it is to be without pain for many years. Her features are finely modeled, while her hands and feet are very small. Her voice is low and musical. She often reads aloud, and sometimes she hums a song or a hymn. She is very devout and an omnivorous reader. Her room is littered with newspapers, magazines, writing paper, pencils and letters. She is always cheerful.

Heat and Poor Food Invite the Dread Disorder.

Largely Accountable for the High Death Rate.

Lactated Food the One Safe Diet for Tender Years.

Babies Thrive on It, and They Take It With Relish.

The first thing a baby can do is to eat.

The question of baby's food is most important up to the age of 5. Half of all the babies born die on account of improper food. On its nourishing quality and its absolute freedom from contamination depend the growth, health and very existence of the little one.

In June, July and August unusual precautions must be taken, or the weak, sickly babies fall victims to that deadly disease, cholera infantum, which will kill off so many precious ones this summer.

MARION BUSSELL.

Medical skill can do no more to save babies' lives and to keep them well than it has done in the preparation of lactated food. It is a matter of careful record that "lactated food babies" are the healthiest in the world.

"After using lactated food for five years in cases of children suffering from cholera infantum, and in debilitating and wasting diseases, during which time it never failed me, I have pleasure in calling attention of physicians to it, and in recommending its use," says A. P. Grinnell, M. D., the dean of the medical faculty of the University of Vermont, in a statement published in the Ladies' Home Journal. It is of inestimable value to mothers to know this.

Medical science has been able to devise nothing so good as lactated food to take the place of mother's milk. It is made for the express purpose of forming a perfect substitute for healthy mothers' milk. It is pleasant to the taste, and has the unusual virtue of inducing delicate babies to take nourishment when other food disagrees with their weak stomachs. Lactated food has saved thousands of babies from falling victims to cholera infantum by keeping up their strength without increasing, as most food does at such times, the irritation in the intestines that is accountable for most of the fatalities among children during the heated season.

There is no parent in the land but can read the fallowing letter with profit. It is from Mrs. J. Bussell, of Oldtown, Maine, who writes:

"Little Marion is the picture of health and strength, and attribute it all to lactated food. She has as fine a set of white teeth as one will see and is never sick a day. She still uses your food and will for sometime to come. I need not say anything of her vitality, as I think her photograph expresses evidence enough of that."

While at Peekskill, N. Y., Mr. J. A. Scriven, a prominent manufacturer of New York City, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Such good results were obtained from its use that he sent back to the druggist from whom he had obtained it for two more bottles of the same remedy. When you have a cough or cold give this preparation a trial and like Mr. Scriven you will want it when again in need of such a medicine. It is a remedy of great worth and merit. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

Catarrh starts in the nasal passages, affecting eyes, ears and throat, and is in fact, the great enemy of the mucous membrane. Neglected colds in the head almost invariably precede catarrh, causing an excessive flow of of mucous, and if the mucous discharge becomes interrupted the disagreeable results of catarra will follow, such as bad breath, severe pain across forehead and about the eyes, a roaring and buzzing sound in the ears and oftentimes a very offensive discharge. THE BROWNS ARE PLAYERS.

THE WOODBRIDGE AGGREGATION DEFEAT THE Y. M. C. A. TEAM.

Bangup Game of Ball on the Crescent Oval Saturday—Plainfield Scores Five Runs in the Ninth Inning.

It did not rain Saturday afternoon, neither did the Y. M. C. A. base ball nine win, but the cranks who attended the game enjoyed it, and in the last inning had a chance to root like "ye olden times." Nearly a hundred were present to see the Woodbridge Browns defeat the home team seven to five in a game nearly errorless on the part of the Plainfield boys, and only won by the manifestly superior playing of the famous Brown brothers. McLaughlin pitched for Plainfield for the first five innings and at the first ball delivered threw his arm out. This hampered him and thus enabled the Browns to roll up a higher score than they otherwise would. Fearing a permanent strain, Burt was placed in the box, while Mac guarded first base.

Tall Dave Brown had splendid control of the ball, and although he was but fairly well yet the hits were never bunched. In the second inning two hits by Schoonmaker and Davis excited the cranks, but Egan knocked an easy fly to first, who made a double single handed.

Up to the eighth Brown's up-shoot seemed to puzzle the Y. M. C. A. boys, but Freeman at last found what he was looking for and sent the ball chasing down towards Denton's nursery while he sprinted around to third. A run seemed sure, but Davis struck out and then Egan hit an easy grounder to the short stop. Freeman started for the home plate but was touched out when the catcher threw to first in time to put out Egan.

The fun began in the ninth, however. Burt made a pretty hit and reached first safely. Dupee went out on a fly to centre. Townley put another fly in the hands of the centre fielder who dropped it. McLaughlin did the same to the left fielder who was rattled; also allowing Burt to cross the plate amid the cheers of the crowd. More errors brought in both Townley and McLaughlin, while Schoonmaker and Freeman aided by reaching first on balls and the badly rattled outfield ran around the bases and added two more runs to the score. Davis had followed in their footsteps as far as second where he managed to upset the famous Charley Brown who attempted to put him out, but the third out was made by an easy grounder by Egan who was fielded out at first. This ended the game which, considering the strength of the visiting team, was a very creditable showing for the Y. M. C. A. nine.

J. Hervey Doane and Van R. Schuyler acted as umpires.

The score by innings was as follows:

Woodbridge	1	2	0	3	0	0	1	0	x	—7

PLAYED AND DINED.

Pleasant Saturday Event of the Hillside Tennis Club.

Owing to the inclemency of the weather Saturday afternoon their was not a very large gathering of people at the Hillside Tennis Club grounds. The final match game between R. T. Nevins and H. H. Hollister of the Rutherford Club, and Fred Fish and C. F. Walz of the home club, was of course the interesting feature. The playing was very good. The scores were 6-1, 6-1, 6-3, in favor of the home members.

An interesting game was played afterward between Messrs. Nevins and Hollister, and Dr. Richards and C. F. Walz.

Tea was then served in the clubhouse. Miss Phoebe Lovell poured the tea and was assisted by Misses Edith Gilbert and Gertrude Walz.

Not as Far as He Thought.

The draw on the Newark bay bridge refused to close promptly Saturday afternoon and the 5:30 and other trains from New York were compelled to back down to Communipaw and go around by the New York and Newark branch. It was nearly two hours before the draw could be closed. Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, who was a passenger on one of the trains, fell asleep, and awakening near Brill's woods, thought that he was in Africa or some other foreign place, where the Courier told its readers he intended to sail for.

Fine Pianos on the St. Louis.

The new steamship St. Louis, of the American line, has among her luxurious furnishings three pianos, made by the Mason & Hamlin company, one in mahogany (Chippendale) one in cherry, and one in enamel, white and gold. They are of the finest make and add greatly to the beauty of the furnishings. The same company has orders for three pianos of similar make for the new steamship St. Paul, of the same line.

Letter-Carriers Meet and Elect.

The letter-carriers of this city (Branch 396 of the National Association of Letter-Carriers) met in their rooms on West Second street, Saturday evening, where important business was transacted and the following officers elected for the ensuing year:

President, Charles B. Stephens; vice-president, J. W. A. Bauersachs; secretary, Robert H. Loughlin; treasurer, William Demarest.

The newly-elected officers will be installed at their first regular meeting in July.

The Laws Enforced Here.

The New York Times of yesterday publishes a column and a half description of a century run through New Jersey towns from New York to Philadelphia, and in speaking of Plainfield says:

If riding on Sunday, do not try to find any refreshment—especially liquid—as the blue laws are rigidly enforced. Rather ride along until two miles past the town. But an excellent place to stop for dinner at Plainfield can be found at the Albion Hotel, on the road out of town.

Better Get Married.

A Plainfield young man went out walking with his best girl Saturday night, and in the course of their travels the girl's father appeared, and administered a small dose of displeasure by punching the young man in the face. The down-hearted couple sought a policeman for advice, and were told that the only thing to do was to either get married or separate.

Will Be a Great Feature.

It is intended to mount the old fire bell, which did service so many years in the tower on the West Second street house, on a wagon for the Fourth of July parade, where it will again ring forth the sounds that will carry "the oldest citizen" back to the time when he pulled the fire apparatus. Boice, Runyon & Co. will furnish the wagon and horses for the parade.

Another New Business Block.

Lawyer W. R. Codington, ever on the progressive side of city improvements, has in contemplation the erection of a building on Park avenue, between Laine's barber shop and the building owned by him on the corner of Park avenue and Second street. It will be a handsome structure and a credit to the city.

An Organ Recital.

William E. MacClymont will give an organ recital in the First Presbyterian church tomorrow evening. Lennox Barnes, of New York, nephew of B. T. Barnes, of this city, will assist.

Good Citizens to Leave.

Joseph Sohl and Walter Gibson will leave town Wednesday for Passaic, where they will start in the electrical business.

—Don't make fun of a boy whose clothes don't fit. In five years his clothes may be tailor-made, while yours are second-handed. Don't make fun of a poor girl, for in a short time she may be the happy wife of some man with brains and a bank account, while you might be glad to be clerk for her husband and sleep in the attic.—Exchange.

TALK OF THE BICYCLISTS.

GOSSIPY LOCAL AND NATIONAL ITEMS OF THE GREAT SPORT.

The Double Century Finished With Plainfielders Well Up in Front—Sanger Likely to Be Declared a Professional.

Adam Blair is learning to ride a wheel, and he succeeds admirably.

A. H. Barnett, of Westfield, passed through town Saturday on his wheel, accompanied by two friends.

G. Q. Dolliver, of Manning avenne, is busy evenings learning to ride a bike. His son Charley says if "pop" gets tired wrestling with it, he'll gladly take it off his hands, and ride in less than ten hours after his first trial.

A crowd of people standing on the sidewalk on West Front street Saturday night was very much amused to see a colored woman, who was riding a wheel, run into a dog. She was thrown from her wheel, but fortunately escaped injury. She was obliged to walk her with wheel home.

Benjamin Wainright and Joseph Male, both employes of Scott's Press Works, on a five-dollar wager on Saturday last rode a bicycle race over a five-mile course, starting from Scott's in great shape. There were many fellow employes who witnessed the affair, and much excitement prevailed. William Jukes was starter. Wainright won.

There were about twenty-five of the Century riders including the "bloomer" girl who returned from Philadelphia yesterday. They passed through Plainfield about 2:15 in the afternoon, and Frank Smith and John Rickert were among the leaders, and looking as fresh as though they had been out for a short ride. The rest of the party looked exceedingly well.

The Alcyone Cyclers of Elizabeth had a nine-mile road race on Friday night, from Elizabeth to the Wheatsheaf hotel and return. All the contestants but four dropped out. Capt. Harry Hicks was the first man to finish, and for a prize received a handsome gold medal. The referee was David Strauss, of the Alcyones, the starter Chief Consul Robert Gentle, and the timer, E. H. Smith.

The Elizabeth Athletic Club cyclers held their ten-mile handicap road race Saturday afternoon, over the Springfield-Elizabeth course, which is five miles, with a turn. Newton White was the first man in, E. H. Karr was second, Frederick Hedges, third, W. D. Stout, fourth, and Robert Eaton, fifth. There were ten starters, Charles Appley being scratch man. White's handicap was six minutes. A large crowd witnessed the contest.

Notwithstanding all reports to the contrary, the match race between C. M. Murphy and W. C. Sanger will take place at the meet of the Kings County Wheelmen, at the Manhattan Beach track, on Saturday, June 29th. The race will be at one mile, to be run in three heats, the winner of two heats to be declared the winner of the match. Murphy holds the competition record for one mile of 2:01 4-5, made at the Waltham track two weeks ago. Sanger has always been known as Johnson's most formidable rival, and he is also riding in record-breaking shape. A five-hundred-dollar trophy will be given to the winner. Each heat should be a grand struggle from start to finish for the supremacy.

Many prizes received this season by Class B men on the National circuit are said to be far below the advertised value, and a "kick" will soon be made to Chairman Gideon. "Big" Terrill, who comes from California to race in the east, has a diamond which was valued on the programme and entry blanks at $150, and is worth at retail less than half that amount. The American racing men are not novices when it comes to valuing prizes. The racing men are asked to compete at a meet, a grand list of prizes is shown them, and on the strength of this list they take part, good races are run, the crowd is large, the race meet promoters are made wealthy, and the racing men receive for their hard work prizes worth less than half of the value of those shown.—New York Times.

TO BLOW UP A FACTORY

Twenty Men Charged with the Conspiracy.

Remarkable Story of a Plot Said To Have Been Originated By the New York Hat and Cap Makers' Union. One Man May Turn Imformer—All the Accused Under Arrest.

New York, June 24.—Louis Friedman, 19 years old, Russian Hebrew, of 41 Ludlow street, was held in the Tombs court yesterday to await requisition papers from New Jersey, on a charge of conspiracy and robbery. The complainants are Nathan Mopschick, Louis Bernstein and Hyman Goldberg, who own a cap and hat factory in Rutherford, N. J. They charge Friedman and twenty others with conspiracy to rob their factory.

Had Detectives Initiated.

Nathan L. Hahn, of the law firm of Hahn, Myers & Bronne, told Justice Voorhis the remarkble story that the Cloth Hat and Cap Makers' union, of this city, to which Friedman belonged, had ordered the blowing up of Bernstein & Goldberg's factory with dynamite. "We had two detectives initiated in the Cloth Hat and Cap Makers' union," said Lawyer Hahn. "They were present when the union decided on the dastardly deed. We have the very minutes of the meeting at which the members so decided."

Friedman Pleads for Mercy.

Friedman, when committed by Justice Voorhis, burst into tears and pleaded pitifully for mercy with Mr. Davis. With Lawyer Hahn, the three had an earnest conversation for a few minutes. Friedman's face brightened up as he finally parted from Hahn and Davis. It is said that efforts will be made to have Friedman confess and appear against the others.

Machines Removed, Goods Destroyed

The warrant says that the machines were removed from the factory and that five operators were, by force, made to quit work. It was then closed by the Cloth Hat and Cap-Makers' union, of this city, injuring thereby $500 worth of manufactured caps. Friedman and the other twenty are also charged with stealing a $54 sewing machine and $4.80 worth of cotton, and with intending to steal $100 worth of unmanufactured cap material belonging to Mark Davis.

ST. LOUIS DISABLED.

Injury to Her Rudder Causes the Delay in Arrival.

New York, June 24.—The American line's new steamer St. Louis, which arrived Saturday, traveled over one thousand miles without the use of her rudder, which was rendered useless by a break. The vessel was steered by her twin screws.

Flaw in the Steel.

The accident which delayed the vessel was due principally to a flaw in the steel of which her rudder stock is made. The severe rending the metal received during the first two days out unquestionably widened the weakness and started the fracture. The St. Paul, now nearing completion at the Cramp yards, in Philadelphia, has such another rudder and this will be in all probability brought to this city and fitted to the St. Louis. If this may be done, and both Mr. Cramp and Mr. Towne believe that the change can be effected, the St. Louis will be ready to start on her outward trip at the regular time on Wednesday.

Expect Great Things of Her.

Mr. Towne was enthusiastic when speaking of what the ship had done. "I believe," he said, "that she will certainly do 20.50 knots an hour, and in all probability 21 knots when she has warmed up to her work. She will be the fastest vessel of her class afloat, and will knock the stuffing out of everything save the Lucania and Campania, which are not of her class. She made 19 1-2 knots an hour for thirty-four consecutive hours just before her rudder gave out, and this was without being pushed.

CHICAGO TEAM ARRESTED.

Charged with Violating Sunday Law—The Game Not Stopped.

Chicago, June 24.—The Sunday Observance league made good its threat yesterday and arrested the members of the Chicago league ball team after the third inning of the game with Cleveland. President Hart told the five constables that he would submit quietly to arrest if the players were allowed to give bonds on the spot. This was agreed to and Justice Cleveland, of Norwood park before whom the warrants were sworn out, accepted M. Posner and E. Frank as securities for the players. Each man was held in $100 bonds until July 2, when the case will come up for trial. Warrants were also sworn out for Tebeau and McGann. These were not served as George Tebeau was not on the grounds and there is no such player with the club as McGann.

DECIDED TO RESIGN

The Rosebery Government Steps Out.

Official Announcement Made After a Meeting Last Evening—Lord Salisbury Summoned by the Queen. He Will Be Intrusted with the Formation of a New Cabinet.

London, June 24.—It is officially announced that the Rosebery government will resign. Lord Salisbury will be summoned by the queen to form a ministry, and his cabinet will proceed with the routine business of the house, obtain provisional supplies and then dissolve parliament. It is expected that the elections will take place about the 10th of July.

Decided To Resign.

The second meeting of the cabinet Saturday afternoon began at 4 o'clock and lasted until 5:45. The meeting was held to decide whether the government should resign or dissolve parliament. It was decided to resign.

Conferred with the Queen.

After dinner at Windsor castle Saturday night Lord Rosebery had a long private audience with the queen and communicated to her the decision arrived at by the government. The length of the cabinet's deliberations was due to the attitude of Herbert Asquith, the home secretary, and John Morley, chief secretary for Ireland, who strongly opposed any step involving either resignation or dissolution. They argued that in view of the stage of the debates on the Welsh disestablishment and Irish land bills the government ought to pass both into laws.

Insisted on Passage of Land Bills.

William O'Brien, who until a few days ago represented Cork city in the anti-Parnellite interest, but who was compelled to retire from the house owing to his having been declared a bankrupt, visited Downing street and urged that it was the imperative duty of the government to pass the Irish land bill. All the ministers with the exception of Premier Rosebery remained in town over Sunday.

Rosebery Spends Sunday at Windsor.

Prime Minister Rosebury yesterday walked unattended to the 8 o'clock service at St. George's chapel, Windsor castle. After breakfast he strolled through the castle grounds. At 11 o'clock he went to Frogmore, where the queen, Princess Beatrice and Princess Christian had breakfasted. He attended a private service in the Frogmore royal mausoleum with the royal family, and afterwards had an audience with the queen. He then had luncheon, after which he was driven to the station, where he took a train for London.

Meeting Last Evening.

Arrived at the Paddington station, he took a carriage and drove to his official residence in Downing street. Here he found waiting for him Lord Twedmouth, lord privy seal and chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster, and Arnold Morley, postmaster general. Mr. Asquith arrived soon after Lord Rosebery. The quartette conferred until 6:45, after which the decision to resign was first officially made known.

Lord Salisbury Summoned.

Her majesty has sent for Lord Salisbury, who will proceed to Windsor castle to-day, when he will be entrusted with the formation of a ministry.

A Unionist Government.

It is not doubted that a joint ministry will be formed of liberal unionists and conservatives and that it will be called a unionist government. When it became known in the clubs that Lord Salisbury had been summoned by the queen it was said that he wouud not consent to form a ministry with the present house of commons and that he would recommend the queen to dissolve parliament.

Unionists Favor Dissolution.

The unionist rank and file advise a prompt appeal to the country. They believe that they will be able to obtain a majority of 80 in the next parliament. They are now very enthusiastic and sanguine.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Never in the history of medicine has the demand for one particular remedy for female diseases equalled that attained by Lydia E. Pinkhams Vegetable Compound and never in the history of Mrs. Pinkhams wonderful Compound has the demand for it been so great as it is today. From Maine to California, from the Gulf to the St. Lawrence, come the glad tidings of woman's suffering relieved by it; and thousands upon thousands of letters are pouring in from grateful women, saying that it WILL and does positively cure those painful

Ailments of Women.

It will cure the worst forms of female complaints, all ovarian troubles, inflammation and ulceration, falling and displacements of the womb, and consequent spinal weakness, and is peculiarly adapted to the change of life.

Every time it will cure

Backache.

It has cured more cases of leucorrhœa by removing the cause, than any remedy the world has ever known; it is almost infallible in such cases. It dissolves and expels tumors from the uterus in an early stage of development, and checks any tendency to cancerous humors.

STILL FOR ANNEXATION

Policy of the Hawaiian Government.

Special Session of the Little Republic's First Legislature—Efforts To Induce Immigration from America Favored—Weakness of the Government Denied.

Honolulu, June 16, via San Francisco, June 24.—The special session of the first legislature of the republic convened at noon of the 12th in the former Throne room. A large assemblage was present. The only uniforms seen were those of United States naval officers. There was a total absence of parade.

Friendly Relation with All.

President Dole delivered an address of 15 minutes. He stated that the republic of Hawaii had been recognized by all the principal nations with whom relations were friendly. Internal affairs had been in an orderly and prosperous condition except the January insurrection, which had been suppressed without serious difficulty.

Annexation Still the Policy.

The outlay, including expenses of the military court, had been over $90,000, paid from current funds. Annexation to the United States continued to be the policy of the government and would be earnestly sought for. A liberal policy was recommended in administering the public lands, so as to facilitate the acquirement of permanent holdings by industrious persons of small means. The crown lands should be managed to the same end. A bill would be submitted elaborating such a land policy.

To Induce Immigration.

Special reference should be paid to inducing immigration of desirable American and other white settlers. Asiatic immigration was depreciated. Cable communication must be secured. Franchises and subsidies had been promised, but the time had come for the government activity to initiate the matter. A bill would be submitted.

Government Not Tottering.

Those reports were totally without foundation which were sent from San Francisco May 16, that the government was tottering and Thurston planning to restore the monarchy under Kaiulani. The whole thing was a canard. The steamer Lehua cruised for three weeks but heard of no filibusterers and gave up the search.

SEWED UP A BULL'S EYES.

Shocking Case of Inhumanity at Otisco, N. Y.

Syracuse, N. Y., June 24.—Special officer Casey, of the S. P. C. A., late Saturday afternoon, arrested Pries Parsons, an Otisco farmer, for a case of shocking and inhuman treatment of an unruly bull which persisted in knocking down fences. Parsons sewed up the eyelids of the unfortunate animal with two pieces of heavy wire sharpened at the points, which he inserted as a physician would a needle. After he had taken three or four stitches in each eyelid he twisted the ends of the wire together, and in this condition the bull was found, with his eyes terribly swollen and bleeding. The justice of the peace at South Onondaga let Parsons off with a paltry fine of $10.

AGROUND IN THE KIEL CANAL.

The Augusta Victoria Towed Off by a German War Ship.

Hamburg, June 24.—The Hamburg-American line steamer Augusta Victoria ran aground yesterday in the Kaiser Wilhelm I. canal near the 29-kilometre stone. The German warship Seadler towed her off and took her to a siding, where she will remain until the channel is dredged to a depth sufficient to allow her to continue her passage. Her grounding detained the steamers Rugia and Rhaetia of the same line, but these passed when the Augusta Victoria was towed into the siding.

RECEIVED BY DENMARK'S KING

Sir John Pender, Ambassador Bayard and Others Visit Him.

Copenhagen, June 24.—The king yesterday afternoon gave an audience in Bernstorff palace to a number of the guests of Sir John Pender who accompanied him on the steamer Tentallon Castle to Kiel and subsequently came to this city. Among those received were Mr. Bayard, the American ambassador to Great Britain, field marshal Lord Wolseley and Viscount Peel, ex-speaker of the British house of commons.

Hail Stones at Kingston.

Kingston, N. Y., June 24.—This city was visited by a violent rain and hail storm early yesterday afternoon, and a brilliant electrical display, lasting about thirty minutes. Many of the stones were flat, resembling a macaroon in shape and size. Much damage to corn, cabbage and other tender young crops was caused.

Hail Storm in New Jersey.

New York, June 24.—The thunder shower that passed over New Jersey yesterday afternoon developed into a severe hail storm in the vicinity of Croton. Growing crops were damaged and whole fields of farm and market products were ruined. Many window glasses were broken.

Refused To Send the Message.

London, June 24.—The Daily Telegraph publishes a dispatch from Shanghai stating that the American consul there wished to telegraph to Cheng Tu asking news regarding the American missions, but the officials refused to transmit his message.

Trenton's Population

Trenton, N. J., June 24.—The state census enumerators have completed the census taken of Trenton. It shows a total of 62,568 as against 47,458 in 1890, a gain of 5,110 in the five years.

Lost His Life for a Watermelon.

Jacksonville, Fla., June 24.—Will Griffin, a 9-year-old negro, last evening fell into the river while trying to secure a floating watermelon and was drowned.

Will Dine on Royal Sovereign.

Kiel, June 24.—Emperor William will to-day dine on board the Royal Sovereign, the flagship of the British squadron here.

COXEY RENEGADE HIES FORTH

Browne, With His Bride and Twenty-Five Cents, Moves.

Massillon, O., June 24.—Bridegroom Browne, according to his latest nomination, is proceeding to Washington by easy stages where he expects to be the central figure in the reunion of the pining commonweal. The necessity for proceeding by "easy stages" is plain, in view of the fact that he was obliged to borrow 25 cents to get as far as Canton. A complacent probate judge provided him with the marrige license for which no fee was paid, and an easy-going justice tied the knot on the same terms.

The Bride's Trousseau.

The bride, nee Coxey, travels from town to town in street attire, with her bridal outfit in a carpet bag. This trousseau was secured by Browne through an obliging acquaintance and consists of a gown of mull, a cheap white veil and a pair of white shoes, all of which cost exactly $4.82. Browne's programme is to deliver daily speeches while his wife sells "reform literature." He has dropped Coxey's bills and after devoting a year to proclaiming them inspired from on high now ridicules them.

THREATENED TO RESCUE HIM.

Plans of Condemned Murderer Wallace's Friends Balked.

Fort Scott, Kans., June 24.—The squad of deputy United States marshals who were in attendance upon the federal court in this city Saturday averted an attack upon the jail early yesterday morning by secretly removing Jerry Wallace, one of the prisoners who was sentenced by Judge Williams to be hanged September 27. Shortly after Wallace was sentenced and remanded about twenty of his friends from his home in the Indian territory, Seneca nation, formed a plan to liberate the condemned man by breaking down the jail doors. He was hurried away in a carriage and taken to the Leavenworth penitentiary. Wallace killed his father-in-law, Alex Seane, who was an Indian.

MILITARY PRISONERS ESCAPE.

Two Men Confined on Governor's Island Get Away.

New York, June 24.—Two inmates of the military prison on Governor's island who were serving out sentences for desertion escaped from there Saturday, and are still at large. One was a private named Ketchum and the other an artilleryman named Thaoer. Ketchum was serving a two-years' sentence and Thaoer one of eighteen months for desertion. Investigation proved that the men had possessed themselves of a wrench and succeeded in removing the bolt from the grating overhead. They then climbed out through the opening thus made and made their way down to the ferry landing, where they stole the life boat of the launch Hamilton and escaped to Brooklyn.

DINNER TO CARDINAL GIBBONS

Many Distinguished Personages Present at the American College.

Rome, June 24.—A splendid dinner was given last evening at the American college here in honor of Cardinal Gibbons. Sixty covers were laid. Among those present were Cardinal Vannutelli, Bishop of Frascati, prefect of the congregation of the index expurgatorius; Cardinal Aloisi-Masella, prefect of congregation of Sacred Rites; Cardinal Galimberti, prefect of the archives of the holy see, and many Italian and foreign notables.

He Died for Love.

Norfolk, Va., June 24.—Charles M. Finch, who came to Norfolk from Saginaw, Mich., committed suicide by taking morphine Saturday night. He is a young man 25 years old and had been in Norfolk only a few days. His parents reside in New York state and are wealthy. It is said that a love affair in Michigan was the cause.

Explosion of San Francisco's Launch

Washington, June 24.—Admiral Kirkland last night sent a second cablegram to Secretary Herbert regarding the explosion of the launch of the San Francisco at the Kiel celebration Friday. It did not give the names of the injured, but stated that none of them was seriously hurt and that all were on duty again.

Matthey Reaches Chicago.

Cuicago, June 24.—Albert Matthey, the U. S. A. private who started from New York for Chicago on a bicycle June 10, bearing a message from General Miles to General Merritt, arrived in Chicago at 1:45 yesterday afternoon having made the trip in 13½ days. He is in excellent health.

GOSSIP FROM BERLIN

Illness of the Empress During the Kiel Fetes.

Successful Efforts To Balk Anarchists' Plans—French Admiral Accused of Gross Discourtesy The Emperor Greatly Irritated — Alleged Franco-Russian Alliance.

Berlin, June 24.—It has been generally supposed that the illness of the empress last week was due to her condition of coming maternity, but it was really caused by an attack of neuraglia, to which affliction she is at all times subject upon the slightest change in the weather or indulgence in the least excitement. As her majesty was about starting for Hamburg a furious attack of neuralgia set in and she was consequently prevented from going there.

Bore Her Sufferings Smilingly.

Her physicians advised her to abandon the idea of her going to Kiel, but a slight abatement of her pains combined with her eager desire to see the fetes led her to make the venture. The imperial circle at the admiralty ball saw a recurrence of her sufferings and saw them borne smilingly, but the emperor on Friday insisted upon her withdrawal from the remaining festivities and her retirement into absolute privacy. After taking a short rest at Kiel castle her majesty will return to Potsdam.

Anarchists Baffled.

The officials, especially the high officers of the police department, are congratulating themselves upon the fact that the presumed anarchist plot to spoil the fetes by the commission of outrages peculiar to the sect were baffled. According to current report the anarchists had arranged for a grand coup at the outset of the proceedings by blowing up the artificial island in the Alster river. Anonymous letters were received by the Berlin officials warning them that such an attempt was contemplated and would be made if the most rigorous precautions were not taken.

Berlin Newspapers on the Fetes.

The Berlin and other German newspapers are unceasing in their laudatory reference to the fetes and their praises of those who made them so completely successful. Some of these journals, however, cannot resist the temptation to attribute the government's desire to carry them out to success so complete to ulterior motives. The Freisinnig papers declare that the government designed the fetes upon so magnificent a scale in order that they might use the popular sentiment thus created in the interest of getting the reichstag to assent to a proposal for a considerable increase of the navy.

Alleged Russo-French Alliance.

The Russo-French convention, which the Paris newspapers allege has been concluded, is said to agree that if Germany should attack France Russia would sent 300,000 men at once to the German frontier. On the other hand if Austria or Germany should attack Russia France would intervene in a similar manner. The reports of the conclusion of such an agreement, however, are received in official circles here with incredulity.

English Cabinet Crisis.

The cabinet crisis in England and the formation of a new ministry in Vienna are the factors which hold the emperor to a policy of suspense. The Berlin government expect and hope for Lord Salisbury's return to power which would restore the practical adhesion of England to the triple alliance. In regard to the Austrian ministry, the German clerical leaders are of the opinion that it will not last more than three months, an opinion which finds almost general assent.

Body of a Charlemagne Warrior.

In the course of some building excavations in Stade, Hanover, Saturday the workmen unearthed the corpse of a warrior of the period of Charlemagne. The body, which is in a marvellous state of preservation, is that of a young and vigorous man, upwards of six feet in height, with blonde hair. It was partly covered by bronze armor. Antiquarians pronounce it a perfect specimen of a soldier of A. D. 789. They ascribe its remarkable preservation to the tanning qualities of the earth.

French Admiral Criticised.

The neglect of the French fleet to illuminate on Friday night, although the Russian vessels were lighted up, led to a great deal of adverse criticism, and Admiral Menard has consequently been moved to make an explanation of the circumstances to members of the press. The admiral's explanation in effect is that he did not expect to be called upon to take part in such a demonstration, and had no orders from his government to do so. The excuse the admiral offers has not had the effect to remove the bad impression created by what is generally regarded as a flagrant breach of etiquette on his part.

The Kaiser Irritated.

The Hamburger Nachrichten says that despite the assurance of the official press to the contrary the kaiser is really very much irritated at the offensive reticence of the French officers towards his own and the German officers' invitations. The Frenchmen showed plainly that their participation in the Kiel celebrations was an enforced act, and that France is still awaiting a fit moment to attack Germany.

Jealous of His Stepsons.

New York, June 24.—Andrew Schneider, a brewery man, shot his wife twice in the back with murderous intent yesterday. The woman is at Harlem hospital, where it is said she will recover, and Schneider is locked up. Jealousy on the part of Schneider against two stepsons was at the bottom of the shooting.

First To Navigate Kiel Canal.

New York, June 24.—The Hamburg-American steamer Palatia, which arrived Saturday from Hamburg, was the first of the big passenger vessels to navigate the Kaiser Wilhelm canal. She was sent through on June 5 to test the navigability of the new waterway.

Jumped Overboard at Sea.

New York, June 24.—One of the passengers of the steamer Veendam, a Russian, named Benjamin Cohen, jumped overboard soon after leaving Boulogne and was drowned.

The Board of Education should award the contract for supplying fuel for the public school buildings the coming year to a Plainfield dealer. To purchase the supply from an out-of-town firm would be a gross injustice to the coal merchants of this city.

The two extremes are constantly meeting. The New York State Legislature enacted a law giving the Negro more civil rights than he has ever enjoyed before in that State, while the Indians of Oklohoma territory have passed a law prohibiting the Negro to live among them and making it a crime to employ them.

The twenty-second annual report of the State Board of Agriculture has just been issued. F. E. Woodruff, in his report from Union county, makes the suggestion that every owner of a bicycle in the county pay an annual tax of $1, the money so derived being expended on the roads. This portion of the report is as follows:

The enormous strides the use of the bicycle has made in popular esteem is another outgrowth in large part, of the county-road system. No figures are at hand, but the number of bicycles owned in this county alone must be many thousands. The wheelmen have been among the most enthusiastic supporters of the sentiment for county roads, and although they have the use, almost the monopoly at times, of the roads, and the full protection of the law in their rights on the highway—for the bicycle is no longer regarded as a plaything, but by decision of the courts a vehicle, and entitled to the same privileges and right of way—it is believed that not one per cent. of the wheels are ever represented on the Assessors' books.

It is suggested that this large and increasing amount of personal property now not taxed should pay its share toward the support of the county, and that this could best be accomplished by a uniform assessment of say $1 per year for each bicycle, the money so collected to be expended for repairs to the county roads.

Certainly no fair-minded person could object to such a tax, and it would answer the question of how to reach this class of property, that is gradually assuming more and more importance.

NOT CUT OUT FOR AN ACROBAT.

So the Bear Dog Toby, Smart as He Was, Fell a Victim to His Zeal.

"I had a dog named Toby when I was living up in the Pennsylvania lumber woods," said George Reynolds, of the National Lumber Company. "He was a bear dog. Bears, as every one knows who ever lived among them, hate dogs beyond everything else, two legged or four legged, and will frequently give up a good chance of escape from a pursuing hunter just for the satisfaction of waiting for the dog that is yelping behind him and taking a fall out of him when he comes up, a fall that usually ends the dog's career, especially if it is a dog not especially trained to hunt bear.

"One day I was looking over a logging job I had contracted for, and discovered signs of bear along the creek. Next day Toby and I went out to see what we could do with the bear. We soon struck the trail and Toby located the bear in a small patch of laurels, from which he soon routed bruin. He brought the bear to bay in a little open space in a piece of chestnut timber. There was no necessity of the bear turning at bay but he evidently wanted to get a whack at Toby. I could have easily sent a bullet through the bear, but having the utmost confidence in Toby's smartness, and seeing that the bear was anxious to put his smartness against the dog's, I concluded to let them have the chance and to enjoy the sport of a few minutes' maneuvering tween the two.

"It was fun. Toby worried the already ugly old chap with tricks and quick movements until the bear was wild with rage. Do what he might he couldn't get a blow or a bite in on Toby, while Toby got a nip at the bear at almost every turn. This amusing dance lasted for ten minutes, and I felt so proud of my dog that I declared then and there that it would take a good deal more than a one hundred dollar bill to buy him.

"After sparring and rushing fruitlessly at the dog for ten minutes the bear put his back against a tree and breathed hard for at least a minute. Then he suddenly dropped to all fours and hurried to another tree a rod or so away. Toby followed, and, as the bear started to climb the tree, seized him by one of its hams.

"Although the dog must have set his teeth deep in the flesh, the bear did not stop on his way, but climbed on as if nothing was worrying him. The dog held on and was lifted from the ground as the bear climbed. The higher the bear went the tighter Toby appeared to hang on its rear, and presently he was swinging in the air about fifteen feet from the ground.

"The sight was so funny that I just tumbled on the ground and roared. The bear stopped when about fifteen feet up the trunk of the tree, clung there a moment, and then let go. He came down like a pile driver. When he struck at the bottom of the tree Toby was between him and the ground. There was a faint yelp and that was all.

"Three hundred pounds of bear had flattened forty pounds of dog out of all kind of shape. The catastrophe was so sudden and unexpected that before I could recover from the painful surprise it gave me the bear had disappeared in the laurels. There never was a smarter bear dog than Toby, but he wasn't cut out for an acrobat. There is where he made his mistake. There never was a smarter dog than Toby, nor was there ever a deader one when the bear got off of him."

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destored forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh cure. Send for circulars free.

POLICE ON THE WAR PATH.

City and Borough Officials After Boys in the Water.

Chief Marshal VanHorn and Special Marshal J. Goodwin went out yesterday morning on a hunting expedition and discovered two men in Hyde's grounds with a box of beer, but owing to their inability to learn where they got the beer they were unable to do anything.

They then went down by the brook and found J. Kerns, W. Keith and W. Drake in swimming without tights. They took the boys names and warned them if they were caught again they would be severely dealt with.

In the afternoon Chiefs Grant and Van Horn went out together, and discovered three boys in swimming without tights between Grant avenue and Evona. Their names were taken, and they were told to appear this morning before Judge Coddington. When they appeared the Judge suspended sentence, warning them not to repeat the act.

Their names were C. Covert, J. Lyons, and J. Muldoon.

The Russian Honeymoon.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:

A good deal of surprise has been expressed at the fact that the management of "The Russian Honeymoon" has rendered no account of the receipts and disbursements. This play was projected in the interest of the Relief Association, and most persons bought tickets in the belief that some of the money would be given to that charity. About $750 must have been received and nobody knows where it has gone. The Relief Association is politely informed that "there ain't going to be no core," and that the receipts have all gone in "expenses." It would seem that fair business dealing requires a proper statement of receipts and expenses, and in the latter the item "sundries" ought to be as small as possible.

A.

Silver Wedding Anniversary.

A pleasant surprise is most enjoyable, and so was the one given Mr. and Mrs. L. M. French, of Craig place, in honor of their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary, yesterday. Only the family, a few intimate neighbors and W. C. Benjamin, Frank Smith and Geo. DeVool, of New York, were present. A delightful afternoon and evening was enjoyed by all. A musical programme helped to pass part of the time away. Mr. and Mrs. French also received many beautiful gifts in remembrance of the day.

A Double Wedding.

Cupid killed two birds with one stone, figuratively speaking, last night, when in Bound Brook Elizabeth H. Parkinson was wedded to John Carl, and Josephine Kernall to Geo. Lloyd. The ceremonies were performed by Rev. J. B. Cleaver at his residence. Each couple stood up as bridesmaid and best man for the other. Both couples are residents of Plainfield.

Karl's Clover Root will purify your blood, clear your complexion, regulate your bowels and make your head clear as a bell; 25c, 50c and $1. Sold by all druggists.

THE TRIBUNE FRESH AIR FUND.

Children of New York Sent to Adjoining States for Recreation.

The Tribune Fresh Air Fund will, for its nineteenth season, be conducted substantially on the same lines as for years past. The Rev. Willard Parsons, who has been its manager from the beginning, will again be in charge, with a competent corps of assistants. The children will be gathered, as hitherto, from the needy quarters of the city, and sent to the country for two weeks each; some to the pleasant homes controlled and operated directly by the fund, and some to the hospitable houses of farmers and other residents of the country who are glad thus to do their share for the promotion of the work. Transportation will be afforded by the various railroad and steamboat lines at special rates, and all other expenses will be kept down to the lowest point consistent with the comfort, safety and general welfare of the children; the idea being to make the money contributed by the public give as many children as possible an outing in the country. And every cent contributed will be devoted to that sole purpose. None will be used to pay salaries, or office rent, or any such thing, all those matters being otherwise provided for. For several years a generous gentleman, whose name is at his own request withheld, has furnished means for conveying thousands to the seaside or elsewhere on one-day excursions. This beautiful charity will again be a feature of the work this year.

In 1877 sixty children were sent to the country at a cost per capita of $3.12. Last year ten thousand children had a two weeks outing, and more than twenty-eight thousand went out for one day. The expense was $2.24 each.

The Work of a Blind Novelist.

Miss Alice King, the popular novelist, who was wholly blind from the age of seven, became a fearless horsewoman, and would gallop over hills and along rough moorland paths that would have been impassable to any but the most proficient rider. Miss King, who was educated at home, gained more or less proficiency in seven languages besides her own, namely, French, German, Italian, Spanish, Latin, Greek and Hebrew. All her literary work was done with a typewriter, and with its aid she could write as quickly as a person with sight ordinarily writes with a pen. All Miss King's time not taken up with these literary labors was occupied in teaching and influencing the workingmen and lads in her father's parish; and by her own efforts this unwearying, blind girl established for them a reading-room, cricket club, band and other institutions.—London News.

An 85 year old widow of Livermore, Me., recently finished weaving a carpet 23 yards long, and has a contract to weave two more of like size.

While at Peekskill, N. Y., Mr. J. A. Scriven, a prominent manufacturer of New York City, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Such good results were obtained from its use that he sent back to the druggist from whom he had obtained it for two more bottles of the same remedy. When you have a cough or cold give this preparation a trial and like Mr. Scriven you will want it when again in need of such a medicine. It is a remedy of great worth and merit. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

YOUR SCALP!

During the heats of summer does it become irritated and invite an occasional friendly scratch? To wash it is well, but not too often, lest your hair become "brash" and stiff. But treat it twice or thrice a week with our Petroleum Hair Tonic—a little rubbed in with your finger ends, and you will find the feeling of comfort and coolness truly delightful. Positively nothing equals it as a balm for the woes of your scalp. Sprinkler bottles 50c. Only at —The U. S. Grant Club, of North Plainfield, will meet this evening at nine o'clock in the basement of the public school. A full attendance is desired.

REYNOLDS'S PHARMACY, PARK AND NORTH AVENUES.

While in Topeka last March, E. T. Barber, a prominent newspaper man of La Cygne, Kansas, was taken with cholera morbus very severely. The night clerk at the hotel where he was stopping happened to have a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and gave him three doses which relieved him and he thinks saved his life. Every family should keep this remedy in their home at all times. No one can tell how soon it may be needed. It costs but a trifle and may be the means of saving much suffering and perhaps the life of some member of the family. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

Sometime ago I was troubled with an attack of rheumatism. I used Chamberlain's Pain Balm and was completely cured. I have since advised many of my friends and customers to try the remedy and all speak highly of it. Simon Goldbaum, San Luis Rey, Cal. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

I have two little grandchildren who are teething this hot summer weather and are troubled with bowel complaint. I give them Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and it acts like a charm. I earnestly recommend it for children with bowel troubles. I was myself taken with a severe attack of bloody flux, with cramps and pains in my stomach, one-third of a bottle of this remedy cured me. Within twenty-four hours I was out of bed and doing my housework. Mrs. W. L. Dunagan, Bonaqua, Hickman Co., Tenn. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves., T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

CHAPTER I.—THE ROBBER OF THE LEAD HILLS.

It was at the change house of the "King's Rest," at the entering in of the pass which leads to the lead mines of the Lowther Hills, that Sir James Standsfield and I foregathered. I had been down in the shire of Dumfries, where in the parish of Morton there was word of a vacancy, owing to the ill-doing of the incumbent. So having some influence with Drumlanrig, who had the chief say in the matter, through my mother having been a servant with the laird, I journeyed down with water to push my claims. In the days of my youth, it is true that I had companied with the hill folk, but long ago I discerned the error of my ways, desiring to be married and seeing no prospect of it, save in taking of the Test, and afterward, by means of Drumlanrig and the Bishop of Galloway, getting a parish in which to settle down.

"And how go the curates?" cried Sir James, so soon as he saw me, for he was mostly a jovial man, and had now a glass of strong waters before him. "How go the curates in Dumfries? Have they all been rabbled since the King's Popish proclamation, or have they yet learned to read without their finger at the line?"

"There is one of them out of place, and that in the good parish of Morton," said I, "which it is my hope to obtain by the good will of Drumlanrig."

"Ye are some kin to him, I have heard say," said Sir James, pawkily.

"No kin whatsoever," I made answer, with some heat, "save that my mother was sometime maid to the old Lady Drumlanrig."

"And left of her own accord to be married to Gibby Bell, the Muirkirk carrier—well do I mind of it," said Sir James.

So we had bite of bread and stoup of ale together, and were merry in sober and sedate fashion, speaking chiefly of the evil state of the country, of the exactions of the King's men which waxed worse and worse, and the frenzy of the fanatical party that threatened to turn the world upside down if they had their will.

Presently the lass of the change-house, a comely one and plump, to whom, for my shaming, Sir James slandered me, telling her that I was a merry curate and gamesome, opened the door, and came ben to us where we sat at table.

"Gentlemen," she said, speaking very well and clearly for a country lass, "bear with me if I say that it behooves you to set out ere it be dusk, for there are ill folk about, and you might come to an injury."

"Which," said Sir James, "you wish not to so sportive a lad as this my friend here, and one that hath a beard to his face wherein there is yet not a hair of gray."

"Indeed," said she, turning on him with spirit, "I see nought the matter with the young man's beard, nor yet seems he so merry as those whose beards are grayer, and therefore might have more sense."

"And well said for a brave lass!" cried Sir James. "The maid had me on the hip that time and has thrown me fairly. Here is a silver shilling for you, Marget. What hast thou to say to that?"

"AND WELL SAID FOR A BRAVE LASS!"

The plump, well-shapen maid-servant took the silver piece between her teeth and bit upon it sedately.

"I say that your silver is better than your wit (which God mend!), Sir James," she said, and looked at me as she said it, in a way that was not becoming to reply to. So that instead, I looked with modesty upon the ground.

Then with that and no more we mounted and rode away, both of us being well horsed, Sir James riding upon a hackney of gray, and I on a roan, which Drumlanrig had given me from a Whig's farmhouse—one of the Welshes of Scaur as I learned afterward, when they came upon me to make me restore it.

It was by a solitary pass that broke a way through the hills, where the waters run up into the heart of the blind "Hopes," that Sir James and I were riding slowly, talking peaceably, and taking solid pleasure in our conversation. For Sir James had ever a leaning to the things of the Kirk, and, if his star had risen in the right season, he had made none so ill a minister. So we discoursed of foreknowledge, of the right of the civil magistrate, and of the Urim and Thummim, which are all vexed and difficult questions; so that it was great pleasure to me to dispute with one so learned and discreet as Sir James, though he was, to my thinking, ever a little over-Whiggish in his beliefs, and, as I knew, had no great opinion of those ministers who had taken the Test.

We went thus daintily and cosily along, pacing upon our ambling palfreys, when all of a sudden—"Crack!" There went off a shot behind us, and Sir James' horse set its head down and spread its heels in the air.

I looked over my shoulder and saw a tall young man, riding upon a heavy cart-horse as it had been fresh from a plow tail, and with a pair of pistols ready bended in his hand, pursuing after us with a dark and fearsome countenance. At this I had very great fear, for I had heard the stories of the ill-folk that companied about the roots of the hills, and waited the passage of those that were honest.

I looked to see Sir James face about and draw weapon of war upon the assailant. But he was already setting spurs to his horse and dashing headlong down the ravine, making speed, and not steel, keep his head. So, being by my cloth no man of war, and with no weapon but a riding-whip, I put my horse to his stride and drew ahead of the young man upon the heavy work horse.

But the clappering of the broad hoofs pounding behind me sounded so perilous and made me so ill at ease, that when we passed a little runnel of water, with fern and bracken thereabout, I thought it fitter that I should cast myself from my horse and take refuge under the green covert. This I did with ease, for the beast I rode was a little roan of Galloway; and I being long of the limb, let myself off without peril and lay safely, darned among the undergrowth. For the safest course and the most peaceable was ever the sweetest to me.

I peeped out and saw the young man look about him to see if he could spy me, and right glad was I that he could not. But I observed him pursue Sir James with more deadly fury, and spur his horse to its speed. Nevertheless Sir James, on his light roan, had easily the heels of him. And at this I saw the young man stop his beast, and with his elbow for a rest take a deliberate aim at the back of my companion At the noise of the pistol I closed my eyes. For so tender was my heart that I dared not look out lest I should see the good man, my companion, dead upon the heather. But presently I heard the young man return, cursing and swearing, and saying, "The devil rive him! Curse on the false aim, the deceitful bullets, the evil fate——"

"GET UP, ZUTPHEN," SAID HE.

Whereat I judged that his cruel intent could not have sped well. So by misadventure I raised my head and looked about me. And lo! there standing upon the heather within a dozen yards of me was the robber with his reeking pistol yet in his hand.

"Ho! ho! What have we here?" cried he, coming up to me with his pistol upon his arm.

"A poor son of the church," I told him, "that had not the worth of a groat about him, and nought of value save his poor prayers, which if he were spared would be put up for the man that prolonged his life."

"Poor prayers, indeed," said the young man of the dark and fierce countenance, "craven prayers are ever poor prayers. Rise up, man, and take your sheltie. I sought the lion's life, not that of the ass which brays at his tail."

So saying, he mounted again on his great Flanders mare

"Get up, Zutphen," said he, "had it not been for these great loundering pile-driving feet of yours, I had been howking a hole for both the lion and the ass. Well for you, craven dog, that the gray carried your master well, or I had been obliged to put you in the ditch with him, to keep your tongue from telling tales—which is all that it is good for."

So the ribald young man rode away, and I gat me up and went to catch my roan—a work of time and much difficulty. And as I pursued my beast over the moss hags, I saw the young man rising and falling upon his sodden and paceless horse. And I blessed the beast, because his manifest defects had saved two honest men's lives that day.

Nevertheless, I came not up with Sir James all the way to my own house in Edinburgh, so well had his good gray carried him.

The morning of the next day I repaired to the lodging of Sir James Standsfield, which was in a close at the head of the West Bow, where there are many godly people dwelling. Though some of them, alas! for the sake of the times and the favor of the magistrates, make a pretense of ungodliness, saying "Devil take" and "Zounds!" loudly in the street when a notable person passes by. For to use oaths is counted the mark of a well-affected person by the government of this time.

When I entered I found the worthy knight with his head fallen upon his hand, and a little red book before him of a square shape and well bound in leather. His tears were falling upon the pages, as I judged, to the hurt of the printing. I was for drawing back, for I thought that I had found my friend at his devotions. But his tears inclined me to stay that I might comfort him with the apples of pertinent advice.

"A good morning!" I bade him, speaking softly and putting my hand on his shoulders.

But he never gave me a word of answer, but to sigh and groan and read upon his book

"Be of good heart, Sir James," I said to him, "for I am going to the town's authority and the Privy Council, with whom I am in good odor; and, with their help, we shall soon have yon knave by the heels. I saw him so close, and held such discourse with him, that I can description to a hair."

But Sir James was no ways encouraged. "For," said he, "it is all worse than useless; my shame sits heavy on me. I am not a man to make complaint, but yesterday I was hurt to death in my tenderest part."

"Why," said I, "the knave surely shot not true. You are not wounded. You rode away briskly enough."

"Yea," said Sir James, "wounded am I to the heart; for he that shot at me with intent to take my life was my eldest son Philip."

At hearing of which, the life as it were went from me, and I had e'en to sit down on a settle to keep from falling. For then, indeed, I knew that my friend, who seemed so mirthful and full of good cheer, had all the time a canker-worm gnawing at his heart.

At last he lifted his head, and I saw that the book he read in was Burtoun's "Melancholy," the little square book of the earliest imprint, which so many count next to their Bibles.

Yet I judged it to be mightily unsuitable reading for one so afflicted as he; therefore, as the right of mine office was, I directed him to lay it aside and turn to suitable passages of Scripture. And in especial I counseled him to meditate upon the mystical meaning of certain verses in the Canticles and in Ezekiel, upon which I had preached with great comfort to myself for one year in my last pastoral charge. I was proceeding to expound some of these to him, when he broke out upon me in a way that was certainly not well-becoming in a man of his years and profession.

"Tut, tut!" he said; "ye are over much given, Mr. Bell, to speak upon matters ye have small understanding of. I find more egg-meat in a page of honest Burton than in all the songs of King Solomon—who to my mind might have employed himself better!"

"You speak as a carnal man, and not as an elder, Sir James," I said to him, for I was ever firm with him; 'know you not that these things are to be interpreted after the spirit?"

"Lode ye, Master Bell, till ye ken something about it," said he; "till ye are a man with a family and no comfort in it—your home a perpetual brawl, your sons either dogs that bite or curs that run; your wife perpetually peevish of countenance, acid of tongue—will you then bide it all meekly as a stranger tyke that claps its tail between legs and scurries down the public way when other messans yelp. I ken you ministers, specially the younger sort of you that have rolled 'Tests and Indulgences,' like sweet morsels, under your tongues; ye would take it upon you to prescribe for death-wounds from your experience of the aching of your own little fingers."

Now during my life, which after all has been but forty years, I have found great benefit in knowing when to forbear speech, and when to joke aside and let the angry jaw go by. This I did at this present, knowing that like the scent of rose-water and balm after a shower in June, so the pleasant countenance of my friend would again be turned upon me.

And so it proved, for in a little he turned his eyes upon me, having shut his book.

"I pray you pardon me, good friend," he said; "my black choler hath infected my heart, and my ill-tempers break out most readily on them that I love the most."

With that he put forth his hand to me, and, being of an easy heart, I took it in mine and was affected to tears. So our friendship was made up of new, and that never to be broken up any more. He was silent a long season, but at the last he found his speech.

"Mr. Bell," said he, "I will be plain with you, for plainness is best among friends. I have too long let my heart know its own bitterness. I will no longer make a stranger of you. It is not my debts, as many think, that trouble me; for since these Englishmen, cloth-weavers and merchants, Umphray Spurway and his folk, have come out of Yorkshire, they have put me in a good and easy way of life. It is that I have no comfort in my family. My wife loves me not, but cries out upon me continually that I am hard to the children. My eldest you have seen pursue me to the death; and now my younger, to whom I had conveyed my estate, having disherished my son Philip, is become even as the other. And this is the more bitter to me, because that my heart and my hope were set upon him. Now his brother, who is the most debauched man in four counties, has so infected John that of late he has ofttimes come home in drink even as the other. Tell me, was ever man so driven by his own?"

Then I counseled him to try if there was not yet some hope of winning his heart.

"I will come with you," I said to encourage him, "and it may be that his heart may be moved by my advice, especially after the miscarriage of his evil enterprise upon the Lead Hills."

But Sir James shook his head.

"The lad is too bitterly joined to his idols. Once he took service in the Scots regiment abroad, and I thought that would settle him; but he was confined in prison, and I got him delivered by my influence with our ambassador at the Hague. Then he was condemned to death at Treves, and I provided money wherewith he bribed his jailers and so made his escape. I have received him into mine own house since his return. And after all my care and tenderness it is come to that pass of it, that when I go to my own fireside, I know not whether I shall get my supper or a musket shot in my wame!"

"Providence may yet soften his heart," I said, though indeed I saw no great prospect.

"Ay" replied Sir James, "it may. I thought that a good wife might do that even better; but since I got Philip, my son, married to a decent lass, I have just another mouth to feed, and it makes no difference to his debaucheries."

"Nevertheless," said I, "I will come to New Milns with you. Who knows but that we may be able to do something?"

"Well said, minister," said Sir James; "ye were not greatly bauld on the muir, but, let me tell you, ye were a deal safer with a good sheltie under your hip and the heather afore ye than sleeping in your naked bed within my house of the New Milns."

"I have no fear in the path of duty," said I.

FIGHTING JOE HOOKER.

The Story of Lookout Mountain and the Battle Above the Clouds.

Joe Hooker finished the course at West Point creditably in 1837, graduating well advanced in his class, and he afterward served as adjutant in West Point and in the adjutant general's department in the army until the breaking out of the Mexican war.

To the ambitious Hooker the opportunity was welcome. He gained great distinction during the war and rose from a lieutenant to be brevetted lieutenant colonel of the regular army. After the war he remained in the army only as long as the service in Mexico and on the Pacific Coast gave any promise of activity. He gave up his commission finally and bought a ranch near San Francisco, but in 1861, on the breaking out of the rebellion, he hastened to Washington and offered his services.

Owing to some trouble General Scott refused him a commission. Hooker lingered at Washington for some time and was on the point of returning to California when the event happened which shaped his history. Before leaving he decided to call upon the President, and he was introduced by General Cadwallader as Captain Hooker.

Lincoln received him in his usual kind way, but was about to dismiss him with a civil phrase when he was surprised by Hooker's determined tone into hearing his story.

"Mr. President," he began, "my friend makes a mistake. I am not Captain Hooker, but was once Lieut. Col. Hooker, of the regular army. Before returning home I was anxious to pay my respects to you, and I want to say one word more," he added, seeing the President was about to speak. "I was at Bull Run the other day, Mr. President, and it is no vanity in me to say that I am a damned sight better general than you had at that field."

The boast was made in not a bragging tone, but with the resolution of a firm, confident man, and the President seized and shook Hooker's hand and begged him to sit down.

Hooker was soon after made brigadier general. A great deal could be said of Hooker's war career, from the Peninsula campaign to his crowning success, the battle above the clouds, on Lookout Mountain, and aside from the disaster at Chancellorsville, it would be a record of almost continual success.

On the night before the general attack Hooker was ordered by Grant to make a detour toward Lookout Mountain, where the Confederates were intrenched in force.

Hooker got there all right, and when morning broke over the mist of the valley Grant and his staff were surprised to hear the sounds of battle on the top of Lookout Mountain, which was hidden by the clouds. They could not tell how the fighting was going and watched with anxious heads for some sign. After several hours the clouds broke apart and the stars and stripes were seen flying from the loftiest peak.

This unlooked for victory gave the Union army such confidence that General Grant decided to move the army up the mountain against Bragg by noon of that day, and before night he had won one of the greatest victories in his career.

THE LOST COLLIE CAME BACK.

Kirke's Clever Dog Brought a Tramp Home to Share His Bed.

James R. Gilmore (Edmund Kirke), the writer, owns a handsome collie dog, Timothy, who is even more intelligent than the average of his species. Last Friday his owner had occasion to go to Seventy-second street, and the dog trotted along behind a Fourth avenue car. On the return trip Timothy had disappeared. At 9 o'clock that night, just as Mr. Gilmore was about to go to the newspaper offices with an advertisement, there was a scratching at the front door of his house on Twenty-ninth street, near Fourth avenue, a melancholy bark and Timothy. Beside him was as woebegone a looking animal of the Scotch terrier persuasion as one can imagine. Timothy had somehow found his way home and brought with him the waif. Both were gladly taken in, and the stranger, who, when fed and washed, proved to be a well bred dog, was adopted.—New York Press.

A Happy Pair.

VASSAR PIE.

Give me a spoon of oleo, ma,
And the sodium alkali,
For I'm going to make a pie, mamma,
I'm going to make a pie.
For John will be hungry and tired, ma,
And his tissues will decompose;
So give me a gramme of phosphate,
And the carbon and cellulose.

Now give me a chunk of caseine, ma,
To shorten the thermic fat;
And hand me the oxygen bottle, ma,
And look at the thermostat;
And if the electric oven's cold
Just turn it on half an ohm,
For I want to have supper ready
As soon as John comes home.

Now pass me the neutral dope, mamma,
And rotate the mixing machine,
But give me the sterilized water first
And the oleomargarine,
And the phosphate, too, for now I think,
The new typewriter's quit,
And John will need more phosphate food
To help his brain a bit.

A YOUNG DREADFUL.

His Mother Blushed When He Proposed She Salute a Conductor.

The passengers on a Brooklyn trolley car were greatly interested the other afternoon in the actions of a three-year-old boy who was doing the gallant for his young and good looking mother. As soon as the two were seated in the car the boy asked for the money, so that he could pay the conductor, and received it. Much to his chagrin, the conductor came along while he was busy looking out of the window, and, rather than disturb him, the mother paid herself. On the next tour of the conductor he was hailed by the boy and received the nickel. The conductor, much to the boy's surprise, handed it back, and, thinking that he had been privileged, the young fellow was immensely pleased.

The conductor blushed as the little fellow said: "Oh, mamma, ain't he nice?" Then, to the sudden surprise of all, he stood up and, catching his mother by the hand, said: "Mamma, do kiss the nice man. Please do; he's so nice."

The conductor hurried out of the car and seemed reluctant to enter again, while the mother's blushes were fairly burning.

Alas! We Do Not Interest Them.

"For some reason or other," remarks a writer in one of the London weeklies, "the English people have never developed any marked and permanent curiosity about the affairs of the United States. Upon special occasions, of course, as when a President is elected or shot, or the price of petroleum is forced up to 10 shillings a barrel, a sharp spasm of interest in American news seizes upon us. But this soon lapses, and we grow content with a minimum of telegraphic intelligence from Washington and New York, and, as for the American newspapers, when they arrive we scarcely take the trouble to glance at their contents. American visitors to these shores continually express amazement and chagrin at the discovery of this fact. They read so assiduously each day whole columns about us in their own enterprising journals at home that there seems something unnatural and even sinister in our failure to reciprocate their cousinly interest. When they say so we do not defend ourselves. How, indeed, should we! We shuffle and murmur something about preoccupation for the passing moment in a Macedonian intrigue, and turn the conversation into some more comfortable channel. But the fact remains, and we accept it."

How Electricity Kills.

The very interesting and valuable experiments which Dr. A. M. Bleile, of the Ohio State University, has been making with regard to the effects of electric shocks upon animal organism have reached a stage where a working theory can be predicated upon the results obtained. This theory is a complete departure from that most commonly accepted. It has been supposed that the cause of death in case of electrocution was the breaking down of the tissues.

But the elaborate experiments which Prof. Bleile has made during the last month or more leave no doubt in his mind that death results from a very different cause. He has found by experimenting with a large number of dogs that an electric shock of sufficient intensity to cause death results in a contraction of the arteries so that they refuse to perform their functions. This throws the blood from the veins upon the heart, and virtually drowns the operation of that organ.—Cleveland Leader.

WITH MONEY

Any one can rent a store, put up signs, blow trumpets, beat drums and babble, but it takes more than money to do the kind of storekeeping that is serviceable to a community. Money does not put people in possession of principle, artistic taste, genius of organization and the everlasting keeping-at-the-thing-to-have-it-right because nothing else than the right will do. Without a spoken word, this store will stand as an illustrated essay on commerce, good taste and comfortable shopping.

DON'T

You believe our advertisements are true? Sometimes we think you do, and then again we don't; because when we advertise a good thing (and we never advertise anything else) you may come in a week after the goods are advertised, ask for them and they are all sold and then you doubt, but we can't blame you, there is so much fibbing in advertisements. Not ours, like the man we once knew, but that's too long a story and this is more

POLITICS IN UNION COUNTY.

A Lively Contest Between Kean and Voorhees.

The Newark Daily Advertiser yesterday published the following political gossip from Elizabeth:

There will be more politics in Union County this year, than ever before in its history, and Union has been a historic battlefield. While much of the trouble that the Union statesmen have on their hands is purely local, it all hinges on the figure that the county will cut in the Gubernatorial fight. Two "favorite sons" are prominent factors in the contest for the Republican nomination for Governor. They are John Kean, Jr., who was the standard-bearer three years ago, but was defeated by a largely reduced Democratic majority, and Senator Foster M. Voorhees, the present chairman of the Senate Investigating Committee.

Both men are close friends, and the active Republicans of the county are staying up nights trying to evade being committed to one side or the other. It is a happy, neighborly fight up to date, but everybody realizes that the campaign is young. On this brotherly fight, however, seems to depend the general drift of county politics.

Next to Governor, Union is interested in the Lay Judge fight now in the Appellate Court. Speaker Joseph Cross is thinking seriously of taking the nomination. The leading Republicans say that he can have it, but the Speaker is a very conservative man, and he will not come out boldly and say that he is a candidate, because he prefers to watch and see just how the cat is going to jump. He He does not anticipate that the Voorhees-Kean contest is going to involve the Republicans of Union county in a family row, but the Speaker has seen some queer things in politics, and prefers to wait.

The Democrats are also in a doubtful mood. Prosecutor Fred Marsh would not mind changing his place in the County Court House and sit on a bench, rather than standing in front of it making motions. The young Prosecutor is quoted by some of his near friends as thinking that if his old friend and companion, Foster M. Voorhees, is nominated, that Union won't cut much of a figure with Democratic majorities, when the returns come in, so he will continue to prosecute at the same old place. If Voorhees "don't go" with the convention then Marsh thinks a hip and a hurrah will carry the Democrats through and the Law Judge with it.

On the other hand, there are some Democrats not so speculative as the ex-Senator and they think that no local conditions should influence a candidate and that a man should take the nomination very much like a man takes a wife—"for better or worse,"—and the present Law Judge, Thomas F. McCormick, wants the renomination, and is willing to fight hard for election.

There is the same uncertainty about the Assembly delegation. It is said that both Codding and Burger would take a renomination, and that Codding would like to be the leader of the House, should he be returned, but the same "if and if" stands in the way of making any definite statement in this direction.

Little Merry Makers.

Little Arthur Reed, son of Charles A. Reed, of Myrtle avenue, yesterday afternoon enjoyed himself when his mother gave him a birthday party. His companions in merriment were his sister, Madeline Reed, and Leslie Hallock, Ralph Hallock, George Evans, Douglass Waring, Reginald Roome, Willie Roome, Howard Roome, Clarence Roome, William Barlow, and Joe Osgood. Most of the time was spent in playing games, and later in the afternoon Mrs. Reed served dainty refreshments.

To Go Into Business in Westfield.

Old People.

Old people who require medicine to regulate the bowels and kidneys will find the true remedy in Electric Bitters. This medicine does not stimulate and contains no whiskey nor other intoxicant, but acts as a tonic and alterative. It acts mildly on the stomach and bowels, adding strength and giving tone to the organs, thereby aiding nature in the performance of the functions. Electric Bitters is an excellent appetizer and aids digestion. Old people find it just exactly what they need. Price 50c a bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

ALL RIGHT FOR THE FOURTH.

The General Committee Find But Little Business to Transact.

There was very little business transacted at the meeting of the Fourth of July committee last evening in Red Men's Hall. The attendance was good and there were no signs of less interest and enthusiasm in the coming celebration. In fact, there was nothing special on the docket except the reports of the several committees to the executive committee, and they all reported progress.

The subscription committee stated that about $1,100 had thus far been realized.

A communication from Excelsior Hook and Ladder Company, of Scotch Plains, stated it would be impossible for the members to parade that day, but they would send the old hand engine to Plainfield to be used in the parade.

The motion made at the last meeting that the church bells be rung at midnight, sunrise, noon and sunset, was reconsidered last evening and after due consideration the ringing of the bells at midnight was omitted. The Daily Press unintentionally stated last week that J. W. A. Bauersachs was not in favor of ringing the bells, whereas he is heartily in favor of the idea.

The meeting then adjourned, and the several committees met and transacted all necessary business.

The executive committee decided to erect an arch over Park avenue at Front street, the same to cost $100. They also gave out the contract for fireworks to Stephen Dehart, of New Brunswick, and $100 was added to the proposed appropriation, which makes $600 in all.

Drowned While Picking Lilies.

Ernest Polly was drowned yesterday while picking water lilies on a pond near Jamesburg. He was in a boat with two companions—Peter Johnson and William Bogert—when the accident happened. He was reaching out for a lily, when he lost his balance and fell into the water. He was unable to swim, and the two companions were so frightened that they were not able to offer any assistance. George Pearce, a colored man, saw the boy's hat floating on the water, and, after searching about half an hour, brought up the body.

From the Seat of Learning.

New Haven has long been famous as a seat of learning, and a graduate from Yale is looked upon as prepared for life's battles. Yesterday among the graduates from the Sheffield Scintific School, at Yale, was Clarence Peck, of Myrtle avenue, who after completing his three-year course with honor, was given his diploma. Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Peck, his parents, went to New Haven to attend the commencement exercises, and all three are expected home today.

Water for the Thirsty.

The thirsty public who have occasion to pass by East Fourth street, near Watchung avenue, will find a choice supply of cool water, and they can thank Charles H. Hand for having the well driven, William J. Nelson for doing the work, Fred Masker, the plumber, for placing a trough there for the convenience of horses, and J. P. Laire for furnishing the tin cups and chains. It will prove a great blessing to those who travel in that neighborhood.

Many Plainfielders Will Go.

The festival to be held at Union Village Methodist church grounds on Wednesday evening of this week will doubtless draw a number of young people from this city and other places. It is just above Washingtonville and will prove a pleasant drive and a great pleasure in meeting old friends again.

George Giddis As a Milkmaid.

George Giddis, an employe of Councilman V. L. Frazee, will take part in the Fourth of July parade, and will have a float representing a farm yard. He will use a cow and be dressed as a milkmaid.

A Generous Contributor.

Among the generous contributors to the concert fund for the benefit of the New York and London hospitals on the St. Louis on her second trip, was Pliny T. Fisk, who gave $100.

Bound to Have Good Roads.

The stone crusher is about ready for business in Warren township. It is on Henry MacKinsey's property nearly opposite the Daniel Cory farm. Warren is bound to have good roads.

Park Improvements.

The foundations are now being laid for two fine residences on Mytle avenue. When completed they will be occupied by George Rogers and John Valiant.

EFFECTIVE WORKERS.

Annual Report of the Young Women's Christian Temperance Union.

The annual report of Secretary Miss S. Lena Bass of the Y. W. C. T. U. is as follows:

The year '94-'95 has, on the whole, been a successful one. In addition to the devotional and business meetings, there has been held two parlor meetings—one at the residence of Mrs. Charles Potter, when Miss Addie Parker Jackson gave a most entertaining and instructive talk on Physical Culture, and another, a reception given at the residence of Miss Delphine Barnes, in honor of our former former president, Miss Amey Green.

In December a cake, pie, and candy sale was held, from which the receipts were $32. This sum, together with the money received from dues, etc., made the total receipts of the year, $71.78, while the disbursements were $67.91. Among the causes contributed to were the "Y" hospital bed, the Loyal Temperance Legion, subscription to a paper for the Public Library.

The superintendent of the Loyal Temperance Legion, Miss Delphine Barnes, makes the following report:

The first meeting was held October 10th, 1894, with ten children in attendance. From that time on a meeting has been held every Wednesday. One by one the children have been coming in, and today we have on our roll-book the names of seventy-seven children, forty-two girls and thirty-five boys. In all there has been held thirty meetings, with an average attendance of thirty. Every alternate Wednesday a temperance talk, with blackboard illustrations, has been given. The intervening Wednesday is the Band of Mercy meeting. Our object in this is to instruct the children "to be kind to all harmless living creatures, and try to protect them from cruel usage."

At Christmas each of the children received a box of candy, a bag of popcorn and an orange. In April the boys and girls enjoyed a very instructive blackboard talk given by Mrs. Blair. With the kind assistance of Miss Etta Blish and Miss Bessie Titsworth we have been enabled to carry on the work among the children, and we hope some words may have been spoken which may be of benefit to them.

Such has been the work of the year, and our prayer is that it may bring blessings to others and to ourselves.

Coal Dealers on a Lark.

The coal dealers are not slow by any means, and as proof of this, the New Jersey Coal Dealers Exchange arranged an excursion for today which left Newark at 8:15. At 8:48 the train of the dealers in black diamonds pulled into the North Avenue station, where J. A. Thickstun, of this city, president of the Exchange, joined the party and escorted them as far as Bound Brook. The excursion will go to Gettysburg where a guide will lead them over the famous battle-field. The rest of the time will be spent in the Blue Mountains at the Blue Mountain House, from which they will return on June 27th.

Leaves Word He Has Gone West.

Silas D. Drake, a real estate agent at Elizabeth, was surprised on reaching his office yesterday to find a letter from William Patek, his bill collector, informing him that Patek had followed the advice of Horace Greeley and gone west. Patek had collected money for Mr. Drake, but did not say when he would settle. He was studying law in the office of Augustus Egenolf, but was dismissed by the latter on Saturday. He is said to have gone to Denver, Col.

A Novel Entertainment.

A novel and most enjoyable entertainment filled Bethel chapel to its utmost last evening. The occasion was a concert by a troupe of African singers. A colored boy only five years old played a number of selections on the piano and autoharp. The rest of the programme consisted of singing in English and Kaffer, and speaking and reciting in Kaffer. After the entertainment was concluded refreshments were served.

Charged With False Pretenses.

Charles Frey, of Plainfield avenue, was arrested yesterday by Sergeant Kiely. He was charged by George Eddy, the West End butcher, of obtaining money under false pretenses. The sergeant took him before Justice Nash, and the latter, after hearing his story, decided to adjourn the matter for one week, in order to give him an opportunity to settle with Mr. Eddy.

Work on Westfield Sewers.

Two gangs of men commenced work today on the trunk sewers at Westfield. There will be underdrains all over the town, and the work is progressing favorably.

PUBLIC MONEY DIVIDED.

Apportionment of North Plainfield Borough and Township Funds.

The meeting to make a division of money held by the township of North Plainfield and the borough was held last evening in the North Plainfield Council rooms.

The money held by the township was raised by them and also the borough, and when the latter was set off this money was left in the township treasury.

Inasmuch as the borough people had paid their share into this fund it was necessary that they should receive their proportionate share of the surplus.

The meeting was thoroughly harmonious and the borough showed every disposition to allow the township everything they could possibly claim legally.

The cash on hand in the township treasury amounted to $2,107.02, of which the borough receives $1,869.63 and the township $235.39; of '94 tax money in the township collector's hands, $1,546.96, the borough gets $1,175.89 and the township $371.07; and of the tax money in his hands prior to '94, $217.99, the borough gets $184.55 and the township $33.44. The total amount received by the borough is $3,230.07, and the township $639.90.

There is $9,167.98 uncollected taxes, which is now due, and the borough will receive of this $8,142.86, and the township $1,025.12.

Borough Counsel C. A. Reed and Township Counsel W. R. Codington together with the clerks and members of township and borough, were present at the settlement.

PAINED AFTER FORTY YEARS.

Col. Diedrick Has An Operation Performed on One of His Fingers.

About forty years ago Col. John A. Diedrick was living in California and one day while climbing among some rocks he missed his footing and to save himself was obliged to cling to a small opening which he had previously noted.

In doing this he bruised the third finger on both of his hands. For a long time he suffered much pain, but it finally passed away and he thought no more about it till a short time ago, when the finger on his right hand began to double up and he was unable to open it. He had it treated, but no improvement was noticed.

Happening one day to hear of Dr. Sayre, of New York, who is a noted specialist, he had an interview with him and an appointment was made at Bellevue Hospital. The doctor operated on the finger before a large class of students, and it proved to be very successful. Mr. Diedrick hopes before long to be able to have the use of this member.

A strange part in connection with the circumstance is that the same finger on the other hand is effected in a like manner, and eventually a similar operation will be necessary.

CHURCH CHIMES.

A Japanese tea and entertainment will be given at Warren chapel on Thursday evening at eight o'clock.

The Sunday-school of the Congregational church will go on their annual excursion to Asbury Park, Thursday, July 18th.

The Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church Sunday-schools will go on their summer excursion to Asbury Park, next Tuesday, July 2d.

The Epworth League of the First M. E. church will give a final sociable Friday evening. An entertaining programme will insure a most enjoyable time for all.

The missionary service of the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Baptist church will be held on Friday evening, instead of Thursday, as stated in last evening's Press.

The excursion committee of the First Baptist church met at the home of Charles Smith on Grove street last night to complete arrangements for their excursion to the seashore.

The Big Land Sale.

J. F. MacDonald, the uptown grocer, will give you free tickets on the electric railway to attend Wm. E. Taylor's great auction sale of lots near Grant avenue depot next Saturday at two p. m. on the premises. There will be music at the sale and a large tent will be erected on the grounds in case of storm. Come and invest. You will surely make money. Terms $10 down on each lot and $5 per month thereafter.

Mr. Frisbie Is An Expert.

Mail Messenger Frisbie was appointed dog catcher by Chief Marshal VanHorn last night. Ben Vandervoort was lacking in several respects, hence the change. He will devote two hours each day to the work.

BOY BICYCLISTS.

The Youngsters Will Compete in Races Tomorrow.

Following the example of their elders, the boy cyclists of Plainfield have arranged a little race meet of their own which is to take place on the Crescent Oval, Wednesday afternoon. Only boys under sixteen years of age will be allowed to contest, but for those who do there is over $15 worth of medals to be tried for. Wallace Beveridge and Morris Dumont are the enterprising young men in charge of the meet.

The events and entries for the games are as follows:

One hundred yards dash, handicap—Roy Cox, 6 yards; Frank Talmadge, 6 yards; Morris Dumont, 2 yards; H. Finch, scratch; Wallace Beveridge, scratch.

Quarter-mile bicycle race, scratch—George Coard, Carroll, Runyon, Harry Cuming.

Twenty-two yards dash, handicap—Morris Dumont, 3 yards; H. Finch, 1 yard; Wallace Beveridge, scratch.

Two-mile bicycle race, handicap—Open only to the first three in the other bicycle races. A special prize will be given to the winner.

The games will commence at three o'clock, and 25 cents will be charged as admission fee.

RAISING CENTRAL'S TRACKS.

Work Begins in Elizabeth and May Be Completed Next Spring.

The work of elevating the New Jersey Central Railroad's tracks through Elizabeth on the main line and depressing five streets under the Central's roadbed began yesterday. There is considerable talk among the property owners on these streets over a report that the Central company will not erect any retaining walls against abutting property.

The story is that the company has discovered a law which will permit the work to be done without going to the extra expense of erecting the retaining walls. The property owners don't intend, if they can help it, to pay for this job, and declare they will fight the railroad company in the courts rather than submit. They claim the walls are called for by the contract made by the City Council with the railroad authorities.

The work of raising the Central's tracks and depressing the streets will take about nine months, and perhaps longer.

ARCANUMITES HAVE A GOOD TIME.

An Enjoyable Smoker Given By the Plainfield Lodge.

Yesterday was Arcanum Day throughout the State, and last night Royal Arcanum Lodge, No. 711, celebrated it in a fitting manner by giving a stag smoker and entertainment.

After the regular business was transacted the meeting was thrown open, and Dr. Rodman made one of his thoroughly enjoyable speeches. It dwelt on the social side of human nature, and told something of the order. Remarks by other members followed. Several selections were then rendered by an orchestra which was a feature.

J. VanEps, the Park avenue jeweler, pleased all by his fine playing on the zither.

There was an exceedingly large attendance and all enjoyed the refreshments and the good cigars.

Terrific Hail Storm.

A terrific hail storm passed over Washington Valley yesterday afternoon. Henry Voehl while on his route near the Warrenville schoolhouse, said that the hail storm played a merry tune on top and on the side of his bakery wagon.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mrs. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else, then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottle at Randolph's drug store. Regular size, 50c and $1.

A PRESIDENTAL PRESENT.

Mr. Cleveland Will Receive a Gift from Plainfield.

President Cleveland has had gifts and honors bestowed upon him in great numbers, but its dollars to doughnuts that the gift he will receive from Plainfield in a few days will please him better than to have a dozen crying babies named after him. It is a well-known fact—in truth so well known that it is almost superflous to mention it—that the President is a latter day Izak Walton, whose piscatorial expeditions will go thundering down time into future ages with as much renown as did the trip of Washington across the raging Delaware.

This particular gift which the President will receive from Plainfield is a fishing rod, which, figuratively speaking, would make Sam Wilbur's mouth water. The donor will be A. F. Marsh, of 25 Vine street, who has been working on the article for some time past. It is made of seasoned split hickory, is ten feet long, divided into three sections, and weighs twelve ounces. In a word, it is a beautiful piece of work.

Mr. Marsh will send it to the President one day this week, previous to which it will be on exhibition in Schwed's display window on Front street.

A GOOD WOMAN GONE.

Death of Mrs. Carpenter at the Home of Her Brother, R. G. Horr.

Yesterday morning at half-past ten o'clock there passed away from this earth one of those women whose only work seemed to be to make life happier for those around her. Mrs. Lucina Horr Carpenter died at the home of her brother, Roswell G. Horr, of 808 Park avenue, in the seventy-second year of her age. She was born in Vermont, but had been a resident of Chicago for a number of years, and her only son, Newton Carpenter, is now secretary of the Art Institute of that city.

Mrs. Carpenter was a widow, and had been a sufferer from heart trouble for several years. She came to Plainfield to spend the summer with the hope that the change would do her good. She had been confined to her bed for a week past, but none of the family thought that the end was so near at hand.

Her funeral will take place Thursday in Chicago, and this morning the remains were removed there under the charge of Roswell G. Horr and his daughter, Mrs. F. W. Hebard. Mrs. Horr was unable to go on account of the illness of her daughter.

Mrs. Carpenter was a most estimable woman, active in all charitable works and prominent in the Congregational church of which she was a member, and in her death the poor and needy have lost a kind friend.

MR. TAYNOR AND THE BEES.

An Attempt to Capture a Swarm of Honeymakers in a Box.

Constable Samuel Taynor had a lively experience yesterday in front of his home on Jackson avenue.

A large swarm of bees had located around a tree in front of the house near the sidewalk, and Mr. Taynor thought it would be nice to capture them in a box, and so he dressed accordingly and attempted to drive them in a large box. The bees did not seem to like the idea, and so they gave Mr. Taynor a very lively chase. He finally became so heated that he was obliged to give up, and had the satisfaction of seeing them fly away across a large field.

Mr. Taynor attracted considerable attention with a mosquito netting over his head, as he was following up the bees.

The U. S. Grant Club.

The U. S. Grant Club of North Plainfield met in the basement of the North Plainfield public school last evening and elected delegates and alternates to attend the convention to be held at Trenton next Wednesday. Ex-Mayor Charles Place presided and H. J. Martin was secretary. The following were chosen delegates: Ex-Mayor Charles Place, E. A. Overton, S. B. Joseph, Peter Emmons and H. J. Martin; the alternates consisted of A. Lutkins, W. C. Smith, Fred Brown, J. A. Goodwin and N. B. Smalley. The club is becoming very enthusiastic and hopes to be able to take an active part in the fall campaign.

To Agitate the Railway Extension.

The citizens residing in the vicinity of Netherwood are anxious for the extension of the street railway, and to that end a meeting has been called to agitate the subject tomorrow evening. The meeting will be held in the Hotel Netherwood. The call is signed by W. A. Lord and N. P. T. Finch.

TO WATCH FILIBUSTERS

The Atlanta Leaves for Cuban Waters.

Three of Uncle Sam's Vessels Now Engaged in an Effort To Prev nt Assistance Being Rendered the Insurgents from This Country—Rebel Defeats Reported.

Washington, June 25.—The cruiser Atlanta is under orders to leave New York harbor to-day to enforce the neutrality laws in Cuban waters. She will first stop at Port au Prince, Hayti, and when she leaves there her movements are apt to be somewhat perplexing to filibustering expeditions menacing the south coast of Cuba. After cruising as long as her coal lasts the Atlanta will go into Santiago de Cuba and lie there until her bunkers are replenished, being held in readiness to go out and give chase to any expedition that may be reported.

Spain Cannot Complain.

This new duty of the Atlanta together with that of the Raleigh along the gulf coast of the United States indicates the determination of the administration to give Spain no opportunity of accusing this government of negligence. While it is believed in official circles that the reports alleging violations of neutrality have been to some extent exaggerated, other American warships will be sent to the Gulf of Mexico if it should be demonstrated that the Atlanta and Raleigh are unequal to the task assigned to them.

Montgomery on the Lookout.

The cruiser Montgomery, which recently went to Colon and after spending a week there has now returned to Greytown, had orders to keep a sharp lookout for sympathetic movements in Central America in which Americans might be involved. Several expeditions from Costa Rica and other Central American points are known to have left for Cuba and at least one of them has landed on the island. As far as shown the United States was not concerned in them; but the Montgomery will continue vigilant until she returns to Mobile early in July.

Raleigh Leaves Key West.

Key West, Fla., June 25.—The Raleigh sailed from here yesterday for a cruise at sea between Cuba and the gulf states. It is not known whether her commander has instructions to look out for any filibustering expeditions, but there is no doubt she will endeavor to intercept any unlawful vessels. While the Raleigh lies in port her movements are known, but the purpose of her trip is evidently to keep her whereabouts unknown. She is liable to drop into any small port or inlet along the coast and thus prevent the assembling or sailing of filibusters bound for Cuba.

Campos at Havana.

Havana, June 25.—Captain General Campos arrived here yesterday from the south side of the islands. The rebel leader Borrero has been killed in an engagement at Alta Gracia, in the Remedios district.

Casallas' Death Reported.

A detachment of government troops met on the San Jose sugar estate, situated in the province of Santa Clara, an insurgent band led by ex-Major Casallas, who recently deserted to the rebels with many of the men he commanded in a volunteer regiment. In the fighting that followed Casallas and two other rebels were killed and seventeen wounded. The government loss was two killed and thirteen wounded. It is believed that this band will break up, now that its leader is dead.

Pino's Band Reported Captured.

A dispatch from Cienfuegos states that it is reported there that the rebel band commanded by Pino have been captured by government troops.

MRS. CORBETT'S DIVORCE SUIT.

A Referee Appointed in New York To Try the Issue.

New York, June 25.—Edward Jacobs has been appointed referee to try the issues involved in the action for absolute divorce which Mrs. Ollie Corbett has brought against her husband, James J. Corbett, the pugilist, upon statutory grounds. Corbett has put in a denial of his wife's charges, which raises an issue in the case that the referee will have to try. The referee, in addition to taking testimony as to the charges which are made by Mrs. Corbett, is also to take evidence as to the financial ability of the pugilist, so that if Mrs. Corbett's charges are sustained, the amount of alimony and counsel fees which she may be entitled to shall be fixed.

MANY BURNED TO DEATH.

More Than a Hundred Houses Destroyed in a Russian Town.

St. Petersburg, June 25.—More than a hundred houses have been burned at Vishni-Volotchok, seventy miles from Tveriz. Many of the inhabitants perished. The place is at the commencement of the canal which unites the Msta river with the Tvertsa, and is on the great route between Moscow and St. Petersburg.

Mrs. Castle Is the Best Singer.

Boston, Mass., June 25.—Miss F. Edith Castle, of Terre Haute, Ind., stands first on the list of graduating singers at the New England conservatory of music. In a vocal contest between four young men and three ladies, all pupils of the conservatory, she carried off the bronze medal awarded the best singer by George Henschel, of London.

Nine Jurors To Try Fitz.

Syracuse, N. Y., June 25.—When court opened this morning there were nine jurors in the box to try Fitzsimmons. It is now believed that it will take almost a week to secure a jury to decide the fate of the prize fighter.

Caesar To Die July 29.

New York, June 25.—William Caesar, the West India negro who murdered Mary Martin, was sentenced by Recorder Goff to be electrocuted at Sing Sing prison during the week of July 29.

Hudson Held by the Coroner.

London, June 25.—A coroner's jury has returned a verdict of wilful murder against Robert Hudson, who was recently arrested for murdering his wife and child.

WHISKEY TRUST AFFAIRS.

Enormous Profits Made Under Receiver McNulta's Management.

Chicago, June 25.—Since he has taken hold of the whiskey trust Receiver McNulta has made a profit of $300,000, according to his inventory of June 1, filed in the United States court yesterday, as compared with the inventory made of the condition of the trust on Jan. 28, when the concern went into the custody of the court. At that time there was a surplus of $1,200,000. The receiver now reports a surplus of $1,500,000.

May Further Swell Assets.

Receiver McNulta asserts that in his opinion the suits which he has begun in the court for the accounting under the cattle-feeding contract for additional compensation from Greenhut and Morris and the other suits on the million-dollar bond issue, and the excess paid in the purchase of the Shufeldt and other plants will further increase the assets in the hands of the receiver.

The Property Ordered Sold.

Judge Showalter ordered eighteen of the big "going" distilleries and the Peoria headquarters sold by Receiver McNulta to the reorganization committee, representing 347,000 shares of stock, for $9,800,000.

JAIL FOR BROWNE.

If the Ex-Coxeyite Attempts To Be Married on the Capitol Steps.

Washington, June 25.—If Carl Browne and Miss Mamie Coxey come to Washington to be married on the steps of the capitol, according to the announced programme of the late lieutenant-general of the "Industrial" army, they will probably be arrested for disorderly conduct by the capitol police and may be sent to the workhouse. An advertised display of this kind is construed by the officials to be clearly within the scope of the law prohibiting unauthorized assemblages in the capitol grounds or in the vicinity of the building. The regulations controlling the capitol grounds have been made more stringent than they ever were before. On Wednesday next an order goes into effect prohibiting the passage through the grounds of vehicles other than carriages.

IN HONOR OF CARNOT.

An Impressive Ceremony at the Pantheon in Paris.

Paris, June 25.—In the presence of enormous crowds of people the anniversary of the death of President Carnot, who was assassinated at Lyons on June 24, last year, by Cesario Santo, the anarchist, was observed yesterday at the Pantheon with impressive ceremonies. In the official procession were President Faure, M. Challemel-Lacour, president of the French senate, and M. Brisson, president of the French chamber of deputies, followed by the cabinet ministers, ambassadors, senators and deputies. M. Faure, in depositing a crown upon the tomb, said: "In the name of the republic, on the day on which is renewed the mourning of the country, I lay this crown upon the tomb of President Carnot." The religious ceremony took place in the church of the Madeleine.

MILD ARCTIC WINTER.

Indications Favorable for the Peary Relief Expedition.

Washington, June 25.—Capt. W. Williams of the British steamer Memphis, on a voyage from Avonmouth, England, to Montreal, reports to the naval hydrographer that his was the first vessel this season to pass the straits of Belle Isle, between Labrador and Newfoundland. He came through June 17, which is remarkably early for navigation to be open and is a sure indication of a very mild winter in the Arctic, auguring well for the success of the Peary relief expedition.

WAGES PUT UP.

Over 600 Hands Made Happy by Two Big Concerns.

Lebanon, Pa., June 25.—The employes of the North Lebanon furnaces have been notified of a ten per cent. increase in their wages, to go into effect July 1. The East Lebanon Iron company has notified the employes of the puddle and rolling mills that advance of ten per cent. will be made in their wages, dating from yesterday. In all over 600 men are affected by the increase in the two works.

KENTUCKY DEMOCRATS

They Will Declare for a Gold Standard.

Opening of the State Convention at Louisville To-day Close Fight for the Gubernatorial Nomination—Backburn's Fate Rests in the Success of Hardin and Free Silver.

Louisville, June 25.—Seldom, if ever before, has there been so much interest taken in a state convention in this state as that displayed in the democratic convention which assembled this morning at 10 o'clock at Music hall. Leading democrats are here from all parts of the state, and the hotel lobbies were crowded last night. The convention will certainly last two days and may continue into the third, so close is the race for the gubernatorial nomination.

Will Declare for Gold.

Only one thing can be predicted this morning with any degree of probability, and that is that the platform will declare for a gold standard. Had it not been for Secretary Carlisle's efforts the result might be far different, however.

Chances Favor Clay.

The race is very close between Hardin and Clay for the gubernatorial nomination, with the chances slightly in favor of the latter. Most of the instructed delegations are instructed for Hardin and sound money, but the majority of the delegates are uninstructed, and among these Clay is rapidly gaining ground.

The Outlook for Blackburn.

Should Hardin be nominated he will stand committed to a gold platform, though running as the candidate of the free silver men. This will effectually spoil any chances Joe Blackburn may have had for the senatorship, as he is wedded to the 16 to 1 idea. Unless Hardin is nominated on a free silver platform, which at present seems quite unlikely, the Kentuckian who has for so many years represented the people in one or other of the houses of congress will have to give way to another man. This man will in all probability be McCreary.

May Endorse Cleveland and Carlisle.

It is said that the platform will endorse Cleveland and Carlisle, but there is certain to be a lively fight should the attempt to do this be made.

Buckner Not a Candidate.

General S. B. Buckner, who has been prominently mentioned as a compromise candidate for governor, said in an interview last night, that he would not allow his name to go before the convention.

LE GRAND BUELL'S FUNERAL.

His Eccentric Widow Will Preach the Sermon To-day.

Holly, Mich., June 25.—The funeral of Le Grand Buell, who died Saturday, will be held at the Methodist Episcopal church to-day, when his widow will preach the funeral sermon. Mrs. Buell created a sensation three years ago by securing a divorce from the Rev. John F. Wetherell, of Clio, to enable her to marry Buell. The divorce and marriage occurred the same week. At the time of the marriage Mrs. Buell published a lengthy article in the local papers, making public her reasons for marrying Buell, which was to reform him from his excessive drinking habits. This she failed to do. Mr. Buell for years wrote for the leading song journals of the country.

EDITOR DANA WINS.

Decision of Justice Brown in the Noyes Libel Case.

New York, June 25.—Judge Brown of the United States district court handed down his decision on the application for a warrant of removal for Charles A. Dana, editor of the Sun, to be tried in Washington on an indictment for libel on the complaint of F. B. Noyes of the Washington Star. Judge Brown denied the application.

Tornado in Kentucky.

Owensboro, Ky., June 25.—A terrific storm passed over this section of the country yesterday afternoon. No serious damage was done in this city other than the destruction of many shade trees. Six miles east of here a tornado raged, destroying trees, crops and fences in its path of nearly a mile wide. No news of any deaths or injuries to people has been received.

Howgate's Case.

Washington, June 25.—Captain Howgate's counsel has decided not to enter an application for a new trial but are now busy preparing a bill of exceptions which will go before Judge McCamas for his signature by the end of this week, and will then come before the court of appeals. This court will not convene until October next.

Chicago's Public Building.

Washington, June 25.—A hitch in selecting the park site for the temporary public building at Chicago has occurred as all the abutting property owners have not, it is said, given their consent. Unless the matter can be unraveled another site may have to be selected.

An Illicit Distiller Sentenced.

Trenton, June 25.—August Schlidt, who was convicted in the federal court several days ago of illicit distilling in Hudson county, has been sentenced by Judge Green to six months in the Essex penitentiary and also to pay a fine of $1,000.

Want Taylor Sentenced.

Pierre, S. D., June 25.—Taylor's attorneys made another attempt yesterday to secure immediate sentence, which was refused by Judge Goffy. His bond for appearance Aug. 31 was fixed at $25,000, which his attorney says he can secure.

Oil Wells Damaged by Storms.

Wapakoneta, O., June 25.—Lightning and storm played havoc in the oil field in this vicinity Sunday night and yesterday morning. Nichols & Levy's loss will reach about $100,000. The loss in the Buckland field was serious.

Secretary Gresham's Will.

IT WAS A GREAT RACE

Columbia's Victory Was Easily Won.

Pennsylvania Boys Had Hard Luck—Their Shell Was Swamped and They Did Not Finish—Cornell's Boat Sunk and Broken in Two After the Race.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 25.—Almost in the face of a stiffish wind and in water so rough that the boats of her two opponents filled and swamped—one before and the other after the finish line was passed—Columbia rowed steadily on to victory last evening in the fast time of 21 minutes and 25 seconds. Cornell was second, seven lengths back. Her time was 21 minutes and 46 2-5 seconds. Pennsylvania's evil luck lasted to the end. Her shell, smashed from the waves from Governor Morton's tug last Friday and patched up till it was practically as good as new, went down over a mile from the finish. The Cornell boat was swamped just below her own boathouse, after the race was over, by swells from the steamboats, and was fairly broken in two. Pennsylvania's shell suffered little.

Cornell Was the Favorite.

There seemed to be much less betting before the crowd moved across to the west shore than on Friday. The odds showed some change The Cornell men, instead of giving 4 and 5 to 1 against Columbia, offered 2 to 1, which was eagerly accepted. The Columbia men had more money than anybody else here and snapped up everything that was offered. The members of the crew staked an amount aggregating fully $3,000 at average odds of 2 to 1. Cornell was a 7 to 5 favorite over the field yesterday. On Columbia against Pennsylvania the betting was even. Scarcely any bets between Cornell and Pennsylvania were recorded.

Soaked the Spectators.

At 5 o'clock rain began to fall. It came in a squall from the southeast and poured down in torrents. The wind drove it squarely into the faces of the 1,800 people on the observation train. The women in their light summer costumes winced visibly and looked dubiously at their white lace parasols. The men tried to cover their straw hats and a good many of them crawled under the cars. The rain ceased at about 5:30. At 6 o'clock the crews were ready to start, but considerable trouble was being had in anchoring the stake boats. Up to this time the water had been extremely smooth. It had been still all day except during the storm, and after the rain stopped it became smooth as glass.

A Pretty Start.

It was 6:56 when the starter's pistol sounded, and the three crews, catching the water practically at the same instant, got away together, making a pretty start. The Pennsylvania's crew pulled with more vim than either the Cornell or Columbias, and set the pace for the first quarter mile. They forged ahead a couple of feet in the first half-dozen strokes, while Columbia in the center and Cornell on the outside were rowing exactly even. Cornell was pulling 44 strokes, while Columbia with her long easy swing kept her place with 36 strokes. Pennsylvania rowed from 36 to 38 strokes at the start. Columbia pulled the cleanest stroke of the three crews and Pennsylvania the most uneven.

The Half Mile.

At the half mile the University of Pennsylvania boat lost by a quarter of a length, while the bow of Cornell's boat was a foot in advance of Columbia's. Then the shells began to strike rougher water than they found at the start. The Cornell crew on the outside got the worst of it, but Pennsylvania, on the inside, took it in the poorest shape. The other boats gradually drew upon Pennsylvania, and then it was noticed that the long easy stroke of the Columbia crew was gradually moving their boat to the front. Pennsylvania dropped back to the rear at the three-quarter mark and was not in the race thereafter. Cornell hung on pluckily, and at the end of the first mile the race appeared to belong to anybody.

Cornell Splashed Badly.

The first mile was made in 5 minutes, 11 seconds. Columbia had a good half length the best of it, and Cornell led Pennsylvania by six feet. At the two-mile mark with half the course yet before them Columbia had a lead of two lengths. Cornell was splashing badly, but had added half a length to her lead of Pennsylvania. The two miles were made in 10.32, quick time considering the water, which was growing rougher every minute. At two and a half miles Columbia was still forging ahead and had two length and a half to the good. Pennsylvania was splashing so badly that her shell was beginning to settle in the water.

Pennsy's Boat Sunk.

At the three-mile it was Columbia's race, barring accident. Her boat led by four lengths. Cornell was pulling gamely on, but the Pennsylvania boat was getting deeper and deeper in the water, and just after passing under the bridge the crew stopped rowing. The men were sitting in water and their boat was sinking. Their launch, which had noticed their condition some time previously and had keept close to the crew, was quickly alongside and took the men aboard.

Finished in a Walk.

From the three-mile point to the end the race was a procession. Columbia seeing that they had the race well in hand eased down a little, as the water was rough. It was 7:15:25 when Columbia crossed the line. They had made the four miles in 21 minutes and 25 seconds, beating Cornell seven lengths. Cornell's time was 21 minutes, 46 2-5 seconds.

Cornell's Pull for the Shore.

The Cornellians started off gamely to row to their boat house about three-quarters of a mile away, on the Poughkeepsie side. Their boat had nearly as much water in it as that of the Quakers had had when it sank. The steamboats and launches that had followed the crews down were ploughing up the water at a great rate, and the Cornell crew was so low in the water that it soon gave signs that it was going down, as Pennsylvania's had done. The men hit up the famous Cornell stroke pretty close to fifty, and managed to get well in-shore before the slump came. As the water washed across the shell the men prevented it from going down altogether and a rowboat put out from shore to their assistance. Five of them grabbed the rowboat on one side and over it rolled, dumping its two occupants into the water with the Cornell crew. The rowboat went down too. The Cornell launch steamed up and picked up all hands

ON OUR WARSHIP.

Emperor William Inspects the Cruiser New York at Kiel.

Hamburg, June 25.—Emperor William, wearing the uniform of a German admiral, visited the warship New York, the flagship of the American squadron at Kiel. He was accompanied by Admiral Knorr, chief of the Baltic sea naval station. As his majesty boarded the vessel at 1:15 o'clock the crew manned the rails and a sulute of twenty-one guns was fired. At the same time the German imperial standard was broken out at the mainmast head.

What Interested the Emperor Most.

Admiral Kirkland and all the officers of the ship received the emperor on the quarter deck. All the officers were presented. His majesty inspected the ship thoroughly, but was particularly interested in the revolving turrents, gun machanism, torpedo tubes, and the officers' and men's quarters. He commented favorably upon all he saw, and showed technical knowledge. He also showed some familiarity with the design of the New York. After the inspection refreshments were served in the cabin.

Gold Snuff-box for Admiral Kirkland

The emperor presented to Admiral Kirkland an exquisite gold snuffbox studded with diamonds, the gems forming a frame to a portrait in enamel of his majesty. The emperor left the ship at half past two o'clock, all the American crews manning their rails and firing a twenty-one gun sulute as he departed.

HAILSTORM IN JERSEY.

Passengers on a Railroad Train Frightened—Horses Killed.

Somerville, N. J., June 25.—At about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon a passenger train on the Central railroad, when between Junction and Asbury, ran into a fearful hail storm which extended about a mile wide through the northern portion of the state. All of the windows in the train were raised else they would have been smashed. As it was, the hailstones came into the cars in such quantities that they covered the floor. The passengers became frightened, and many of them tried to get under the seats. The hailstones covered the ground over which the storm passed to a depth of several inches. The actual damage done by the storm was slight, only a few limbs of trees having been blown off.

London, June 25.—The representative of the United Press in London learns this morning that Lord Salisbury will accept the premiership only on condition that the liberal leaders agree not to oppose his government's getting the necessary estimates before the dissolution of parliament, and also that no members of the cabinet which he forms shall be opposed for re-election upon taking office.

An Agreement Expected.

Lord Rosebery upon consultation found that several of them were unwilling to make these concessions, but negotiations are in progress which, it is believed, will tend to an aggreement on the parts of the liberals.

Gladstone and Rosebery Confer.

Immediately on his arrival in London from the cruise he had been making to Kiel and elsewhere Mr. Gladstone communicated with Lord Rosebery and accepted the latter's invitation to dine with him in Downing street. During the evening Herbert Asquith, the house secretary, was summoned to a conference. Mr. Gladstone remained with Lord Rosebery until after 11 o'clock, breaking his physician's orders and his own rules. He then walked with Lord Tweedmouth, lord privy seal, to the residence of Lord Rendel, in Carlton Gardens, where he is staying.

Washington, June 25.—Edward H. Strobel, United States minister to Chili, gives the state department details of the destruction by fire of the building occupied by the Chilean houses of congress at Santiago on May 18, which has previously been briefly reported in United Press dispatches by cable. The edifice, regarded as the finest in the country, was almost entirely destroyed, and the loss is estimated at $1,000,000, United States gold, not taking into account the destruction of the archives, which can never be replaced. Mr. Strobel says that while there are rumors that the fire was the work of incendiaries the accidental theory seems more probable to him.

The grass in the city park needs cutting.—Courier-News.

What might be made a handsome plot of ground and pleasant recreation spot, the "park" is now an eyesore to the section of the city of which it is a part. The Common Council ought to see its way clear to appropriate a small sum of money to place it in condition so as to be of some practical benefit to the city.

The State Board of Education has about completed the work of apportioning to the different counties the money which will be received from the State for the support of the public schools for the year beginning July 1, 1895. The total amount to be apportioned is $2,396,240 as against $2,219,360 for the year just closing. This $2,396,240 includes the $200,000 special appropriation which, under Senator Stokes's bill, is taken from the proceeds of the invested State school funds and divided among the different counties on a basis of the last school census. The remainder of the $2,396,240 is the State school tax, which is collected direct from the taxpayers, and which equals yearly $5 for every child of school age as shown by the latest school census. Ninety per cent. of the amount thus collected goes to the county in which it was collected, and the balance of 10 per cent. goes into a reserve fund which is distributed with regard to the peculiar condition existing in the different counties; such as low or high ratables in proportion to the school population, or a sparsely or densely settled county where a greater or lesser number of teachers and schools are required than in the other counties. Union county's share from the State school tax is $98,192.61, and from the $200,000 appropriation $8,902.49, making a total of $107,095.10. Somerset county's share from the State school tax is $46,730.11, and from the $200,000 appropriation $3,375.33, making a total of $50,105.47. The money which the State Board of Education will apportion will be re-apportioned by the county superintendents to the various school districts within their counties, under the school law of 1894, on a basis of, first, $200 for each teacher employed, and, second, the remainder to be distributed in proportion to the school census in each district.

THE THEORY OF DIGESTION OF FOOD

The human stomach is a pear-shaped bag into which all food drops at once when swallowed. Three things happen—the blood rushes into the substance of the stomach (not into its interior) to heat it; thousands of little ducts or pipes pour copiously forth a fluid called the gastric juice; and then the stomach begins a wave-like, churning movement which thoroughly mixes the gastric juice with the food, and by-and-by changes the whole into a gray-looking, semi-liquid paste called cheme. This is digestion as it takes place in health.

But, look you! If the stomach fails to furnish the gastric juice, or fails to furnish enough of it, the food simply lies in the stomach and turns sour, putrefies, ferments—as it would in a warm, moist air out doors. This is indigestion, dyspepsia or gastritis. Having no other way of escape the poisons so engendered pass into the circulation and set up a train of results like these—headache; foul taste in the mouth; loss of appetite and nausea; furred tongue; disordered heart action; nervous weakness and prostration; chills followed by heat flashes; distress and weight in the chest after eating; fugitive muscular pains, followed in time by grave local ailments, etc. All this, bear in mind, comes of a more or less complete failure of the stomach to secrete gastric juice.

Having studied this subject for many years the Shakers of Mt. Lebanon, N. Y., famous as medicinal chemists and herbalists sought among the plants cultivated by them only for a remedy which should have the distinct and especial effect of stimulating the flow of gastric juice to a normal amount and at the same time of the full, natural digestive strength. No other so-called remedies for dyspepsia have this purpose in view, yet it is the absolutely essential thing. Successful in their efforts, even beyond their hopes, they have placed their discovery on the market under the name of the Shaker Digestive Cordial. Its effects are immediate and radical. Relief is felt at once and a permanent cure soon follows. It is the sure and scientific remedy for indigestion and dyspepsia.

Confident in their work the Shakers offer trial bottles at the nominal price of ten cents. For sale by nearly all druggists.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destored forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

YOUR SCALP! During the heats of summer does it become irritated and invite an occasional friendly scratch? To wash it is well, but not too often, lest your hair become "brash" and stiff. But treat it twice or thrice a week with our Petroleum Hair Tonic—a little rubbed in with your finger ends, and you will find the feeling of comfort and coolness truly delightful. Positively nothing equals it as a balm for the woes of your scalp. Sprinkler bottles 50c. Only at

While at Peekskill, N. Y., Mr. J. A. Scriven, a prominent manufacturer of New York City, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Such good results were obtained from its use that he sent back to the druggist from whom he had obtained it for two more bottles of the same remedy. When you have a cough or cold give this preparation a trial and like Mr. Scriven you will want it when again in need of such a medicine. It is a remedy of great worth and merit. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

While in Topeka last March, E. T. Barber, a prominent newspaper man of La Cygne, Kansas, was taken with cholera morbus very severely. The night clerk at the hotel where he was stopping happened to have a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and gave him three doses which relieved him and he thinks saved his life. Every family should keep this remedy in their home at all times. No one can tell how soon it may be needed. It costs but a trifle and may be the means of saving much suffering and perhaps the life of some member of the family. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

Sometime ago I was troubled with an attack of rheumatism. I used Chamberlain's Pain Balm and was completely cured. I have since advised many of my friends and customers to try the remedy and all speak highly of it. Simon Goldbaum, San Luis Rey, Cal. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

I have two little grandchildren who are teething this hot summer weather and are troubled with bowel complaint. I give them Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and it acts like a charm. I earnestly recommend it for children with bowel troubles. I was myself taken with a severe attack of bloody flux, with cramps and pains in my stomach, one-third of a bottle of this remedy cured me. Within twenty-four hours I was out of bed and doing my housework. Mrs. W. L. Dunagan, Bonaqua, Hickman Co., Tenn.

CHAP. II.—THE MAN ON THE MUIR.

Indeed, it is no shame to a man to have fear in his nature. It is, I well believe, born in a man's blood; and he hath no more to do with it than with who was his father. Yet mark the great crying that there has been in all ages about brave men and valiant men, and men that have never known fear. Yet what credit is there in such like? They cannot help it more than I could help having an eye that had a cast in it (if such like I had), or red hair, or a nose turned up at the end like that of a wild Eirionach. Yet such men come to honor, and their sons inherit it. For this also is the folly of the times.

We rode out of Edinburgh, passing the gates without question, for Sir James was a man in good odor with the government. We had a bitter winter's day for our journeying, and we had trouble enough to keep warm; yet with wrappings of foreign fur and a flask of French brandy we managed to shut out the cold. Also our hearts were somewhat cheered, and our converse grew more heartsome.

Thus making merry, to the extent even of singing a catch or two which Sir James had learned in the old wars, and which I heard for the first time, though not wholly with approval, yet with tolerance, we came to a place called Cockmuir, a wild and solitary place, shut in between hills that have no living thing upon them. No heartsome reek of habited house was to be seen. The place was in the midst of a great wilderness, and it needed the crowing of the black cock and the nicher of the grouse to make the silence endurable. But even these were wanting that bitter day of gray skies and gripping frost.

Just as we had gotten fairly to the midst of the moor there rose up before us a man, or, rather, as it might be, we came suddenly upon him. He was standing stock still, as if he had been meditating, looking away toward the hills of Lammermuir. But at the first sound of our horses' feet overtopping the brae, he turned and showed us the pallid countenance of a young lad, bitten blue with the winter winds, and with his black clothes hanging about him as though his limbs had been so many barren tree-branches. I knew him at a first glance. It was James Renwick, of Minnyhive, whose mother was some kin to mine, being also on the estate of Drumlanrig, where the Douglas is the father of us all.

It so happened, by mischance, that Sir James was putting back his flask of strong waters into the breast of his coat at the moment when Mr. Renwick turned him about. I wished that it had not been so; but, nevertheless, I gave him greeting, for he had been a child when I was a young lad, and our folk were, as I have said, some manner of kin.

Then I asked him how he did and that in a pleasant way. But he stood lowering at me with eyes so sunken and such a lost countenance that I wished we had come some other way.

"Fear not, James," I said, "for this is Sir James Standsfield, of New Milns, a good man, and one that, though a magistrate, is no ill-wisher to the folk of the hill——"

"Ah, John Bell," said young Renwick, at last, heeding my kindly speech no more than the tune of a bird whistling, "is that indeed you? Your friends for whom you left us have clad and comforted you well! There are no fine foreign coats on the muirs, and the hags distil not the brew of French brandy. Doubtless ye have made a fine exchange, and the wide throat that took the Test at a gulp will soon swallow a fat benefice. But there are other spirits abroad that you will yet have to reck on with.

"James," I said, peaceably, "not thus was your father wont to speak to me, when I drave home the kye in the even' from the braes at the town-end of Minnyhive."

"No," said he, "that may be; but since then the kye have been in many a man's corn beside my father's, honest man!"

And I knew that he meant to cast up to me that I had joined the persecuting party. For the ordinary cry among the hill folk, by which they passed on the word of warning the one to the other when the horse soldiers were out, was "The kye's in the corn!"

"Ye prate of honest men," said Sir James, speaking to Mr. Renwick for the first time; "but take notice that there are other honest men in the realm that are no rebels, but bide quietly at home wishing ill to none, and who grudge, forbye, an orra sheep no more to a hill body than a can of ale to a red soldier."

James Renwick bent his eyes on Sir James, and for a moment looked through him.

"Puir man," he said, gently, "poor man! I rede ye turn about your bridle-rein and ride back the way ye came, or the bed that ye shall lie on shall be darker than the mirk of night that comes fast upon us, and colder than the linen sheets that Janet Johnstone has spread for ye at the Wauk-Miln."

"Man!" cried Sir James, fiercely, shaking his bridle-reins at the field-preacher, "what ken ye of Janet Johnstone? And why speak ye the name of my son's concubine, that is to me as the name of the enemy of mankind! That evil woman has not crossed the step of my door for years—na, nor shall na while I live!"

So cried Sir James at his voice's pitch. James Renwick shook his head wearily.

"The message is not of me nor from me," he said. "I speak as I am bidden. Your light-o'-loves I reck nought of. But I wish you well, and I warn you from riding further, for the powers of darkness are abroad this night and it is their hour. Turn your horses about, and never draw rein till ye are safe within the walls of Edinburgh."

"Ye speak as a foolish person," said Sir James, severely; "this night I bide in mine own house and sleep in mine own chamber, with this honest man and law-abiding minister of the gospel to keep me company."

And with that he rode off and I rode after him. Yet often and after I looked back, and there in the fading light of that bleak and unkindly afternoon, I saw the fanatic preacher stand as we had left him, gazing lonesomely up at the hills as though he looked and saw a vision upon them.

Sir James Standsfield rode bravely away, as set on his own intent as a man that has taken the bit of his fate between his teeth and rides whither he will, against his better knowledge.

"The ranting and fanatical knave," he said, over his shoulder, "to speak to me of warnings and concubines. I will e'en apprehend him and have him sent to the scaffold."

Of which I knew well he had no smallest intention.

But as we neared home and the night settled about us, methought that Sir James Standsfield rode not so hastily nor looked so eagerly for the lights of his house.

Ever he found some new excuse to loiter, and showed me his own various improvements, together with the weaving mill and the wauk mill, which he said had been set up by one Spurway, a good enough man from Yorkshire, but very new-fangled and conceity in his own opinions.

Then we came to a little thatch house that had a lamp shining in the window.

"Ah," said Sir James, "let us light off here and have a draught for our evening ordinary. This is James Marr's, a very decent man and keeps good ale."

Yet I wondered that he should go buying of ale, well nigh within call of his own great and well-furnished house. But I could see that the man was ill at ease and like one that strives to put off an evil day.

Nevertheless we lighted down at the change-house and tied our horses to the ring of the door post. When we had seated ourselves, Sir James called for ale, and was exceedingly merry, but not (as I thought) in the wisest way, seeing that he was so close to his own door, and his wife certain to hear of it on the morning.

Then he cried for the elder maid of the two that were James Marr's daughters, and declared that he would find a match for her, swearing that she was too well-looking to be going about breeding quarrels and making ill-blood among the lads.

Whereupon came in a great red-bearded man, full of pomp and importance, with as much shortness of breath as port of presence.

"Ha, Umphray Spurway," cried Sir James, so soon as he saw him, "here is matter for thee. What means it that this bonny lass, Elspie Marr, goes about at thy door unwed, and thou, great English lout, have neither wife to keep thee warm o' nights, nor wean to heir thy goods and go clad in cloth of thy weaving. Go to, man. See to it."

The great red Englishman laughed and sat down well content, as all men do when they are jested upon concerning women.

"Ah, Sir James," he said, "had I an estate of farms and mills I had not so long have eaten the bread of another's baking. Elspie is a bonny lass, and an honest, but would have never have aught to say to an ancient graybeard of an Englishman."

"Never yet did I get the chance to say yea or nay, Umphray Spurway. But 'tis better late than never,'" said the lass Elspie, speaking from the doorway where Sir James had stayed her. She was a brisk lass, with no ill in her that ever I saw.

"Well, listen here, Elspie," cried the Englishman, daffing with her, "tell us all whether you will have me, or my man Henry Bowman that is a limber lad and likely of his face?"

"For a married man or for a lad to court?" asked the lass, looking from one to the other.

"For a married man, of course," said Sir James, before the Englishman had time to speak.

"Then I choose Umphray Spurway, the Englishman," said she. "Bonny faces make bare downsittings."

"A wise lass," said Sir James; "ye couldna do better, Umphray."

But even as he spoke I saw his jaw drop and he stared at the door at which appeared the face of the young man who had pursued us the day on the muir of Lowther. Sir James rose to his feet and set his hand to his sword. The face of the young man was flushed with wrath or wine, I know not which.

"Come in hither, Janet," he cried to some one without; "here is a gallant company at the drink. Ye will see the whole pack together that have disinherited me—the canting priest, the lying Englisher, and the old hound himself. The devil rive them all! May their cups choke them!"

And with these wicked words Philip Standsfield strode upon the stone pavement of the inn. He was a tall young man, but with a face surfeited with passion and blotched with evil living. Behind him, with a fleering laugh, there entered a young slattern of a woman, buxom of feature indeed, but with no good or housewifely look in her eyes.

"See, there they stand, Janet," cried he, "and for a groat I would send them all to hell, and swing for them in the Grass Mercat."

"Philip," said Sir James, gripping the table to steady himself, for all his mirth had gone from him and left him gray to the lips, "Philip, my lad, I have come to forgive you, and to see gin ye will lead a new life. Dinna—dinna begin by breaking my heart. Send away that woman, that has made ye live like a beast. Think on your wife that greets for you by her lone——"

What more he would have said I know not, but the woman broke out furiously upon him, asking who he was that he should take her good name, saying that she was an honest man's wife and much else.

"Said ye 'an honest man's honest wife?'" said Sir James. And he looked very direct at her as she spoke.

The woman turned away as if she could not bear the question and the eyes of all that were in the house. She made as though she would go to the fireside by which sat James Marr's wife with her daughter Elspie standing beside her. But they gathered the skirts of their kirtles about them and swept off into an inner room. So the woman came back shamefacedly to the side of her paramour, who stood browbeating us all, save the Englishman, who sipped contentedly at his ale and smiling in a way that was a vast admiration to me to behold.

It was not, perhaps, the wisest time to give a man advice, but nevertheless, because I knew not whether indeed I should see him again, I rose from my place and exhorted him to repent and put away his sin; for that his father was ready to forgive him and receive him again, as in the days before his first going from home.

"Out upon you, canting hound!" he cried, breaking in on me; "I tell you plainly, gin I had as muckle as sixpence in the day, I would never trouble my father more."

"Come to dinner and worship to-night, and we shall see if we cannot make a new thing of it, your father and you and I. We have come from Edinburgh for that purpose."

But the more mention that was made of his father's kindliness, the fiercer was the son against him, which made his sin like the sin against the Holy Ghost, as I have so often expounded.

"The devil take him and you both," he cried. "Think ye I would go to his table

"THE DEVIL TAKE HIM AND YOU BOTH!"

to have him grin at me like a sheep's head in a tongs. Ye dog with band-strings, what are ye concerned in the matter? Do ye understand to whom ye speak?"

Then Umphray Spurway whipped a pair of pistols out of his pocket, and laid them bended on the table.

"There has been enough and to spare of ill talk," he said; "get out of this house without another uncivil word, Philip Standsfield, or I will make a hole in you, you debauched man and blasphemer of your father. And you, Janet Johnston, shall be whipped at the cart-tail from here to Morham—aye, if I have to lay on the lashes myself!"

So, snarling and counter-snarling, with changed countenances, more like those of beast than human kind, Philip Standsfield and the wench went out vowing vengeance upon us all. Then there comes into my tale that night of great fear, which grips me yet in the telling of it. It was a bitter night of frost at the changing of the moon. A horror of great darkness fell upon the earth. Yet there was also, what is not so common on a night of cold, a soughing and wandering wind that whispered by whiles, going and coming uncertainly among the stepped gables of the house of New Milns.

AMERICAN POLICEMEN'S ORIGIN.

Politicians and the Governing Powers of Our Cities Come from the Same Place.

An Irish mud cabin consists of two rooms and possibly a small semi-detached outhouse which is used as a storeroom for perishable articles. There is not a chink in the walls or thatch save a narrow chimney, which seldom if ever answers its purpose; the doorway faces the east and emits the smoke. What little light penetrates inside through the tiny windows discloses the deep chocolate stain from the eternal turf reek which pervades the atmosphere of the interior, and literally paints walls, roof and furniture a uniform color. The furniture is rough and also scanty, a few stools atoning for the occasional complete absence of chairs.

The mud floor is always more or less wet from the patter of the children's bare feet or from the animals which have free access to the house. At night there is a goodly company within the walls of this spacious mansion. In the inside room there are two or three box beds or berths, where the children sleep, according to their age and sex; from nine to twelve is not an uncommon number in a family. In the state berth in the callioghi, or recess at the side of the hearth, the father and mother repose unscreened from the live stock of the farm, and breathe the same atmosphere as some eight quadrupeds besides the poultry. Pigs, cattle, dogs, cats and probably a horse or donkey, have their bed space, respectively, and jealously resent any encroachment by a bedfellow.

Astonishing as it may appear, there are hardly any disagreeable odors. The overpowering smell of the peat smoke evidently acts as a complete disinfectant and fortunately it is innoxious to the inhabitants of the hovel. Equally astonishing is the fact that the whole community are in comparative harmony, and even the babies rarely cry. There is plenty of occupation for all the family who are able and willing to work, the mother doing little else but nurse the youngest infant.—The Cornhill Magazine.

THE MERE MONEY-GETTER.

Theodore Roosevelt Writes Most Forcibly of the Man of Fortune.

There is not in the world a more ignoble character than the mere money-getting American, insensible to every duty, regardless of every principle, bent only on amassing a fortune and putting his fortune only to the basest uses—whether these uses be to speculate in stocks and wreck railroads himself, or to allow his son to lead a life of foolish and expensive idleness and gross debauchery, or to purchase some scoundrel of high social position, foreign or native, for his daughter, writes Theodore Roosevelt. Such a man is only the more dangerous if he occasionally does some deed like founding a college or endowing a church, which makes those good people who are also foolish forget his real iniquity.

These men are equally careless of the workingmen, whom they oppress, and of the State, whose existence they imperil. There are not very many of them, but there is a very great number of men who approach more or less closely to the type, and just in so far as they do so approach they are curses to the country. The man who is content to let politics go from bad to worse, jesting at the corruption of politicians, the man who is content to see the maladministration of justice without an immediate and resolute effort to reform it, is shirking his duty and is preparing the way for infinite woe in the future.

Hard, brutal indifference to the right and an equally brutal shortsightedness as to the inevitable results of corruption and injustice are baneful beyond measure; and yet they are characteristic of a great many Americans who consider themselves perfectly respectable and who are considered thriving, prosperous men by their easy going fellow citizens. —Forum.

Remoteness of the Stars From Us.

While it is interesting to know the distance of some of the stars in miles, when stated in that way, the numbers are so large that they frequently convey very indistinct conceptions to the mind. For this reason it is customary to estimate star distance in "light years." A light year is the distance that light, moving at the rate of 189,300 miles per second, travels in one year. This amounts in round numbers to 5,800,000,000,000 miles. The distance of Alpha Centauri is 4.35 light years; that of Sirius, the Dog Star, is almost exactly twice as great or 8.6 light years. In other words, light requires 8.6 years to come to us from Sirius. And these are among the very nearest of the stars.

Some, whose parallaxes have been rather estimated than measured, appear to be situated at a distance which light could not traverse in less than one or two centuries.

The great star Arcturus, for instance, has, according to Dr. Elkin, a parallax of only 18-1000 of a second. Its distance must, in that case, be about 181 light years, or more than a thousand million million miles. And if its distance is so great then, since light varies inversely as the square of the distance from the source, it can be shown that Arcturus must actually give forth five or six thousand times as much light as the sun yields. Yet Arcturus is evidently much nearer than are the vast majority of the stars.—Chautauquan.

New Brunswick's "Greek Choir."

Yesterday the Courier-News stated that "Rev. J. F. Riggs, who preached in the Trinity Reformed church, Sunday, was of the 'Greek Choir' in the Seminary at New Brunswick." As Dr. Riggs is a professor of Greek and Latin in Rutgers College, the absurdity of the above item is apparent.

Social Diversion at the Capital.

A few fortunate spectators were witnesses the other evening of a very unusual but very merry scene in the fashionable Washington west end. An Italian organ grinder was turning out a series of tempting waltzes and polkas in front of the residence of one of the city's society leaders.

Quite a party of some of the gayest and best known society "buds" were seated on the steps of the house enjoying the balmy air of a moonlit May evening. Not a member of the masculine sex was among them. On the spur of the moment one of the damsels suggested that they could have a beautiful little dance to the tune of the hand organ right out on the concrete. Thereupon they paired off, and for nearly half an hour these maidens, so demure, shy and coy in the fashionable drawing room of the west end, danced gayly around the street in front of the house to the intense astonishment of the organ grinder. Then they all "chipped in" and threw the organ grinder something like $2 in change.

The Peanut Is Not a Nut.

In reply to a question by the editor of The Richmond Dispatch, the Department of Agriculture has decided that the peanut is not a nut, and that "the weight of authority seems to be in favor of accepting it as a native of Brazil." The peanut of the North is known in the South, where it is commonly grown, as the gouber pea.—Lowell News.

WELL RENDERED MUSIC.

LARGE ATTENDANCE AT MR. MACCLYMONT'S ORGAN RECITAL.

The Singing of Master Lenox Barnes Favorably Received—E. H. Bensen, the Basso, Participates.

As on all previous occasions the audience that attended the free organ recital given by William E. MacClymont in the First Presbyterian church was a thoroughly critical one. It is an established fact among Plainfield people that whether they get something for nothing or whether they have to pay for it, their judgement and criticism is just as severe.

The audience was a large one, consisting principally of musical people. Aside from Mr. MacClymont's playing, the feature of the evening was the appearance of Lexox Barnes, the soloist of the Church of All Angels in New York. His first rendition was "Cling to the Crucified" and it was all that could be desired. In spite of the fact that Master Barnes has appeared before large audiences many times he has a modesty that is taking. That he has a wonderful voice, there is no doubt and the audience were quick to discover it. As an encore he repeated the selection.

The appearance of E. H. Bensen was awaited with more or less anxiety. Plainfield people have listened to many noted bassos, and it may account for the slight reception given Mr. Bensen. However, his voice was pleasing, and though not possessing all that one could wish, he rendered very acceptably the "Bedouin Love Song."

Later Mr. Bensen sang "The Mighty Deep," which was more enjoyable than the first selection.

Master Barnes in part second gave "Thus Saith the Lord," which was a masterly effort in every respect. An encore was given and a delightful selection, "Sleep in Your Cradle Deep," was given in an enjoyable manner.

Mr. McClymont's playing is too well known by Plainfield people to admit of any criticism. Principally notable renditions in last night's programme were "Sonata de Camera," "Night in Grenada," "Mignon." The "March Triumphal," dedicated to Mr. MacClymont's organ pupils, was heartily received, and the "Star Spangled Banner," with variations by Buck, brought the programme to a close.

Crop Reports.

The weekly crop bulletin of the New Jersey weather service publishes the following reports from Union and Somerset counties:

CLARK TOWNSHIP—All crops progressing and in first-class condition. The hay harvest will commence this week.

ELIZABETH—The crop conditions for the week have been generally favorable, but rain is much needed, especially for potatoes now coming into bloom; corn, oats and rye look very well: haying in progress, the crop will be up to the average. Rainfall, trace.

POTTERSVILLE—Very warm and dry; no rain, which is much needed: potatoes and garden truck wilting badly; some hay made during week, wheat ripening very fast: some rye ready to cut; potato bugs very plentiful.

SOMERVILLE—The highest temperature during the week was 92 degs. on the 20th, and the lowest 53 degs. on the 18th. The rainfall on 21st and 22d measured only 0.23 inch.

FRANKLIN PARK—Fine growing weather prevailed during the week. The warm nights have been most favorable to corn, but a good rain now would be the making of the hay, potato and oat crops; potatoes are in full flower and are setting well; orchard fruit, all varieties, will be below the average; some hay cut and cured but the farmers are waiting for a good rain before starting in on the bulk of the crop. The showers of the week, although light, were beneficial.

A New Route to Long Beach.

About all the preliminary details for the construction of a new railroad to Long Beach are completed, and, backed by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, the building of the line is assured. The new line is to shoot off from the Pennsylvania, Philadelphia and Long Branch Railroad at Hanover Station and cut directly through the flat pine country to Manahawkin, a distance of twenty miles. It will then run to Barnegat City Junction, thence northward to Beach Haven and Sea Haven, making a direct and short route to the resorts that will practically revolutionize travel in that direction. The surveys have been completed and work may be started this summer.

Old People.

Old people who require medicine to regulate the bowels and kidneys will find the true remedy in Electric Bitters. Electric Bitters is an excellent appetizer and aids digestion. Old people find it just exactly what they need. Price 50c a bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

A. P. A. AND THE SCHOOLS

A Circular Sent to the Elizabeth Board of Education.

The Newark News last night published the following from Elizabeth:

The members of the American Protective Association here are taking a hand in the election of officers by the Board of Education. This morning every member of the new board which takes control next month received the following circular:

"Dear Sir—Council No. 25, of the American Protective Association of New Jersey, has adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved, That in our judgment, the position of Secretary of the Board of Education should be held by a man of unquestioned patriotism, who is not allied with any system that is opposed to our National, non-sectarian free public schools, and we would therefore respectfully request every member of the Board of Education of the city of Elizabeth to vote for the appointment of either Henry F. Robinson or some equally competent, loyal and patriotic citizen.

"Resolved, That a copy of this be sent to each member of the new School Board.

"H. W. C. CHURCHILL, Secretary."

The present secretary of the Board of Education, William H. Ryan, who has held the office about eight years, is a Catholic. Henry F. Robinson was formerly a member of the board, and is said to be affiliated with the A. P. A.

Try It On the Plainfield Bug.

John B. Smith of Rutgers College gave an address Friday before the Montclair Town Improvement society on "The Elm-Tree Beetle and the Preservation of the Elm Tree." He gave a description of the appearance and habits of the beetle, and said they could be exterminated by the use of either London purple or Paris green in the proportion of one pound of either to 150 gallons of water, one pound of stone or shell lime or two gallons of milk of lime being added to prevent injury to the foliage. Arsenate of lead he also declared to be a sure remedy. It is formed by adding four ounces of arsenate of soda and eleven ounces of acitate of lead to 100 gallons of water.

A Mean Miscreant.

Swimming is one of summer's delights to the boys, and the Scotch Plains back pond, better known as the "Notch," has been one of the favorite resorts for swimmers. Some enterprising boys constructed a platform and a springboard which added much to the pleasure of the place, but when a number of Plainfield boys went to take their accustomed swim, yesterday, they found that some evil-minded person had been before them with a saw and utterly destroyed the platform and springboard and scattered the remains all through the surrounding woods.

A Question Often Asked.

The question is often asked, when should glasses be worn? To this answer should be, that as soon as discomfort arises for need of them they should be adopted. If your eyes are causing you anxiety, or if the glasses you are wearing are not suited to your eyes, call on Leech, Stiles & Co's eye specialist, who will be at 107 East Front street on Thursday from ten a. m. to 4:30 p. m. Examination free.

Getting Ready to Go to College.

Candidates for admission to Yale College meet Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the Y. M. C. Those who go to take their finals are Lewis Chase, Wesley Abbott and Carl Walz.

Voorhees for Governor

There were few politicians at the State House in Trenton yesterday, but among those on hand was President of the Senate Stokes, who is booking the candidacy of his friend, Foster M. Voorhees, for the Governorship.

President Stokes says he has not a doubt but that Senator Voorhees will be the next Governor of New Jersey.

MR. C. P. RALLI REPLIES.

DISCUSSES STRICTURES PLACED ON THE HONEYMOON MANAGEMENT.

The Total Receipts of the Performance Were $591, While the Expenses Were $646.31.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—In your issue of yesterday there appeared an anonymous communication conveying certain strictures upon the business management of "A Russian Honeymoon," to which I ask your permission to reply through the same channel as briefly as possible.

The delay in forwarding the accounts to the treasurer of the "Relief Fund" has arisen from the endeavor on the part of the management to prevail upon the principal contracting parties to reduce the heavy amount of extras charged in addition to the contract figures, and also to a desire on the part of the management to gather in all claims before reporting the account. The propriety of this course has been justified by the appearance, within the last ten days only, of several claims, of the existence of which the management had not the slightest suspicion.

Replying to the second stricture of your correspondent, the total receipts for the performance were $591, the total expenditures and claims so far as can be learned to date, were $646.31, showing a deficit of $45.31.

As your correspondent is apparently much exercised over the possibility of the appearance in the accounts of a large item under the head of "Sundries." I take pleasure in saying that no such nebulous item will appear in the account.

I infer from your correspondent's remarks that Plainfield must have had some unpleasant experience in this line heretofore, but the accounts of "A Russian Honeymoon" will constitute an exception to the rule.

Reverting to the second stricture, without questioning the "bona fides" of your correspondent in the slightest degree, it seems incredible that any person in the audience on the 9th of May could have dwelt under such a misapprehension of the numbers present as to suppose they represented a sum of seven hundred and fifty dollars.

As a matter of fact, the total seating capacity of the house is 866, including the boxes.

On the night of the performance about 300 seats were vacant in the balcony, which looked like a desert; 86 seats were vacant in the orchestra circle, and 17 seats were vacant in the orchestra. The four upper boxes were occupied by members of the chorus when their duties did not require their attendance on the stage.

To a casual observer, the singularly fine appearance of the audience invited the conclusion that the house was better filled than it really was, but the receipts tell the tale, and as I have already had the honor of advising the management of the "Relief Fund," the audience present actually fell below the full attendance to which we have been accustomed at the Casino plays, notably, the attendance of the 21st of February last, and at the "Grey Mare" on May 3rd and 17th, 1894.

Apologizing for so far trespassing upon your valuable space, I remain,

Faithfully yours,

Constantine P. Ralli,
Business Manager.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mrs. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else, then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottle at Randolph's drug store. ANNIE BEHIND THE BARS

BUT MOLLIE STILL ENJOYS THE FRESH AIR.

The MacDonald Girl, Side Partner of the Stevens Girl, Captured at Her Home.

Annie MacDonald who, with Mollie Stevens of this city, was rescued from the hands of Constable Wersinger by Edward Ryan and Charles Wood, of Linden township, on the night of Saturday, April 20th last, was Monday evening arrested at her home in Roselle and committed to jail.

There are two charges entered against Annie, one of disorderly conduct and the second larceny of a pair of handcuffs.

When the two girls were rescued from the constable by Ryan and Wood they were handcuffed together. Their rescuers took them to some house near by and, procuring a file, filed the bracelets and released the girls. The irons have never been recovered.

The girls both made good their escape, but Ryan and Wood were shortly afterward arrested for the part they took in the affair and are now suffering for it.

Ryan denied having had anything to do with the affair, but his companion chose the more manly part and pleaded guilty. Ryan had not been in jail long before it was discovered that he was a deserter from the regular army, and by request of the United States authorities was delivered over to them to be dealt with as a deserter. Woods is now serving time in jail.

The whereabouts of Mollie is still a mystery.

Track Athletics Killed By Professionalism.

The athletic clubs themselves have helped to destroy interest in ordinary field sports. For many years they made the giving of athletic games the whole purpose of their existence, and finding them popular, they multiplied them to replenish their treasuries. They pursued the idea that the winning of prizes by men wearing their club colors meant prosperity. They invented a system of athletic memberships, that signified anything that they desired it to mean, from free initiations, remitted dues, gratuitous board and lodging, to a business situation or cold cash, and they offered valuable prizes that could quite readily be converted into money. The consequences were inevitable; the tone of track athletics became so cheap and so common that the better portion of the club membership held aloof from it.—From "Life at the Athletic Clubs" by Duncan Edwards, in the July Scribner.

VICTORY FOR GOLD MEN

They Will Shape Kentucky's Democratic Platform.

Hardin's Man Made Temporary Chairman—The Committee on Resolutions 9 to 4 Against Silver—Senator Blackburn Beaten in His Own District for Chairman.

Louisville, June 26.—The first day of the democratic state convention proved that the prediction that the admistration and Secretary Carlisle would be favorites was correct. The silverites went into the district meetings in the morning, and into the convention at noon, with confidence. In the district meetings they were beaten two to one. They claimed four out of the eleven district members of the committee on resolutions, but the administration men claim that the committee stood eight to three, originally, against free silver, and as completed nine to four. The complexion of the committee could not have been changed by the appointment of both members-at-large from the silverites.

Admitted They Were Outclassed.

But when Judge William Beckner, as temporary chairman, divided the members-at-large, giving one of the two to each side, the silver men felt that they had been outclassed, although they would not confess to being outnumbered. They claimed a victory in the election of Beckner over Stone, but after the former divided the appointments equally on all committees, and announced his conservative views, no claims were made on him. Stone would have appointed only "sound money" men on the committees. Judge Beckner is a "sound money" man, but favors General Hardin for governor. Although General Hardin favors free coinage, he has been supported throughout by many who insist on a sound money platform for him.

Blackburn's Defeat.

The feature of the day was the defeat in his home district of Senator Blackburn for member of the committee on resolutions by Professor Arthur Yeager, a man of pronounced gold standard views, but who has devoted his time to college work and not to politics. Senator Blackburn aspired to the chairmanship of this committee, and expected to have a majority of its members with him for free coinage and against Cleveland and Carlisle. When Blackburn was defeated in the seventh district, it was ascertained that the Hardin men did not want to be embarrassed by his appointment as one of the members at large.

Resumed in a Great Hubbub.

Music hall was packed to overflowing when Chairman Beckner called the convention to order for the night session last evening. The convention began in a hubbub over a resolution offerred by Arthur Wallace, of Louisville, declaring it un-American to discriminate against any man or woman because of their religious preference. A motion to adjourn until 10 o'clock in the morning was made by the Clay men. The clerk was an hour in calling the roll, owing to the tremendous confusion. It was half an hour more before quiet could be sufficiently restored for the chairman to announce the results—601 noes to 217 ayes. After the announcement the disorder increased. A hundred motions were now made, but the chiarman recognized nobody.

Pandemonium Supreme.

At 1 o'clock this morning it looked as though business has come to an end for the night. For hours there was nothing but noise and confusion on the part of the vast assemblage. Every effort of the chairman to restore order was ineffectual. Hundreds of motions were made but none put to a vote, and the entire session was one continuous pandemonium.

Three Reports To Be Presented.

The committee on resolutions will make three reports. One of them, signed by John S. Rhea and W. T. Ellis, declares in favor of free coinage; the second, signed by J. D. Clardy and E. D. Walker, reaffirms the Chicago platform of 1892, which is a conservative endorsement of a gold standard, and a third to which is affixed the names of other members, endorses the administration and mentions especially the names of Carlisle and Cleveland.

The houses of Simon Lillibridge, George Stead, William Bushell and Oliver Bentley were slightly damaged by lightning. A. A. Maynard, Mrs. C. L. Swan and Albie L. Hale were stunned by lightning and marvelously escaped serious injury. Hail was drifted about in the parks six inches deep. Crops are laid low and greatly damaged.

Juan Ridez, a sailor, has brought suit in the United States district court for $50,000 damages for personal injuries sustained under the direction of the Andrina's master, Benjamin F. Smith. He says he is a resident of San Diego, Cal.; that he shipped from Calcutta to Galveston, and thence to some port in the United Kingdom. He claims that on various occasions he was beaten over the head with a belaying pin. Iron handcuffs were placed on his wrists, and he was strung up so that he could only reach the deck by standing on tiptoe, and was compelled to remain in that position forty eight hours, with only ten hours rest, causing great pain and permanent injury to his health.

LIVED ON RAW BIRDS.

Wrecked American Seamen Ill-treated on the Coast of Japan.

San Francisco, June 26.—Three survivors of the wrecked sealer Alta arrived here yesterday on board the schooner Sophia Sutherland from Hakodate. They tell a tale of extreme suffering after leaving their vessel in a dense fog off the coast of Japan in April. They reached the shore, but a landing was refused by the natives, who spoke English. When the men asked for food and water it was refused. For nine days they lived on birds, which they killed and ate raw. After considerable drifting they made a landing 100 miles from their first attempt. The American consul took charge of them when he learned of the case and sent them home by the Sutherland.

YELLOW FEVER RAGING

People Dropping Dead in the Streets of Santos.

Scenes in the City and Harbor Said To Be Harrowing—People Dying by Scores—Death Boat Visiting Vessels Day and Night Gathering in the Dead—Seamen Scarce.

Baltimore, June 26.—The American barkentine Priscilla, Captain Klages, arrived here last evening from Rio and Santos, with a cargo of 14,254 bags of coffee. Captain Klages reports that when the Priscilla left Santos, May 12, yellow fever was raging on every side, and the scenes in the city and harbor were harrowing.

Dropping Dead in the Streets.

Men were dropping dead in the streets, dying by scores in the city and on the vessels in port. Some of the vessels had their flags at half-mast day after day for weeks, as man after man of their crews succumed to the scourge. The death-boat was being rowed about the harbor day and night from vessel to vessel collecting the dead and taking them ashore for burial.

Vessels Without Crews.

Some of the vessels had only one or two men left of their entire crews, and many of them were unable to get away from the pest hole of fever owing to lack of men. Seamen were scarce, and when vessels lost their crew it was with the greatest difficulty men were secured to take their places.

Efforts to Secure Crews.

Captains of vessels had to exercise the greatest caution to prevent their crews deserting or being lured ashore by the boarding-house and shipping masters. J. M. Gayle, the first officer of the Priscilla, was stricken with yellow fever while in the harbor of Santos. He was removed to a hospital ashore and was sufficiently recovered to be taken aboard when the vessel sailed.

The Henry Murder Mystery.

New York, June 26.—New York detectives are now working with the Brooklyn police trying to unravel the mystery surrounding the murder of Charles W. Henry, the old miser, of South Portland avenue. BEAUTY IS POWER.

Perfection of Form, Feature, and Mind Render Women All-powerful.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Yet blended with those perfections must be perfect health. Women are today stronger in their character, better in their nature, truer in their love, warmer in their affections, than they ever were.

But most women do not know themselves; and often when their influence is doing the most good, break down. They drift gradually and unconsciously into that tempestuous sea of woman's diseases. Then they should remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restores natural cheerfulness, destroys despondency, cures leucorrhœa, — the great forerunner of serious womb trouble, — relieves backache, strengthens the muscles of the womb, and restores it to its normal condition, regulates menstruations, removes inflammation, ulceration, and tumors of the womb, etc.

It is a remedy of a woman for women. Millions of women owe the health they enjoy, and the influence they exert, to Mrs. Pinkham; and the success of her Vegetable Compound has never been equalled in the field of medicine for the relief and cure of all kinds of female complaints. So say the druggists.

Here is another one of thousands who speaks that others may know the truth:—

"For five years I suffered with falling of the womb, and all the dreadful aches and pains that accompany the disease. I tried several doctors and different medicines, until I lost all faith in everything. I had not tried your Compound. I watched your advertisements from day to day, and each day became more hopeful. At last I resolved to try it. I have taken seven bottles, and have gained forty pounds. My pains have all left me, and I am a well woman. I do all my own work, and can walk two miles without feeling tired. Your Compound has been worth its weight in gold to me. I cannot praise it enough." MATILDA EHNAM, Columbia, Lancaster Co., Pa.

BULLET-PROOF ARMOR

Lennard's Invention Tested at Governors Island.

Shots Fired from Jorgensen Army Rifles, with Smokeless Powder and 30-Calibre Steel Jacketed Bullets—Holes Made in One Plate, but Another Plate Only Indented.

New York, June 26.—There was an exhibition yesterday afternoon on Governor's island of the bullet-proof armor invented by W. Lennard, whose bullet-proof jacket has been somewhat widely discussed. Authority from Washington had been obtained and a couple of men from the Thirteenth infantry, under the direction of Capt. Florence, tested the resistence of the armor with the Krag-Jorgensen army rifle, the Winchester smokeless powder, with 30-calibre steel-jacketed bullets an inch and a half in length being used.

No Steel Used.

There were two samples of the armor, Nos. 1 and 2. They were about ten by twelve inches, with a thickness of two inches, and were covered with cloth to hide the character of the material of which the armor is composed. Mr. Lenard volunteered the information that no steel was used.

To Replace Steel Armor.

He said that he was no longer paying any attention to the bullet-proof jacket, but was endeavoring to interest the government in this armor, which is intended for use in naval construction. The advantage claimed for it is its lightness. While a cubic foot of steel weighs 480 pounds, a similar bulk of his No. 1 armor weighs 108 pounds, and of No. 2, 130 pounds.

Preliminary Tests.

A range of 100 feet was set off on the moat at Fort Columbus. A numer of shots were fired at a one-half inch steel plate and penetrated a quarter inch. Two shots were then fired which penetrated thirty-three inches of pine board and went through four inches more of oak backing. Then the Leunard armor was made the target of picked marksmen.

Effect on the New Armor.

The bullets penetrated the No. 2, the first tried, half an inch. No. 1, the lighter, contained holes, after the firing, of an inch and a half, but the bullets had not gone through. Mr. Lennard claimed they had been flattened on the inside. The army officers who witnessed the test would offer no opinions as to the merits of the armor. The test was not official, but Mr. Lennard says he has been invited to show what his armor can do at the Indian Head proving ground, and he will probably go to Washington for that purpose in August.

CORNELL CREW'S PRACTICE.

They Defeat the Canadians in a Row Over the Henley Course.

London, June 26.—The Cornell rowed over the full Henley course yesterday. The Canadian crew raced over the course with the Cornell men. The Canadians were beaten by two lengths at the start. The Cornell crew rowed a forty-four stroke all the way. They reached Fawley court in 4 minutes and 48 seconds, and finished in 7 minutes and 4 seconds. The conditions were favorable. There was a light current and a slight wind was blowing behind the racers. The Canadians had a start of 30 seconds and their time over the course was 7 minutes and 42 seconds, thus they were beaten by 7 seconds.

Georgetown Commencement.

Washington, June 26.—Georgetown university closed the school year yesterday with commencement exercises of unusual interest. GEN. GREEN C. SMITH DYING.

He Came Within Half a Vote of Running on the Ticket with Lincoln.

Washington, June 26.—Gen. Green Clay Smith, a descendant of the famous Kentucky statesmen Henry Clay, is dying of blood poisoning, occasioned by a malignant carbuncle, at his home in this city. Gen. Clay Smith was a candidate for vice-president against Andrew Johnson at the Baltimore convention of 1864, and came within half a vote of receiving the nomination on the ticket with Lincoln. He was the nominee of the prohibition party for president in 1876. He served two terms in congress from Kentucky. Gen. Smith's military career was a brilliant one and he was breveted major-general by President Lincoln for his gallantry in the field. He entered the Baptist ministry in 1869, came to Washington as pastor of the Metropolitan Baptist church in 1890, where he has continued since. He has been as popular as a minister as he was a politician and soldier

A ROYAL WEDDING.

Marriage of the Duke of Aosta and Princess Helene of Orleans.

London, June 26.—Prince Emanuele Filiberto, Duke of Aosta, nephew of King Humbert of Italy, was married yesterday at the church of St. Raphael, Kingston-on-Thames, to the Princess Helene of Orleans, second daughter of the Countess of Paris and sister of the Duke of Orleans, now pretender to the throne of France. Among the persons present were the Infanta Eulalie of Spain, the Prince of Wales, the Prince and Princess de Joinville, the Duke and Duchess of Fife, the Duke of Orleans, Prince Ferdinand of Roumania, the Prince of Naples, the Duke of Aumale, the Duke of Chatres, Princess Margaret of Orleans, and many other members of the royal families of Great Britain, Spain, Italy and Portugal; the Russian, German, Austrian-Hungarian and other ambassadors to Great Britain, and Sir Frederick Leighton, president of the Royal academy.

THE OUTRAGES IN THE EAST.

Vigorous Action of the French Minister at Pekin.

London, June 26.—A dispatch from Shanghai says that details have been received there of the outrages upon Americans and other foreigners at Chengtu, capital of the province of Sechuen, showing that their sufferings have been appalling. The viceroy of the province, it appears, encouraged the Chinese mob to destory the missionary and other property, and it is reported that a Chinese official attempted to behead Bishop Dunand. The French minister at Pekin has sent an ultimatum to the viceroy of Nanking demanding prompt redress of the wrongs done to foreigners, and announcing that in the event of non-compliance with the demands of France the commander of the French squadron will be empowered to act at his discretion.

EXCITEMENT IN THE CHAMBER.

Resolution Declaring Want of Confidence in Premier Crispi Lost.

Rome, June 26.—In the chamber of deputies last night the radicals introduced a motion declaring want of confidence in the Crispi government. This motion was rejected by a vote 383 to 151. When the result of the vote was declared there was a scene of considerable excitement, the radicals shouting "vive Cavallotti," and the government's supporters responding with cries of "vive Crispi." A group of students outside the chamber attempted to make a demonstration in favor of Signor Cavolotti, but was quickly dispersed by the police.

SALISBURY IS PREMIER

Also Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

Balfour Slated for First Lord of the Treasury and Chamberlain for Secretary of State of the Colonies—Outgoing Ministry Will Assist the New Government.

London, June 26.—When the news that Lord Salisbury had accepted the premiership and had undertaken the task of forming a cabinet was received at the political clubs last evening, speculation as to who would compose the new ministry was rife.

Chamberlain and Balfour.

It was subsequently announced that Joseph Chamberlain, the unionist leader in the house of commons, had been appointed to succeed the Marquis of Ripon as secretary of state for the colonies. It was also announced that A. J. Balfour had been appointed first lord of the treasury, in succession to Lord Rosebery, who held that position as well as the premiership. It is announced that the Marquis of Salisbury has received assurances that the outgoing ministry will assist the new government in passing the estimates in time to enable parliament to dissolve by July 10.

Names Officially Announced.

The members of the new ministry, so far as they have been selected, are officially announced as follows: Prime minister and secretary of state for foreign affairs, the Marquis of Salisbury; lord president of the council, the Duke of Devonshire; first lord of the treasury, Right Hon. Arthur James Balfour; secretary of state for the colonies, Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain; chancellor of the exchequer, Right Hon. Sir Michael Hicks-Beach; first lord of the admiralty, Right Hon. George Joachim Goschen.

Watching Gladstone's Course.

A great deal of interest centres in the course which Mr. Gladstone will decide to adopt. His secretary, when questioned on the subject, said that the liberal leader does not intend to issue a manifesto. He will remain in town for a few days and will then go to Hawarden. Mr. Gladstone spent the morning in disposing of an accumulation of letters and in the afternoon he visited the British museum.

Salisbury at Windsor.

The unionist leaders held a conference at Lord Salisbury's residence at 11 o'clock. The Duke of Devonshire, Mr. Balfour, Mr. Goschen and Sir Michael Hicks-Beach were present. The conference came to an end at 1:30 p. m., and Lord Salisbury almost immediately after took a train for Windsor. He arrived at Windsor at 2:35. His visit was unexpected, and, no royal carriage being in waiting at the station, his lordship walked to the castle unobserved. Soon after his arrival he had a private audience with the queen.

House Adjourns for a Day.

The house of commons met at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and after the transaction of minor business occupying forty minutes, adjourned until noon to-day. Sir William Harcourt, chancellor of the exchequer, said he had hoped to be able to give definite information at this time as to the course affairs would take, but it was impossible for him to do so, as such information was not in his possession. Therefore it was better that the house should adjourn.

Says His Father Is Out of Politics.

Certain liberals believe that Mr. Gladstone, having been physically fortified by his cruise in the North sea, will throw the weight of his influence and eloquence upon the side of his old colleagues, but the ex-premier's personal friends are strongly opposed to his taking any such course, fearing that the excitement and exertion might cause a physical reaction. The Hon. Herbert Gladstone this morning definitely stated that his father would take no further part in public life.

Irish Nationalists Hopeful.

Justin McCarthy, leader of the Irish Nationlist party and member of parliament for North Longford, expresses himself as confident that an appeal for funds to enable the members of his party to contest seats in the coming general election will meet with a prompt response. He says they are able to defend every seat which will be attacked if the necessary funds are forthcoming. It is expected that the Healyites will undertake an independent campaign, and they are said to be confident of securing a majority among the Irish nationalists in the new parliament.

Will Contest Every Irish Seat.

John Redmond, the Parnellite leader, member of the house of commons for the city of Waterford, announces the intention of the members of his party to contest every seat in Ireland at the coming general election.

An Offer to Dufferin.

The United Press learns that Lord Salisbury, besides becoming prime minister, will take the foreign portfolio temporarily. He has made overtures to the Marquis of Dufferin to resign his present office of British ambassador to France and become secretary of state for foreign affairs.

SENATOR QUAY'S INJURY.

The Sprain to His Ankle Very Serious—His Campaign Goes On.

Harrisburg, Pa., June 26.—Senator Quay is still unable to leave his room at the Lochiel hotel, but is directing his campaign for chairman of the state committee from that point. The injury to his ankle is really very serious, and it is doubtful if he will be able to walk for a week. He says it is somewhat better to-day, but he has the injured member resting on a big pillow and is not doing any walking. The senator refuses to discuss the political situation.

EVIDENCE OF GOOD GOVERNMENT.

The completion of the enumeration of the inhabitants of this city shows a wonderful growth in the last decade. In 1885 the population was 8,913 and the census just finished gives the city 13,629, outside of the borough, which is an increase of 4,716 in ten years. In 1890 the population was 11,267, an increase of 38.67 per cent over the population of 1880. Plainfield is now raised from a third-class to a second-class city, and will receive many benefits therefrom in the way of municipal government.

Though the figures of the borough enumeration have not yet been given out, it is safe to say that their increase in population is proportionately as large as in the city, which will approximate 6,000, thus giving a combined population of about 20,000.

This growth has not been attained by the booming process, which has made big towns grow small in less time than they grew large, but has been of a steady and substantial character. The primary cause is, of course, the natural and extremely desirable advantages of Plainfield as a place of residence; but secondarily, the reputation which both the city and borough officials have for conducting the local government in a clean, practical and economical manner are forces which have materially contributed to making Plainfield what it is. What it will be in the future naturally depends, to a great extent, on these same conditions prevailing.

Judging from past records, and there is every reason to believe that fully as creditable ones will continue to prevail, Plainfield may look forward a decade, and see itself one of the leading cities of New Jersey in population as it is today in wealth, fashion and intelligence.

The individual who is able to extract by domineering tactics the best efforts of others and apply them to what appears his own success, is the individual who is quickest to proclaim that success, and attempt to deride the efforts of others.

The Driver and the Gad.

A little excitement occurred in front of F. S. Rose's hardware store this morning. A two-seated wagon, containing two men and two women, had been standing in front of the store, when the driver decided to move on. He brought the whip down suddenly on the back of the horse, who, not enjoying such treatment, immediately commenced to dance. The harness could not stand the strain and, to the accompanient of the dancing horse and the screaming women in the wagon, snapped in several places. A visit to Abram's shoe store mended the breaks, and the party started on again.

DEVELOP A CHILD'S TALENT.

The Responsibility of Misfits in the World Placed With the Parents.

Mrs. Lemcke, who is a professional cook, is a philosopher as well. She says:

"Every child has a talent for something, and it is the duty of the parents to find out what each child's talent is. Do you know that most of the trouble in the world comes from people not being in their right places? We have ministers, doctors and lawyers who should be mechanics, blacksmiths, and, some of them, street sweepers. Mind you, I think a mechanic just as good as anything else, provided he is a successful one.

"Your child may be very smart in books. He may get a medal every week, and you perhaps think him the smartest boy in the world—that's a failing parents have—and yet that boy may turn out a failure. He surely will if you do not let him follow his bent. I'd rather raise ten boys than one girl. Find out what your boy's talent is and cultivate it in every way. If he is fond of tools buy them for him, and buy him books and papers that will teach him how to use them. Fit up a room for this purpose and allow him to do things about the house. Always be at home when he comes in from school, keep him busy and short of money, and I feel sure he will grow up a manly man.

"A woman was bragging to me not long ago about what a smart daughter she had. 'Why, she sits up over half of every evening reading, and it's always buy, buy, buy to keep her supplied with literature.'

"'And pray, what does she read?' said I.

"She mentioned over a dozen blood-and-thunder periodicals and books, and I said:

"'Madame, you are poisoning that girl's mind.'

"Now, that mother had better been finding what that poor girl's talent was and giving her things to read to develop it. More people are spoiled by bad literature than by liquor and tobacco. If we have a talent for what we undertake we stick to it until we succeed; if not we fail or flounder around like a fish out of water. The success of your children rests on your finding out what their bent is and making them follow it."

A Skeptic She.

A young woman from the treeless plains of the West had gone to Boston to a music school on her first trip East, and among the first persons she met at her boarding house was a youth from Bangor. As their acquaintance ripened she told him of what had interested her on her journey.

"Why," she said, with an exultant spirit, "I saw at one place in Pennsylvania a hundred saw logs in one pile."

"A hundred?" he asked, with a tinge of a smile.

"That's what they told me. You know, we don't have saw logs where I come from."

"Is that so? You ought to come to Maine once."

"Do you have them there?"

"Do we?" he replied, magnificently. "Do we? Why, my dear young lady, saw logs grow on trees in Maine."

"Really?" she asked in open eyed astonishment.

"It's a literal fact," he asserted, positively.

"Well, I don't believe it," she contended, and, do what he could, he could not convince her that he was telling the plain, unadorned truth.—Detroit Free Press.

Mrs. Bailey, colored, of Fanwood, was brought before Justice Mosher's court today, charged by her husband, Charles Bailey and Mrs. Mary Williams, colored, also of Fanwood, with assault and battery, with attempt to kill.

She therefore went for him with a club and chased him home. Mr. Bailey would not stay home because he was afraid of her, and to be on the safe side made a complaint. Mrs. Williams also claimed that she was assaulted.

After a hearing Justice Mosher put Mrs. Bailey under $200 bonds to keep the peace.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destored forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

CYCLING COMMENT.

A. H. Barnett has been training at the Crescent Oval for the last few days.

J. Fred MacDonald, the uptown grocer, takes a spin on a wheel occasionally.

Wesley Abbott and Howard Corlies will sail for their cycling trip through Europe on Saturday.

George F. Brown punctured the rear tire on his wheel a few days ago which necessitated his riding another wheel t ll it could be repaired.

A prominent cyclist in Plainfield says that the rarity of Plainfield air is caused by the immense quantity used in filling pneumatic tires on bicycles.

A long-distance rider passed through Plainfield yesterday afternoon well provided for any emergency. The tires on his wheel were single-tube, and he carried an extra one strapped to his handle-bars.

Plainfield has a speedy little rider in William M. McCutchen. He is now training for the races at Paterson on July 3d and 4th, and is also expected to enter in the National meet at Asbury Park. When riding a flying quarter, without pace-makers, on the Crescent Oval, he made the very fast time of 27 3-5 seconds.

To the physically frail man and woman, boy and girl, we would offer a word of caution regarding hard and long rides. Never mind if you cannot ride a century, you can ride ten miles with much enjoyment, and you will probably remain on earth much longer by selecting the shorter distance, and get a bigger reception from the cycling angels when you die.—American Wheelman.

Johnson, in the event of failing to meet Zimmerman in a series of match races this summer, has been laying plans to take in all the big amateur meetings during June and July and earn a nice revenue by riding exhibitions. He has also aspirations to go to Cologne and represent America in the professional events at the international championship meet. In the absence of Zimmerman, who starts for Australia in August, no man is better fitted to represent this country in the professional championships, and it is doubtful if any of the foreign professionals are in Johnson's class.

With the thousands of new recruits in cycling, the touring season will doubtless be unusually active. It is generally the case that the new recruit is seized with a burning desire to take a long trip awheel, and sooner or later finds himself with a party bound for some point of attraction, say a hundred miles away. Such journeys invigorate the mind and the body as well, if taken in a leisurely manner. The cost is small, well within the means of the average clerk, and if he fails to reap a harvest of health and recreation it is his own fault. A vacation spent awheel riding through the country is truly a good investment.—New York Times.

The annual century run of the Associated Cycling Clubs of New Jersey, in connection with the National League meet at Asbury Park, will take place July 6th, starting at five p. m. from Broad street, Newark. The Asbury Park Wheelmen have presented to the association two solid silver cups, one valued at $100, to be awarded to the club bringing through the greatest number of survivors, and one valued at $50 for the club bringing through the second greatest number of survivors. Besides this the association will present five handsome banners, one to the club from Pennsylvania bringing through the greatest number of survivors from that State, one to the club from New York or Brooklyn who do likewise for their State, two to the clubs in the association first and second, and one for a club from any state not eligible to compete for the above. For the benefit of the New York, Brooklyn, and Long Island riders a boat leaves foot of Barclay street, New York at 4:35 a.m., July 6th, and connects with train for Newark, at Hoboken, which will be prepared to take on wheels. This train arrives in time for the start in Newark. Carl von Lengerke, Captain of the South Orange Field Club Cyclers, will act as captain of the run this year, and will have for his assistance Messrs. George C. Wheeler of the Westchester League of New York, and Joseph Estoclet of Philadelphia, to act as pacemakers.

—Philip Schauble, the well-known proprietor of the New Point Hotel, near the Elizabethport station, has sold out his interest in the business and has retired. Mr. Schauble has purchased the Baremore estate, and will thoroughly renovate the house.

SCULPTOR ROGER'S MOVING.

He Can Work No More. Famous Masks and Models to Be Sold.

Among the changes which the coming of May day occasioned was one in which artists and art lovers will take an especial interest. All that made the interior of the home of John Rogers, the sculptor, beautiful and attractive was packed in boxes and shipped to New Canaan, Conn., where the famous worker in clay has a country seat, and where he intends to spend the remaining years of his life.

About a year ago Mr. Rogers became afflicted with palsy which rendered his right hand so unsteady as to compel him to give up, probably forever, the work to which he had given the best part of his life to.

For many years Mr. Rogers did all of his modeling in a studio in the rear of his residence. When this was being dismantled a number of the sculptor's original casts were found, which not only have a great artistic interest attaching to them, but they also have a rare value.

Among the number are masks of Henry Ward Beecher, Robert Colyer, William Lloyd Garrison, Alexander Hamilton, President Lincoln, and Charles Sumner. The mask of Beecher was made in 1860, just after he returned from England, where he had gone to preach against slavery. The mask of Garrison was made before that time. Lincoln's was made in 1860 and Colyer's in 1875. It was from the mask found in moving that the mask of Beecher now in Plymouth Church was made.

There was also found the original of Mr. Rogers's famous "Shylock," busts of William Cullen Bryant and William Parker, equestrian figures of Gen. Sherman and Gen. Sheridan, after which the statuary in the Capitol at Washington were made, and the group entitled "We Boys," "The Interrupted Courtship," "The Negro Slave Auction" and "The Foundling."

Beside these there are more than 100 of the original models from which many of the most famous of the Rogers groups were made.

YOUR SCALP! During the heats of summer does it become irritated and invite an occasional friendly scratch? To wash it is well, but not too often, lest your hair become "brash" and stiff. But treat it twice or thrice a week with our Petroleum Hair Tonic—a little rubbed in with your finger ends, and you will find the feeling of comfort and coolness truly delightful. Positively nothing equals it as a balm for the woes of your scalp. Sprinkler bottles 50c. Only at Godey's Magazine.

Godey's Magazine for July appears in a cover by Lincoln, and presents a most attractive appearance among the magazines of the month. The table of contents as usual offers many and varied articles, and cannot fail to interest every member of the family. The reproduction of the famous pictures of the "Battle of Gettysburg" is appropriate for the anniversary of this stirring event which changed the history of our country. Under the caption of "An American Drama" Beaumont Fletcher discusses the recent dramatization of Mark Twain's story by Frank Mayo, a work of much importance in the progress of the American stage. Other leading articles are devoted to the history of the Stars and Stripes, Smith College, the recent exhibition of the National Sculpture Society, and the greatest American composer, E. D. MacDowell. The Godey Company, 52-54 Lafayette place, New York.

While in Topeka last March, E. T. Barber, a prominent newspaper man of La Cygne, Kansas, was taken with cholera morbus very severely. The night clerk at the hotel where he was stopping happened to have a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and gave him three doses which relieved him and he thinks saved his life. Every family should keep this remedy in their home at all times. No one can tell how soon it may be needed. It costs but a trifle and may be the means of saving much suffering and perhaps the life of some member of the family. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

While at Peekskill, N. Y., Mr. J. A. Scriven, a prominent manufacturer of New York City, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Such good results were obtained from its use that he sent back to the druggist from whom he had obtained it for two more bottles of the same remedy. When you have a cough or cold give this preparation a trial and like Mr. Scriven you will want it when again in need of such a medicine. It is a remedy of great worth and merit. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

I have two little grandchildren who are teething this hot summer weather and are troubled with bowel complaint. I give them Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and it acts like a charm. I earnestly recommend it for children with bowel troubles. I was myself taken with a severe attack of bloody flux, with cramps and pains in my stomach, one-third of a bottle of this remedy cured me. Within twenty-four hours I was out of bed and doing my housework. Mrs. W. L. Dunagan, Bonaqua, Hickman Co., Tenn.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE.

The Eagle of Austerlitz Mated With a Hapsburg.

BIRTH OF THE KING OF ROME.

Fifty Guns Announce to Paris That an Heir to the Throne Is Born—French Reverses In Spain—Holland Annexed to France. Russia Throws Down the Gage of Battle.

[Copyright, 1895, by John Clark Ridpath.]

XIX.—DOMESTIC AND IMPERIAL CLIMAX.

When Napoleon crowned himself with the iron crown of the Lombards, Josephine was not with him. That was at Milan in 1805—more than four years ago. Why was the Empress not by his side on that day as she had been in Notre Dame on the day of the coronation? If he be King of Italy, shall she not, by like reason, be Queen of Italy?

Note the movements of this prodigious intellect: "If I crown her queen of Italy"—so was he saying to himself—"that may be a bar against the possible. Nothing must be a bar against the possible. My heir must be king of Rome; and his mother must be queen of Italy; but Josephine is childless. The crown of Italy must be reserved for her who may be the mother of my king of Rome." Such was probably the cogitation of the sleepwalker on his way to Milan, a la Charlemagne.

The act of the Senate which made Napoleon Emperor declared the crown to be hereditary in his family. Josephine had children; but they were by her precedent lord. Eugene Beauharnais was capable, but he was not a Bonaparte. The decree of 1807 naming Jerome as successor was not satisfactory. It began to be said that there was a state necessity that an heir be born to Napoleon himself. The state necessity was not effectual with her who was nearly forty-seven! The premises had one conclusion only—divorce.

All the world knows the story. The Empress had both man and nature against her. As to the Corsican, she had lived with him for nearly fourteen years. She knew too well the futility of resisting him. It would seem that all expedients were useless. At length the Emperor's mind was made up. He broke his purpose to Josephine as gently as might be, at Malmaison. The divorce was arranged on the 15th and 16th of December, 1809. The Bonapartes had now full satisfaction. No child of Josephine should ever wear the diadem of France. Napoleon did as much as he might to alleviate her despair. He left her Malmaison, her title of Empress, and a pension of two million francs. He had loved her with a fitful and tyrannical fondness. He had by no means been faithful to her; and many a slander of the envious said that she had been unfaithful to him.

After the fallen, Whom? Would the Emperor of the French, son of the mulberry-woman of Ajaccio choose another—as he had chosen the first—by nature and nature's law. Or would he calculate? Would he find in Vendee or Cotes du Nord or Lorraine some peasant girl, some Pucelle of Arc, and make her—as he had made himself—Imperial, and from her wait to see springing his possible lion's whelp, so coveted—and necessary? Or would he, hoping to pacify the past, choose some princess out of the House of his friends—such friends as Gustavus or Alexander or Frederick William or Francis?

The politician prevailed over the man, even in Napoleon. The splendors of dynastic glory obliterated the plebeian instincts of his nature. The eagle of Austerlitz dove into the thicket of the past, and mated with a Hapsburg! Maria Louisa, child of our well-beloved brother, the good and faith-keeping Francis, whose subjects we lately met on the field of Wagram (lo, the blood frozen there is still bright-red in the ice!) is our choice. By this way we will confirm our Imperial House; and our King of Rome shall have a royal mother. We will love her, by the political rule-of-three; and she shall love us, by the calculus of necessity.

There was little delay. Maria Louisa was appalled at the prospect—at the first. The woman in such cases is hard to quench. But Francis would have an Emperor for a son-in-law; and the daughter of Francis assented. With swift preliminaries the royal cavalcade, on the 13th of March, 1810, swept out of Vienna, bearing her to her fate. On the 1st of April, at the old palace of St. Cloud, shining splendidly for the occasion, the civil marriage was performed. The Pope refused to approve the divorce of Josephine. Most of the cardinals, declining to bless the marriage, were stripped of their scarlet regalia and banished from Paris.

In the Tuileries, Maria Louisa sought at first to play the part of Imperatrice with gaiety and good-will. Tradition adds that Napoleon loved her. Certainly he said so; and his future conduct in the marital relation was more exemplary than before. There were no more Madame Foures, Countess Grassinis, Madame 's, Stephanies, Eloenores, Hortenses, Walewskas, or other beautiful Uncertainties on the horizon. But the vivacity and charm of the court of Josephine never returned. She at least had accomplishments.

The new Empress fulfilled her part with the apathetic smile of a Hapsburg. On the night of the 20th of March, 1811, the fiftieth gun from the battery announced to Paris a-tiptoe that the Imperial programme had been fulfilled to the letter; the King of Rome was born! Josephine, at Malmaison, might almost have heard the artillery and shouting. Would she have smiled if the firing had ceased with the forty-ninth gun? That would have meant a daughter!

In May of 1810 it could be said of Napoleon that he had had his way. In a few instances his prodigious dreams had dissipated into naught; but only in a few. His great scheme of planting French civilization in Northeastern Africa and of carrying thence the tricolor to Damascus, Aleppo and Bagdad, had failed. His project of making Constantinople the outpost of France in the East had vanished like a chimera. His hope of beating England on the sea ended with Trafalgar. But for all the rest, what was left unfulfilled to the Dreamer and Iconoclast? Out of the mulberry patch in Ajaccio he had risen to the supreme seat of power in the most splendid capital of the world. And he was not yet forty-one!

As for war, that had sunk into muttering and growling on the horizon. During the year no great battle was fought in Europe. Napoleon had the land; and the sea was England's. In the Spanish peninsula, the English and French armies advanced or receded by strategic movements. In that country, General Wellesley had struggled hard to uphold the fortunes of Ferdinand VII. In 1809 the allies had suffered great hardships and reverses. Wellesley had to get himself behind the line of the Torres Vedras, only a short distance from Lisbon; there he lay at bay.

The reign of King Joseph was established in the greater part of Spain. At one time the British arm hardly reached out forty miles from Lisbon. On July 27th and 28th, Wellington (for he was now Lord Wellington) won the bloody battle of Talavera. Soult was not able to withstand him; but Napoleon sent more than 350,000 men across the Pyrenees, and the British with their allies were obliged to find safety again behind the Torres Vedras. Massena with his six hundred guns could not dislodge or drive his enemy further. He could not tempt Wellington into the field. During the whole year 1810 the nearest approach to a battle was that of Busaco, where on the 27th of September the French suffered an unimportant reverse. Not until the 5th of May, 1811, were the British able in the open field to capture Almeida; not until the 19th of January, 1812, did Ciudad Rodrigo yield to Wellington. On the 6th of April he captured Badajoz.

Twice already Joseph Bonaparte had been driven from the throne; and twice had he been replaced by the Emperor. His third flight from his precarious Kingdom did not occur till 1813, when he left Cadiz never to return. Napoleon with his new empress sat for a while in Paris. There were other domestic troubles besides his own. He had obliged King Louis of Holland to marry Hortense Beauharnais. In this case there was repugnance on both sides. Louis wanted a schoolmate of his sister Caroline, and Hortense, horribile dictu, loved not Louis but Napoleon! So said a scandal which has not yet died out of the world. The king and the queen were never at one. Napoleon wished Louis to govern the Dutch for him; and Hortense supported this theory. Louis showed signs of practical sense, and would rule the Low Countries for their own advantage. Holland was closely allied in interest with England; for commerce was the resource of both.

In 1809 Louis was urged by Napoleon to suppress the British sympathies of his subjects, cut off intercourse with England, and build a navy for France. Just after Wagram there was a stormy interview between the brothers at Paris. The Emperor, not trusting Louis, sent French troops to occupy Amsterdam. Matters went to such a pitch that on the 1st of July, 1810, Louis was obliged to abdicate. The Emperor's threat to annex Holland to France was carried out; and the ex-king retired into Austria.

Napoleon's system of ruling by subordinate kings did not work well. In such a system there were more wills than one; and there must be but One. The One more and more declared himself. The absorption of Holland was followed, in December of 1810, with the annexation of the Hanse towns and the whole northern coast of Germany. If, on New Year's Day, 1811, the status in quo could have been acknowledged—as it was ready to be by all the Powers except Great Britain—the dream of Charlemagne II. for a European Empire might be regarded as fulfilled.

From the Pyrenees to the Baltic and eastward to the limits of the Continent there was nominal peace; but on all seas the war-fleets and merchant-ships of England terrorized and tempted the nations. The need of Europe for the products of Great Britain was an argument that tantalized all harbors from Riga to Sevastopol. Europe was hungry for goods, and the Continental blockade forbade it. In 1810-11 the anti-French party in St. Petersburg was reinforced by the commercial classes demanding intercourse with England. The Czar, though he had ratified the treaty of Schonbrunn, looked with ever-increasing jealousy on the unappeased ambition of his friend Bonaparte. He saw the Duchy of Warsaw growing on his borders. He saw Oldenburg, a fief of the Romanoffs, annexed to the French Empire. He saw the wellnigh successful attempt to construct a Northern Confederation out of Warsaw, Denmark and Sweden. He saw sixteen nations contributing their quotas to the Grand Army of France. He saw in his own harbors the secret violation of existing agreements, and blinked the offense. From that day the prodigious final struggle of France and Russia was inevitable. Alexander concluded a treaty with the Sultan, and planted an army of 90,000 men on his western borders.

The crisis came by the act of Sweden. The childless Charles XIII. had taken for his heir that Charles John Bernadotte whom we saw at Austerlitz. Marshal of France and Prince of Ponteeorvo, he became, in 1810, crown prince of Sweden and Norway. Like Louis Bonaparte in Holland, he was lukewarm in supporting the Continental blockade; for the Swedes were in need of British goods. The pennon of St. George began to be seen in the harbors of Pomerania. Bernadotte would not expel the ships of England, and in reprisal the Swedish vessels were seized in the ports of Germany. Marshal Davout, sent into Pomerania to enforce the blockade, enforced it; and Bernadotte appealed to the Czar for aid. Alexander heard the call, and answered aye! The gage of tremendous battle was thrown down by the Muscovite, and accepted by the Corsican.

Purifying Water.

While the importance of pure water is universally admitted and ways of obtaining it are said to be many and certainly are complicated, it is a consolation to find some simple formula that will purify ordinary water, especially in reservoirs and filtering basins. The preparation is composed of calcium permanganate, 1 part; aluminium sulphate, 10 parts; fine clay, 30 parts. These are thoroughly mixed and one part is added to about 10,000 parts of water. It is said that even sewer drainage is almost completely purified by this mixture. It precipitates all of the impurities and living organisms, and the clear portion may be drawn off and used with perfect safety. This is simple and surely of great value, especially where malarial conditions prevail.—New York Ledger.

CHAPTER III.—THE NIGHT OF DREAD.

Sir James and I took supper that Saturday night in his own dining-hall, where we found a fire on and the table set. For it had been the first of his concern when we came to the house of James Marr to send a messenger to the mansion house to warn them of our arrival.

But this very anxious care of his brought trouble upon him. For so soon as we entered the hall, I heard a shrill voice call to Sir James from an upper room. He went within, leaving one Spofforth, his servitor, to take me to the supper chamber. Then I heard the sharp tongue which I took to be that of the Lady Standsfield berate Sir James because that he had not come straight to his own home, but had gone to a change-house with a guest. What Sir James said in reply I could not hear. Nor, indeed, did I hold it to be my duty to listen over carefully, for the excuse which a man makes to his wife concerns himself alone, and even the church claims no authority over such privileged communications. In a little space Sir James came within the chamber and partook of supper with me, speaking clear and soberly as was his wont upon certain books of sermons which he loved to read, such being his taste. But of his family, or of the sorrow concerning his son, he spake no further word.

Then, so soon as the clock had chapped ten, he rose and called in the servants to worship, which at his request I took, praying about the space of three-quarters of an hour, and never better in my life, as is great comfort to me now to think upon. After this, without a word spoken, he rose. I would have returned to speak of other things, but he checked me with a solemn movement, strange in one that hitherto had been so merry withal.

"After the Buik on Saturday night," he said, "it is our custom to take our candles and get to bed."

So, with a dignified and gracious mien, he lighted me to my room, with gravity and affection shook me by the hand, and so departed, taking leave of me without a word. As all may believe, it was with some fear upon me because of the saying of Renwick and the power of the evil spirits that I laid me down. For strange as it may appear, so long as I shared the fanatic opinions and lay abroad in the fields, I was not feared of the devil himself; but would have wrestled with him had he come upon me in the heather, where oft it was my hap to lie alone. Yet since I drew in, and set my feet in milder courses and easier ways, I have been none so set in my mind; but as it were, more easily feared and less assured of my interest.

Nevertheless, I laid me down, and what with the tiredness of a long day's travel and our so recently having well supped, I was asleep before I knew it. Yet it was a troubled and unstable rest, with many startings and much uneasiness, for I felt that there was that about the house that night which was more than canny. I knew not how long I slept; but it must have been well into the deep silence of the night that I was waked out of sleep by a cry so wild, so strange and so loud, that it shook my reasonable soul within me. Yet it seemed that I must have heard it in my dream, for only the echoes of it lingered in my ears when I sat up in bed, trembling, and with my night-gear damp about me with the affrightment.

Never had I heard so great and fearful a crying. It seemed to me like the crying of a demon from whom one stronger has snatched a prey. But with the perturbation in mine own head, and the dashing of my spirits by the unearthly cry which awoke me, I could not tell whether the noise was in mine own imagination or whether I really had heard it. But it was soon clear to me that the confused din about the house which went and came like a fitful wind was no imagination, but proceeded from the machinations of the evil spirits which Mr. Renwick had presaged would follow me. Then, indeed, I was in a terror to which all that had gone before was as nothing.

Sometimes the noise seemed like the confused sound of many persons walking and struggling together. Whereat I knew that the fiends strove to be at me, but were restrained by some One that for the moment was stronger—as it might be, my good guardian angel. So I endeavored to fall to the praying. But such was the power of Satan, and such the tremor of my spirit, that all the prayers I knew had departed from me. No words came to my mind save some old babbles of the mathematics I had learned long ago when I was at the Edinburgh college, which now stood me in no stead at all, for the least little imping devil cares no jot for all the mathematics of Euclid.

Then there came again the din of voices louder than before, the trampling of many feet in the rooms above me, and along the transe. At last I heard them come through the passage, as it had been to enter at my door. Then at last I got strength to leap from my bed, and make a shift to bolt my door, which may well seem a daft-like thing to do. For what would evil spirits care for bolts, whose ordinary way of entering a chamber is through the keyhole.

When I had locked the door I fell on my knees, and, mine eyes being opposite to the latchet-hole, I looked through, and saw what seemed to me very terrible—the form of a man, all black, stand with a light behind him, and with a bare shining sword in his hand that pointed straight to my chamber door. And all the house about me and the dense air were filled with the sound of groaning and little sharp shrieks of ultimate agony, as of one that wished to die but could not. Whereat, for very agony, I fainted away.

When I came to myself I lay along the wall by the door, rigorously cold and as it had been stark frozen by reason of the bitterness of the night. The house was silent within, and the latch-hole dark. But about the house and about there went the same whispering and crying of fiends, rising and falling—now sharp and quarrelsome, now more laigh and fearsome, till in a little time the crying came again worse than ever below my chamber window. So, before I dared to look out, not knowing but what I might see the devil and all his angels at carnival, I made shift to commend me for preservation and protection to the majesty of God.

At last I manned courage to go to the window, and, looking out, I saw upon the thin sprinkling of snow that had fallen in the night, the veritable resemblances of evil spirits, dragging away that which seemed to be a heavy burden. And once more, even as I looked forth, there came the terrible crying voice that awakened me, as high as before, so that again I fell down as a dead man.

Nevertheless, though I own that in things which are so counted of the flesh, I am far from being a brave man, yet now, from very desperation, and because I feared that the evil spirits would come and take me away in like manner when they had disposed of their present burden, I gat courage to rise and do my breeches upon me. Then I went out and followed on to see what the spirits might contrive. But because by their master's arts they were invisible, I saw no more of them till I had stumbled down the steep bank to the river side.

It is an ill place thus to adventure into under silences of night, for the trees grow close together, so that I knocked and bruised myself as I went. But to my great joy I came, by-the-way, to a little burn with water still running in it in spite of the frost. So this I crossed, and when once I stood on the other side I thanked God, knowing that no evil spirit could now overpass to me.

Then, whether it was that by my crossing of the running water the spells of the spirits had no power to render them invisible, or whether it was that my eyes had become more accustomed to the darkness of the night, but as I stood behind a great rough tree I again gat sight of the demons with their burden. They were scrambling by the side of the water, and I saw them lay their burden upon a cake of floating ice which the chief devil drew toward him with a thing like a shepherd's "clep" or crook.

Then I was again in some fear lest this should be some cantrip by which they might get the power to overpass running water, and so get at me to tear me in pieces—as is their devilish wont with Christian ministers when they grip them. But as I looked I saw the demons stand and stamp upon the margin of the water as though the matter did not progress to their satisfaction. Then the chief black fiend that held the crook, stelled and pushed with it upon the broad piece of ice, so that I saw it slowly turn about like a wheel upon its axle, and, with the black burden still upon it, glide out of my sight down the water. The company of demons (as in my fantasy I thought them) stood there, as it had been, watching their strange ship and its cargo depart for another country. Then I heard them clamber, crying and quarreling as before, up the bank out of my sight.

How I ever got back to my chamber I know not, but certain it is that when the serving woman came the next morning to light my fire she found me, with bleeding feet and scanty garments, lying in the midst of the floor, as one that had been overtaken unseemly, and the bed-coverlets all thrown hither and thither, even as I had cast them abroad when I leaped from my bed.

By which I am encouraged to think that the fury of the fiend had been mercifully restrained in my case, and that Providence had more interest in me, in spite of my shortcomings, than in my modesty I had believed.

THE ART OF SPELLING.

Many Distinguished People Who Were Miserable Failures in This Direction.

A little boy examined before a magistrate was asked to spell the sentence, "I am grateful for the benefits I have received." He managed to spell it all correctly except the last word, which he wrote thus, "recieved."

The magistrate pronounced this to be "fatal," and sent the lad to school. Enforce the rule impartially all around, and where would be half the world's celebrities?

Take two ladies first. Sarah Bernhardt cannot spell well, and one of our own most celebrated actresses does not always spell correctly. In a recent autograph letter of hers we find "occured."

Then Bismarck never could spell. He, himself, has confessed to "a lack of diligence at school," as a consequence of which his letters contain many spelling errors. John Bright was another statesman somewhat weak in the same particular.

Among literary men a famous journalist is a conspicuously bad speller. A brief examination of his manuscripts is generally sufficient to discover an error. In a short letter of his occurs the curious blunder "populer."

But plenty of authors slip occasionally. Even Oliver Wendell Holmes makes a mistake in spelling the rather common word "indispensable," which he writes "indispensible."—Pearson's Weekly.

THE CLIFF DWELLERS.

Ruins of Their Homes, Which Were Six Stories High and Had 500 Rooms.

In New Mexico and Arizona there are hundreds of ruins of huge houses among the cliffs, from four to six stories in height and some of them having over 500 rooms. They were built by the Pueblo Indians, who, before the new world was discovered, were living in their strange houses that were forts, almost secure from attack by their inveterate foes, the fierce Apaches. While hundreds of them are crumbling with the dust of centuries, some have been occupied by Pueblos within historic times. They were invariably of stone and laid with remarkable skill. They are all terraced and the front of the buildings look like flights of gigantic steps.

There are no doors or windows in the outer walls, and no stairs, all entrance being by ladders. They built their houses where nature had arranged for their security, in the cliffs or on the tops of mesas or rock islands. Modern research has proved that the "cliff dwellers" are not an extinct race, but have moved from the deserted ruins as the centuries went on, and that the descendants are the present Pueblo Indians, a peculiar and interesting people, living comfortably, peaceable and industrious. —Philadelphia Press.

Barefoot Babes in Boston.

Here in Boston are two physicians whose children go barefoot all the year round. The writer is one of these. My three children, aged four and one-half, three and one-quarter and one and one-half years, have never been shod indoors, and they have been barefooted much in warm weather outdoors, and would never be seen with shoes and stockings on in summer and the warm weather of fall and spring but for the ignorant prejudice of those about us. We are aware of being severely blamed for our "cruelty," but the children delight in their freedom from boots and stockings, and cannot get them off soon enough on entering the house. Our eldest, a girl, goes to kindergarten, and is the only one out of about fifty pupils who is barefoot. The head teacher is a very bright and gracious woman, who has managed to prevent pupils and visitors from making the little barefoot girl uncomfortable by unfavorable remarks. None of our children has had any sign of throat troubles, and I believe the experience of the other physician mentioned—a leading regular—has been equally satisfactory as regards the condition of his three children. —Health-Culture.

The Course of True Love.

"Bridget," said Mrs. Housekip, "I understand that you have jilted the man who drives the ice wagon for the milkman."

"Thrue for yez, ma'am. Oi hov thot same," was the reply.

"And that damp spot on the doorstep is all there is to show for the twenty pounds of ice we take?"

"Yis'm."

"Well, Bridget, you can either arrange to be a sister to both of them or you can look for another place."—Washington Star.

First Impression of Chicago.

"Uncle George," said the little boy from the country, "are these the buildings they call sky scrapers?"

"They are, Tommy," answered the city uncle.

Tommy took a comprehensive look overhead.

"The sky does need scrapin' here pretty bad, don't it, Uncle George?" he rejoined.—Chicago Tribune.

Indisputable.

Mabel—But, papa, I know that he must have money. He doesn't attempt to conceal it.

Papa—That settles it. He hasn't any. —Boston Transcript.

A Stand off.

Olebatch—The girls are not so pretty as they were 20 years ago.

Miss Herte—Well, neither are you.—Indianapolis Journal.

Just Possible.

Sassafras—Do you believe patent medicines cures?

Boneset—I guess they cure some fool women of being so free with their testimonials and photographs.

Westfield Gives a Telephone Franchise.

The Westfield Township Committee met Monday night and decided to make no change in the style of sewer underdrains, but to put in four miles more of them than was at first contemplated, at an extra cost of about $2,000. The franchise for a telephone system was given to the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, and the ordinance granting it will be ready at the next meeting. There was a sharp tilt between Chairman Gardiner and Committeeman Welles, during which Mr. Gardiner said that he did not propose to be sat upon by the other members of the committee, and if they persisted in doing it he should get even when the opportunity presented itself. A note for $2,000 was ordered discounted.

Almost a Runaway.

There was a narrow escape from a runaway on West Front street, yesterday afternoon. A private carriage was coming down Madison avenue and just escaped being run into by a car. The horse became frightened and started to run into the vacant lot next to Peck's but was stopped before he could do any damage.

—Monday's rain was just what the Park Club tennis courts needed and after being newly marked out, gave pleasure to a number of the athletic boroughites yesterday afternoon.

DON'T

You believe our advertisements are true? Sometimes we think you do, and then again we don't; because when we advertise a good thing (and we never advertise anything else) you may come in a week after the goods are advertised, ask for them and they are all sold and then you doubt, but we can't blame you, there is so much fibbing in advertisements. Not ours, like the man we once knew, but that's too long a story and this is more

A PRETTY HOME WEDDING.

A HANDSOME ARLINGTON AVENUE MARRIAGE EVENT.

The Home Beautified With Radiant Faces, Charming Manners, Showers of Congratulations and Fragrant Flowers.

The home of Mrs. Isabelle Ollif on Arlington avenue was last night the scene of one of the prettiest weddings of the season, when her daughter, Miss Sarah Currie, was united in marriage to Percy VanAlstyne, son of Mr. and Mrs. William VanAlstyne. The rooms were beautified with ferns, greens, roses and palms.

An alcove in the rear parlor was profusely decorated with the choicest flowers over which was a bower of greens and ferns. Seated in the front parlor was P. Ludwig Conde and his orchestra, and from six to seven o'clock a delightful programme of classical music was rendered. At seven o'clock while the orchestra was giving a perfect rendition of Mendelsohn's wedding march, the bride, preceded by her sister, Miss Harriett Currie, as maid of honor, entered the parlor leaning on the arm of her mother. At the same time the groom and best man, Clarence VanAlstyne, cousin of the groom, and Rev. C. L. Goodrich entered from a rear room, and the bridal party met at the alcove where the ceremony was performed. The bride was given away by her mother.

The bride was gowned in white brocaded silk, trimmed with point lace and lillies of the valley, and carried a bridal bouquet of white roses. The maid of honor wore a gown of white taffeta silk, and carried a bouquet of pink roses.

A reception room just off the rear parlor was prettily trimmed and Mr. and Mrs. VanAlstyne were showered with the best wishes of all present.

Supper was then served by Max Wiertz in his usual faultless manner.

The decorations of the table were pink and white.

The ushers were J. E. S. Petrie and George Sterling, of Plainfield.

The guests present were: Mr. and Mrs. William Van Alstyne, Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Ollif, Mrs. Becker, William Van Alstyne, Jr., Mr. an Mrs. L. J. Van Alstyne, Plainfield; Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Van Alstyne, Miss Van Alstyne, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Sutherland, Miss Van Alstyne, Chatham Centre, N. Y.; Mrs. F. M. Vreeland, East Millstone; Mr. and Mrs. Chadsey, Miss Parsons, New York city; Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Stillwell, Gravesend, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. John Suydam, Miss Suydam, Parkville, N. A large number of costly and useful presents were received.

Mr. and Mrs. Van Alstyne will go at once to New York, and take up their residence on One Hundred and Thirty-Fourth street, where the groom has a handsomely furnished home.

New Quarters Secured.

The fire that partially destroyed the Liberty building in New York, yesterday, damaged very slightly the property of the Columbia Telephone Manufacturing Company, of which W. M. Miner, of East Sixth street, is chief electrician, the building was rendered unsafe however, but through the energy of Mr. Miner, new quarters were secured by noon and the work of removing at once began. The company will now occupy part of the building at the corner of Washington and Cedar streets.

To The Mountain by Water.

Harry and Herbert Johnson, of La Grande avenue, and their friend, Charles W. Darlon, left New York on Tuesday morning on their naptha launch, "Plainfield," on their way to Mr. Johnson's cottage on the shores of Lake Champlain. Yesterday they arrived in Albany at four o'clock p. m., and reported having had a glorious time. This is not their first long trip, as they have made the journey several times before.

HYDROPHOBIA AFFLICTED HORSE

Necessary to Kill the Animal Because of His Ugliness.

A very valuable horse, belonging to the Ice and Cold Storage Company, was killed this morning, owing to a bad attack of hydrophobia. Symptoms of the disease were noticed yesterday while he was being driven with his mate to an ice wagon.

He became so violent that it was found necessary to shoot the animal, which was done by Lewis Wyckoff.

Dr. F. C. Herbert was in attendance, and did all he could to save the animal, but to no purpose.

The horse was valued at about $300.

Picnic and Picture.

A stageload of jolly little people from the Reform Hall sewing school journeyed to French's picnic grounds on Johnston's drive yesterday morning, and spent the day there enjoying themselves as only those of that age can. The trip was made in one of George Conover's carryalls, who furnished it gratuitously. In the afternoon the party assumed their prettiest smile while a photographer took a group picture. Miss Pessinger, superintendent of the school, chaperoned the party.

Here Is Work.

While the sewer pipes were being laid on West Seventh street, some time ago, a crosswalk was removed at the corner of Grant avenue. Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else, then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. PRETTY BOOTHS, PRETTY GIRLS

Festival for the Benefit of the Children's Home.

The children in the neighborhood of Jackson avenue, near Somerset street, conducted a most successful festival on the lawn of Mr. and Mrs. S. VanFleet's residence on Jackson avenue yesterday afternoon and evening.

The lawn was made attractive by the use of pretty booths and a profusion of flowers that were well arranged.

The little girls worked earnestly for the success that crowned their efforts, and many friends stopped to assist them. The object, a most worthy one, was for the benefit of the Children's Home, and the money received will make some of the inmates happy in more ways than one.

The affair was in charge of Clara VanFleet and Grace Emmons, who had planned it. Those who assisted were: Cake booth, Emma Line; candy booth, Ida Fountain; pop-corn booth, Clara Martin; waitresses, Mary Woolston, Clyde Slater, Hazel Martin, Hattie Messerschmidt, Sadie Fountain; lemonade booth, Bessie Martin. Kelly of Summit, describing a bay mare, and wagon which was stolen from that place June 21st. A reward of $50 is offered for the recovery of the latter.

A Valuable Gift.

The Free Public Library has received from James E. Martine a very valuable map of the United States. It is entitled "Map of the United States and Territories, with adjacent parts of Canada and Mexico, etc., showing the extent of public surveys, Indian and military reservations, etc., compiled under the Hon. Thomas H. Carter, 1892." It may be seen upon application.

Represents the Best.

William H. Abbott, who has recently established an insurance agency, represents some of the best and most substantial companies in existence. His rates are low and therefore desirable. Though he goes to New York every day, he can be seen at the corner of Front and New streets each evening.

A Good Suggestion.

It has been suggested that, although the fire department cannot parade the engine and trucks in service, yet the silver hose carriage of the Alert Hose Co. and the old hook and ladder truck could easily be brought into line.

BOYS WHO ARE FAST RIDERS.

GOOD TIME MADE AT THE CRESCENT OVAL YESTERDAY.

The Events Were All Contested With Much Spirit—Who the Entries and Winners Were—Details.

It is surprising what the boys can do sometimes, and the time in some of the events at the race meet on the Crescent Oval yesterday afternoon was almost phenomenal, considering that all the contestants were under sixteen years of age.

The first event was a handicap one-hundred-yards dash. The starters were: Roy Cox, 6 yards; Morris Dumont, 2 yards; H. Finch, scratch; Wallace Beveridge, scratch.

Finch left Beveridge and soon overhauled Dumont and Cox, and won by two yards. Dumont was second by a yard with Beveridge third. Time, 11¼ seconds.

The starters in the quarter-mile bicycle race which came next were: George Coard, Carroll Runyon, Harry Cuming.

The three hung together for about half the distance, when Coard started out, followed closely by Runyon, who passed him on the curve and crossed the tape awinner by a length. Coard took second by two lengths. The time was 35⅘ seconds.

The handicap two hundred and twenty-yards dash brought out three runners: Morris Dumont, 3 yards; H. Finch, 1 yard; Wallace Beveridge, scratch.

Finch had this run all his own way and won without trouble by two yards. Dumont took second by a like distance. The time for this event was 25 seconds.

The last event of the day was a one-mile handicap. The starters were: Ray Cox, 200 yards; William Roome, 150 yards; William Wadsworth, 100 yards; David Pond, 100 yards; Harry Lister, 25 yards; Irving Smith, 25 yards; Carroll Runyon, scratch; Geo. Coard, scratch; Harry Cuming, scratch.

Lister and Smith did not want their handicap but started with the scratch men. Coard set the pace for the back men on the first lap and took them right through. Runyon took them for the next lap and overhauled Roome first and then Cox, Wadsworth and Pond. Runyon's pace was a hot one and Lister fell behind. Coard and Runyon led ou together on the last lap and had the race all their own way. Coard won by two lengths with Runyon second by three. Pond made a very pretty finish and, with Wadsworth at his back wheel, just passed Cuming on the home stretch, taking third place with Wadsworth fourth. The time was 2:36⅘ and was a creditable performance as it was made by a scratch man.

Handsome silver and bronze medals were given to the first and second respectively. The judges were Rufus Finch, Charles Morse and Geo. Smith. Messrs. Havens, Hillman and Leonard acted as timers.

To end the afternoon's sport a scratch race was ridden. The starters were: Ray Cox, Robert Tilney, Howard Roome, David Pond and Will Roome. William McCutchen acted as pacemaker. Pond won after a splendid spurt, with Tilney close behind. Cox was a bad third. No time was taken.

CHURCH CHIMES.

A lawn festival to be given by the Golden Rule Circle of King's Daughters will be held tomorrow afternoon and evening at 65 Grandview avenue. The admission, including ice cream, will be ten cents. If the weather is unfavorable it will be held Saturday.

The New Jersey Sunday-school Association will hold a summer school of primary methods at Asbury Park from July 15th to the 20th. The sessions will be held in Library Hall. There will be a large number from Plainfield and vicinity in attendance.

Freight Wagon Upsets.

While Alvin Horgland was loading freight on his wagon near the freight house yesterday afternoon, the wagon, which was standing too near the hill that runs down to Park avenue, was over balanced and in consequence upset. All the goods were thrown out, but there was no damage as Mr. Hoagland caught the horse by the bridle before he started to run away.

Committee Meetings.

The executive committee of the Independence Day celebration will meet tonight in the Alert Hose Company's parlors. The parade committee will meet in the rooms of the Zephyr Hook and Ladder Company, tonight, to finally decide upon the route of the parade and the order of the floats and wagons.

WATER OF ORGANIC PURITY.

That Is the Kind That Plainfielders Are Imbibing.

During the visit of Allen Hazen to this city on June 4th he took back to Boston with him samples of well water and city water from the house of Councilman S. A. Ginna, which underwent a sanitary analyses. The examination was made June 5th, with the following results in parts of 100,000:

	Well water.	City Water.
Turbidity	none	none
Sediment	none	none
Color	.00	.00
Odor	none	none
Free Amonia	.0000	.0000
Albuminoid Amonia	.0000	.0000
Nitrogen as Nitrates	.1580	.1500
Nitrogen as Nitrites	.0000	.0000
Oxygen Consumed	.0000	.0000
Chlorine	.3700	.3300
Iron	.0000	.0000
Hardness	12.	10.

Mr. Hazen makes the following comment on the examination:

Both of the samples, the well water as well as the city water, are waters of great organic purity, and you are to be congratulated upon having so good a supply, and you need have no anxiety whatever as to their wholesomeness. The well water differs but slightly in its composition from the city water. It is slightly harder, but this is of no significance and is not in any way injurious to health.

WEDDED AT ST. MARY'S

A Happy Nuptial Event of Two Popular Young People.

Yesterday afternoon, at four o'clock in St. Mary's church, Miss Nellie Moran of 655 West Fourth street, and Thomas J. Comerford, of 209 Spooner avenue, were joined in wedlock by Father Smyth. An abundant shower of rice was sent after them as they left the church and drove to the home of the father of the bride, Patrick Moran, of 655 West Fourth street, where in the evening, about sixty of the numerous friends of the bride and groom were received and entertained. Eugene O'Reilly furnished the music.

The bridesmaid was May Geunder, and the best man was J. Comerford, of Roanoake, Va. brother of the groom.

The bride's own beauty was set off by a changing costume of old rose silk, trimmed with white ribbons and lace. The bridesmaid also looked very pretty in lavender silk trimmed with ribbons of the same color and white lace.

Mr. Saltzman Off for Europe.

A meeting of the Exempt Firemen's Association was held last evening. President Auguste Saltzman presented the association with a frame of badges which he has been collecting for a long time and made a short farewell speech, as he sails for Europe next Wednesday. The question of being represented in the Fourth of July parade was thoroughly discussed and a number of members expressed their willingness to turn out. It was not decided whether to have the old fire bell, the Fanwood hand engine or the old Zephyr hook and ladder truck in line.

Slow People in Rahway.

The Rahway Electric Light Company will not, from present indications, be able to fulfil its contract with the city and begin lighting the streets by July 1. The erection of the poles, it is said, cannot be finished by that time. It also looks as if the railroad to Woodkridge and Sewaren will not be completed and in operation this summer. The Rahway electric road was to be extended to Sewaren by July 15, but there is not the slightest indication now of the work's being begun. It will take a month to finish the road.

No One From Union County.

H. N. Spencer was re-elected a member of the executive committee from Somerset county at the meeting of the State Republican League held at Trenton yesterday. There was a large representation from all parts of the State, but strange to say there was not even one representative from Union county. There were forty-two clubs from Hudson county represented and they intend making a strong fight for the nomination of Col. Toffey for Governor.

NETHERWOOD IS AROUSED.

CITIZENS BOUND TO HAVE THE TROLLEY ROAD EXTENSION.

Out of Forty-Two Property-Owners Only Four Are Said to Be Opposed to the Extension—Mean Business.

The Netherwood people turned out last night. They filled the reading-room of the Hotel Netherwood, and they were filled with a burning zeal for public improvements, particularly the trolley. Out of forty-two property owners in the district, it is said that all but four want the trolley, and the sentiment of the meeting was that the wishes of the forty are better than the vivid imaginations of the four.

W. A. Lord was called to the chair and G. W. Thomas was made secretary. Mr. Lord stated the object of the meeting which was that those present be given an opportunity to place themselves on record as wanting the trolley road in Netherwood. Continuing he said the railway company want to run their tracks to the end of Putnam avenue, but unless they will lay their tracks to the Netherwood station they don't want the extension at all. He said that the company act very indifferent in the matter and will not turn their hand one way or the other, for or against. The advocates of extension, he said, may meet opposition, and no doubt will, and the question was whether they wanted to retain counsel to fight the opposition. To his mind the other side was making a bluff, and there was no reason why Netherwood people should not stand ground and see the matter through.

Mr. Finch offered a resolution that it be the sense of the meeting that the Netherwood people want the trolley and that it must come to Netherwood before the trunk line goes through, and that the citizens be represented at the Common Council meeting next Monday night; also that the Council be asked to carry out the wishes of Netherwood citizens. It was carried unanimously.

Mr. Finch made a motion that a committee of fifteen be appointed to attend the meeting of the council on Monday night next. It was adopted, and the following were named by Mr. Lord: F. C. Langhorne, N. P. T. Finch, C. P. Ellis, F. W. Hand, S. A. Guion, W. L. Brown, Howard Runyon, Dorsey Hyde, Edward Willis, F. I. Smith, H. A. Ostermoor, D. W. Hand, A. J. Beal, William Daveson, George Thomas. W. A. Lord was added to the committee, as was also A. D. Thompson.

It was reported that one man in opposition had said he would spend $5,000 to defeat the trolley construction. It was also reported that a Plainfield lawyer had been retained by the same man.

Mr. Stillman, a lawyer living at Netherwood, was asked for his opinion, and he said that there was no need of securing counsel till it was known what the opposition were going to do.

Another resolution was offered by Mr. Finch and carried that the chairman be authorized to call a meeting, if in his judgment he thought the opposition would warrant it.

It was understood that the same lawyer who had been retained by one of the opposition, was also counsel for one of the large property owners who had signed in favor of the trolley.

Those present at the meeting included the following: H. A. Ostermoore, W. A. Lord, N. P. T. Finch, John Christianson, F. W. Hand, William Daveson, Fred I. Smith, David Hand, Edward Willis, George Thomas, C. P. Ellis, Dorsey W. Hyde, S. A. Guion, A. J. Beal, W. L. Brown, F. C. Langhorne, Martin Korff and Howard Runyon.

After Mail Contracts.

As the owners of these vessels desire to take advantage of the act of congress and enter into a contract to carry the mails from New York to Antwerp, touching at Southampton, fifty-two times a year for ten years, it is necessary to determine whether they fill the required conditions of first class vessels of 8,000 tons, capable of maintaing a twenty-knot speed at sea in ordinary weather.

What Is Required.

Constructor Fernald's immediate object will be to learn whether the vessels are readily convertible into auxiliary cruisers and are prepared to mount four six-inch rapid fire guns, weighing, with carriages and appurtenances, nearly 30,000 pounds each. Subsequently the ships will be speeded at sea in the presence of a naval board. Among the provisions of the contract each of these ships will be compelled to take as apprentices at least one American born boy under 21 years of age for each 1,000 tons of displacement, and these boys must be educated in the duties of seamanship and will rank as petty officers and receive reasonable pay for their services.

May Benefit Certain Naval Officers.

It is likely that several naval officers of high rank will take advantage of a clause in the law that enables them to volunteer for service on these vessels, continuing on furlough pay and receiving increased compensation from the company. As soon as the steamship St. Paul is ready she will be inspected and the contract put into operation.

ST. LOUIS'S SECOND TRIP.

The Big American Starts Across the Ocean with Many Passengers.

New York, June 27.—The American line steamship St. Louis started on her second eastward trip across the Atlantic yesterday. An enthusiastic crowd gathered about the pier and cheered the big vessel as she swung out into the stream. The St. Louis carried 375 first cabin passengers, among whom were many prominent persons. There were 170 second cabin passengers and about 250 in the steerage. Before sailing Captain Randle said:

No Efforts at Record Breaking.

"We have an unusally large number of passengers aboard. The first cabin is particularly well filled. The voyage promises to be a very smooth one. I do not expect, however, that we shall break any records. I do not intend to hurry matters for the first few voyages. Later on, after the machinery has been limbered up somewhat, we shall be better able to show what the St. Louis can do.

Much Perishable Freight.

"We are carrying a great deal of perishable freight this trip, such as California fruit, plums, oranges and bananas, besides a large shipment of Chicago beef. The goods are to be auctioned off in London. It is a new custom for a first-class steamship to carry such a cargo. The experiment was tried by the Paris a few months ago and proved very successful."

LEADER OF PICKPOCKETS.

A Wealthy Landowner in Spain Arrested in Madrid.

Madrid, June 27.—The arrest of a wealthy landowner at Gatafe has led to the discovery that he is the leader of bands of pickpockets whose scope is international. A rich gipsy named Montoya was recently robbed of $1,600 at the railway station at Aranjuez. The landowner was suspected and his arrest followed. The police inquiries show that he is a noted pickpocket, and that under his direction other thieves work in Spain, France and Italy. The prisoner was convicted some years ago and sentenced to a term in the prison at San Sebastian, whence he escaped. After gaining his liberty he bought a splendid estate, saying that he was a retired merchant. When he was arrested a day or so ago he ordered a carriage and pair in which he was driven to the jail in Madrid.

When he was forced to retire a large portion of the congregation went with him and established the Bethany church. As an outcome, Mrs MacGregor in March, secured a divorce from her spouse. The ceremony was preformed at MacGregor's home by Rev. W. W. Wright who assists him at the Bethany services.

Mrs. Buchanan Again Appeals.

Albany, June 27.—Mrs. Annie Buchanan, the wife of Dr. Robert Buchanan, who is under sentence to be electrocuted in Sing Sing prison next week for poisoning his second wife, telegraphed Col. Ashley W. Morton is at Ellerslie and is not expected to return until the latter part of next week. Col. Cole will not reply to Mrs. Buchanan until after he has communicated with Gov. Morton.

The Governor Provoked.

The governor when he issued the week's respite recently intimated that he didn't feel at liberty to take any further action in the matter, and it is known that since the many technical objections were made to prevent the carrying out of the execution at the expiration of the respite that he was considerably provoked. HARDIN FOR GOVERNOR

He Captures the Kentucky Democratic Nomination.

Is a Free Silver Man, But Was Chosen on a Gold Platform—Silverites Admit Their Defeat and Attribute It to Secretary Carlisle. Administration Endorsed.

Louisville, Ky., June 27.—Kentucky's Democratic State convention, although it nominated Hardin, a free coinage man, for governor, has certainly indorsed the administration, with special tributes to President Cleveland and his co-adviser and secretary, John G Carlisle. No "outing" was ever productive of more effective results than that of Mr. Carlisle to Kentucky and the Memphis convention.

Attribute Their Defeat to Carlisle.

The silverites, including Senator Blackburn, attributed their defeat to his recent speeches and the circulation that was given them. The free coinage men do not deny that they expected to control the convention and all its committees, platform and nominations. They fought gamely to a finish and acknowledge their defeat, although they make charges about the way it was done, especially on the part of Auditor of State Norman and others at Frankfort.

Their First Defeat.

The free silver men were beaten Tuesday in the district meetings that selected members of the various committees, in the selection of judge W. M. Beckner for temporary chairman and congressman A. S. Berry for permanent chairman, and in the organization of the committee on resolutions, as well as in the organization of other committees.

Minority Report Downed Them.

Yesterday they went down under the adoption of the minority report of credentials, seating Clay's sound money delegates, as well as under the adoption of the majority report on resolutions for sound money and the endorsement of President Cleveland and Secretary Carlisle. The committee on credentials is one that the sound money people did not look after, and the silver men had a majority on it, but the convention overruled that majority by adopting the minority report.

Fought to the Last.

The silver men felt that General Hardin had been looking more after his nomination than after a free silver plank, and some of them deserted Hardin, while the Clay men were urging the sound money delegates to stand together on nominations as well as on the platform. Senator Blackburn and other silver leaders remained on the floor of the convention and fought to the last on the resolutions, after which they did not take much interest in those who, as they said, had previously deserted them.

Bitter Against Norman.

They were very bitter towards Auditor of State Norman, who was General Hardin's manager, and himself a candidate for renomination. In Senator Blackburn's speech against the majority report on resolutions, he showed his feeling towards some on whom he had depended, while he referred very respectfully to Senator Lindsay, Congressman McCreary and others who had opposed him openly.

HELD FOR RANSOM.

A Wealthy Buffalo Lawyer Kidnapped.

Buffalo, June 27.—Octavius O. Cottle, a lawyer, was found yesterday securely fastened in the cellar of an abandoned house in the center of the residence district of Buffalo. He was kidnapped last Monday by two strangers and has since been confined. A ransom of $2,500 was demanded of his wife, but the men becoming scared, abandoned him to his fate and skipped. Cottle was nearly unconscious when found. There is no clue to the guilty parties.

MRS. DRUSE LEAVES AUBURN.

Two More Absolute Pardons Issued by Gov. Morton.

Auburn, N. Y., June 27.—Mary Druse, who was pardoned from prison, left for Syracuse last night to visit a friend who had been untiring in her efforts to assist Mrs. Druse to freedom. Two more absolute pardons were received at the prison yesterday. One was for Mrs. Hattie Hamburg, convicted about four years ago in New York city of complicity in a diamond robbery of a New York jewelry store, which was engineered by her husband. Her sentence was five years and six months. She is a handsome woman and of respectable family. She married the diamond robber against the wishes of her parents. She persistently maintained her innocence of any participation in the crime, and her story was probably believed by the governor.

Obtained His Own Pardon.

The other recipient of executive clemency was a young man who obtained his pardon through his own exertions. A few days ago he wrote to the governor telling him how he was convicted in Oneida county of malicious mischief for stoning a passenger train. The judge sent him to the Elmira reformatory in October, 1890, under a maximum sentence of ten years. He was transferred to Clinton, afterwards coming to Auburn, thereby depriving him of the chance of earning his release in a few years by good behavior, as provided by the rules of the reformatory. He told the governor that he believed a term of ten years in state prison was too heavy a punishment for his offense, and the governor responded with an absolute pardon.

MRS. RAMSEY NARES LOSES.

The Suit Against Her Father Decided After Seven Years.

New York, June 27.—After having taken testimony for seven years, ex-Judge Ernest Hall, as referee, has just filed with the surrogate his report on the application made by Mrs. Ramsey Nares, formerly Marie Jeannette Plumb, to have her father, James Neale Plumb, make a final judicial settlement of her estate, of which he was formerly guardian. Mrs. Nares, who resides in Surrey, England, alleged that her father had squandered $60,000 of her income during the years he was her guardian, but against this the referee finds that not only have the expenditures of the father been proper, but that the estate of the daughter is indebted to the father in the sum of over $5,000, and that she is also to pay all the costs of the accounting which will amount on a low estimate to at least $10,000.

FATAL STORM IN ENGLAND.

Several Killed—Duke and Duchess of York's Narrow Escape.

London, June 27.—Violent thunderstorms prevailed yesterday in England and Ireland. A tramway depot at Hull was struck by lightning, set on fire and destroyed. Lightning also struck a tree adjacent to the royal pavilion at the agricultural show at Darlington. A number of persons had sought refuge under the tree from the rain. Two of them were killed and three were injured. The Duke and Duchess of York had just departed from the pavillion when the bolt fell. A number of deaths caused by the storms are reported from other places.

GUERRILLA WARFARE

A Sugar Raiser Describes the Cuban Revolution.

Reb ls Comprise Middle and Lower Classes—The Outrageous System of Taxation Responsible for the Trouble—It Will Take Years of Time and Millions of Money To Crush It.

Washington, June 27.—E. M. Chase, of the firm of Brooks & Company, sugar raisers, of Santiago de Cuba, is in the city visiting his family, taking his usual vacation during the summer. In an interview he talked about the condition of things on the island, although, as he said, he did not know that it was wise for him to do so, as he expects to return there in November.

Middle and Lower Classes.

"The revolution," he said in reply to a question, "began very near us, Guanat onama, forty-eight miles from Santiago de Cuba, in the southeastern part of the island. The insurrectionists comprise the middle and lower classes of Cubans. There are a great many negroes among them, but, then, race distinctions are not drawn as closely in Cuba as here.

Taxation the Cause of the Trouble.

"Foreigners generally sympathize with them for the reason that those who are in business in Cuba suffer from the same enormous taxation that the natives do. Now, the outrageous system of taxation which Spain has fastened upon the island is the whole cause of the trouble continually breaking out there. A sum reaching nearly $32,000,000 represents the amount of the annual tax the Cubans are subject to, which is at the rate of $18 per capita.

Guerrilla Warfare.

"What kind of a fight are the revolutionists making? It is more of a guerrilla warfare than anything else. They do not seek nor will they be allowed to be drawn into a pitched battle. The impression of those familiar with such things is that the present revolution has advanced very much further than any of its predecessors," continued Mr. Chase. "The opinion is that if Spain puts it down it will take years of time and millions upon millions of money to do it."

Suffering Must Ensue.

Consul Barker, at Sagua La Grande reports to the state department that the sugar producers of the island are in a bad way, the result of a short crop and low prices, and that much suffering must ensue therefrom. He says: "The condition of the planters of this island is distressing, and the end is not yet, for when it is recalled that fully one third of the inhabitants depend on the plantations for employment and a living, and that the owners thereof cannot obtain money to engage their labor, actual suffering must ensue."

NEW PRESIDENT FOR CUBA.

Insurgent Leaders Will Elect a Successor to the Late Gen. Marti.

New York, June 27.—The utmost activity prevails among the leaders of the Cuban revolutionary party in this city, and some momentous questions are on the eve of settlement. On July 10, in this city, an election by delegates from the Cuban revolutionary clubs throughout the United States will be held to choose a president for the provisional government of the republic of Cuba.

Will Issue Bonds.

Immediately upon the settlement of that important question and upon the induction of the successor of the late Jose Marti into office, the officials of the revolutionary government will cause an issue of interest-bearing bonds of the Cuban republic, which will be redeemable by the republic when the domination of Spain over the "Queen of the Antilles" is successfully overthrown.

Favors Senor Palma.

"The revolutionists in the United States," said Senor Enrique Trujillo, a prominent Cuban leader, "are in favor of the selection of Senor Thomas Estrada Palma to occupy the place made vacant by the death of Jose Marti, and he will doubtless be elected. Senor Palma is quietly domiciled at Pleasant Valley, N. Y., and many prominent Cubans have visited him there."

Pleased with Williams' Return.

Senor Trujillo said that Cubans were pleased at the return of Consul-General Williams to Havana, as Mr. William has always been zealous in his protection of the interests of American citizens in Cuba.

Williams Returning to Cuba.

Washington, June 27.—The state department admits that so far as the department is aware, Ramon Williams, United States consul general at Havana, is now on his way back to his post. This information is in the nature of a surprise as it was generally understood that Mr. Williams would not return to Havana, and the news derives importance from the understanding that Mr. Williams's departure from this country was hastened through an important mission in connection with Cuban affairs with which he has been intrusted.

Cuban Rebel Defeat Reported.

The State Republican League has twelve clubs in Union county, the membership of whom constitute 1498.

Time and money could be saved by the New Brunswick papers if they would have a line of type sterotyped reading "The deadlock still continues."

The term of seven State Senators expire the present year, as follows: Skirm, of Mercer: Stokes, of Cumberland; Smith, of Ocean; Hoffman, of Atlantic; Winton, of Bergen; Daly, of Hudson, and Drake, of Morris. The first four are Republicans and the other three are Democrats.

Senator Maurice A. Rogers, of Camden, is a candidate for Governor. His candidacy is based not on his developed ability as a State Senator, nor his undeveloped possibilities as a State Governor, but upon the single fact that he is in good standing with the A. P. A. and allied organizations, and will pole their vote. When the State of New Jersey gets down to electing class Governors, Mr. Rogers will have a good chance.—True American.

Hahne & Co., the Newark drygoods merchants, have taken into their own hands the matter of inaugurating the early closing, Saturday half-holiday movement. There are in Newark as elsewhere a very few greedy men who would keep open stores day and night if they believed a few paltry dollars could be earned thereby. These men have thus far blocked the movement for a general Saturday half-holiday. Hahne & Co. seem to be big enough and broadminded enough to go ahead alone, and they have announced that they will close their store at noon Saturdays during July and August. Such action deserves not only the appreciation of the public but likewise its substantial recognition.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

SUMMER WISDOM.

The man whose rule it is to take
The weather as it comes,
Without a word of fuss, finds life
A pudding full of plums.
He doesn't care how low or high
The mercury has got,
And even when it's mid July
He hardly knows it's hot.

But he who when the mercury
Goes up to eighty-five
Makes such a fuss that every one
Regrets that he's alive.
Thus makes himself unhappier
Than he was meant to be,
And feels the heat at seventy-two
As if 'twere ninety-three.

So take a warning from these lines—
It's good advice, though free—
And when the hot days really come
Don't watch the mercury.
Just go about your daily tasks
Regardless of the heat,
And you will find that every day
Your life will grow more sweet.

A MARINE WONDER.

The Mighty Barrier Reef a Monument to Minute Insects' Industry.

One of the marine wonders of the world is the great Barrier Reef of Australia. This stupendous rampart of coral, stretching in an almost unbroken line for 1,250 miles along the northeastern coast of Australia presents features of interest which are not to be equaled in any other quarter of the globe. Nowhere is the action of the little marine insect, which builds up with untiring industry those mighty mountains with which the tropical seas are studded, more apparent.

By a simple process of secretion there has been reared in the course of countless centuries an adamantine wall against which the billows of the Pacific, sweeping along in an uninterrupted course of several thousand miles, dash themselves in ineffectual fury. Inclosed within the range of its projecting arms is a calm inland sea, dotted with a multitude of coral islets, and presenting at every turn objects of interest alike to the unlearned traveler and the man of science.

Here may be witnessed the process by which the wavy, gelatinous mass hardens into stone, then serves as a collecting ground for the flotsam and jetsam of the ocean, and ultimately develops into an island covered with a luxuriant mass of tropical growth. Here, again, may be seen in the serene depths of placid pools extraordinary forms of marine life, aglow with the most brilliant colors, and producing in their infinite variety a bewildering sense of the vastness of the life of the ocean.—London Public Opinion.

TO CAN STREET CAR HORSES.

Canned Horse Is On Sale and Popular in Many Cities of the East.

The canning of horse meat for domestic and foreign consumption has been inaugurated in the Northwest. Mr. M. Herrick, of The Dalles, who owns a salmon cannery, has converted part of his establishment into a horse meat cannery. He has canned in all seven horses, and they have yielded an average of 300 pounds of flesh.

Mr. Herrick has disposed of a number of cases of canned meat in this city, and they have been eaten here. Patrons of the establishments where five-cent meals are served probably could account for some of the meat, and if so they never have made any complaints about it. A number of cases have been sent East, and it is expected that quite a market will be found for horse beef inside the United States.

The flesh resembles beef in appearance and cannot be told from it by taste. The grain of the flesh is fine, and, upon opening cans, it certainly looks good enough to eat. Dozens of people have sampled the canned horse, and are unanimous in pronouncing it good, though there was not one of them but confessed to a prejudice against the eating of horse flesh.

The only trouble Mr. Herrick has met with in canning is that the flesh cannot be packed into cans tightly enough by hand. The difficulty will be overcome by using machinery such as is used in packing corned beef. The first horse killed made six cases of forty-eight pounds each, but others ran a little under that amount.

AN ACTOR KNIGHTED.

Henry Irving Receives Evidence of Queen Victoria's Favor.

The honor that was recently conferred on Henry Irving is one that his friends have long expected for him. Various explanations why he has not received it have been made. He was born with the patronymic of Brodribb and assumed the more picturesque name of Irving for stage purposes.

As an explanation why Irving was not knighted when Augustus Harris and Arthur Sullivan had been so honored, it was said that it was contrary to precedent to dub a man a knight by any other name than that which his father had carried before him. If a popular choice for the honor had been made among English actors for the past ten years there is little doubt that it would have fallen to Irving.

SIR HENRY IRVING.

Mr. Irving went on the stage in 1856, but it was not until his appearance as Matthias in the "The Bells," in 1871 that he achieved a success that placed him easily in the front ranks of his profession.

Critical opinion has differed widely as to the artistic merit of Irving's Matthias, but there has never been any reason to doubt its effect on an audience. When he appeared at the Lyceum in 1876 as Richelieu he gave a performance that added to his fame, though he was severely criticized.

In 1874 Irving took the boldest step in his career, and played Hamlet at the Lyceum with an original conception of the part. The critics resolved themselves into two parties and waged a furious battle in the public prints over the merits of Mr. Irving's Hamlet.

Public opinion may still be divided on that subject, though there is no doubt that Irving has admirers enough of his Hamlet to fill his theater when he chooses to play it.

His harmonious stage management added not a little to his success. In his tours through this country he has been received with favor, and by his scholarly mind and pleasant personality he has won many friends who will rejoice with him in his new honor.

While at Peekskill, N. Y., Mr. J. A. Scriven, a prominent manufacturer of New York City, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Such good results were obtained from its use that he sent back to the druggist from whom he had obtained it for two more bottles of the same remedy. When you have a cough or cold give this preparation a trial and like Mr. Scriven you will want it when again in need of such a medicine. It is a remedy of great worth and merit. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

While in Topeka last March, E. T. Barber, a prominent newspaper man of La Cygne, Kansas, was taken with cholera morbus very severely. The night clerk at the hotel where he was stopping happened to have a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and gave him three doses which relieved him and he thinks saved his life. Every family should keep this remedy in their home at all times. No one can tell how soon it may be needed. It costs but a trifle and may be the means of saving much suffering and perhaps the life of some member of the family. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destored forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A NEW SHIP OF STATE.

Thou, too, sail on with speedy gait,
Sail on, O sloop, and never wait,
Though we, with all her fears
And all her hopes of future years,
Lie hanging breathless on thy fate.
We know what master laid thy keel,
What workman wrought thy ribs of steel,
What polished bronze thy sides will plate,
What deep fin keel will keep the straight,
What care was put on mast and ropes.
(The boom came from far "Rockies'" slopes),
What anvils rang, what hammers beat,
In what a forge and what a heat
Were shaped the anchors of thy hopes.
We know why centerboards are past,
Why English cutters may be fast,
And this we know, and will repeat,
That we their cutters always beat.
O, sloop, sail forth, thy race to run.
Sail forth nor fear the starting gun.
Fear not each sudden sound or shock,
'Tis of the wave and not the rock,
'Tis but the flapping of a sail,
And not a rent made by the gale.
Valkyries come, Valkyries go,
The new boat Ailsa is not slow.
Fyfes and Watsons may look wise,
But Herreshoffs will cause surprise.
The Stars and Stripes will proudly float
O'er thee, thou new and speedy boat.
Sail on, nor fail to breast the sea;
Our hearts and hopes are all with thee,
Our hearts, our hopes, our prayers, our tears,
Our faith triumphant o'er our fears,
Are all with thee, are all with thee.

A VENERABLE STUDENT.

Having Fought and Preached, Dr. Stevens Is Studying Law at Seventy.

There are many queer people in attendance at the Kansas State University at Lawrence, Kan., but probably the most interesting of these is a law student who is at least 70 years of age. He is Dr. Martin Van Buren Stevens. This is his second year at the university, and he expects to graduate this spring and become a full fledged lawyer.

The doctor's life has been one of much education. Wilkesbarre, Pa., was the place of his birth. He married at 20 a pretty Pennsylvania German girl. Soon after this he enlisted in Company D, Fifth New Hampshire, and went to the war.

The old gentleman has received the degree of Bachelor of Arts at Oberlin College, in Ohio, and that of Doctor of Medicine at the Adelbert College, at Cleveland, O., 1871. His first wife having died, he married again, this time selecting a Michigan girl, a niece of "Fighting Jim" Richardson. At one time he studied theology and preached for awhile, but gave it up, and studied phrenology under Fowler, of New York.

In a cozy little house on the side of the hill this queer old man lives alone. He keeps everything about the place scrupulously clean. One warm meal a day he considers sufficient; the other two he carries to school with him in a small shoe box. Very little meat passes his lips, in fact, he might almost be called a vegetarian. "People eat entirely too much," he says.

Last year he was somewhat conspicuous on account of the number of badges and emblems he wore on the front of his coat. They were the badges of the G. A. R., Christian Endeavor Society, Phrenological Society, the Y. M. C. A., a medical society and C. L. S. C. Another of his peculiarities is that he carries a watch which is fully four inches in diameter. He winds it with a pair of six-inch nippers.

Dr. Stevens has been in every State and Territory of the United States. Every summer he goes out on a lecturing tour, and tells the people all about phrenology, physiology and physiognomy.

The Dicker Was Too Long.

This tell-tale tale tells of how a Roxbury, Mass., grocer grievously offended a customer; also, of how the customer wounded the sensitive feelings of the grocer and of the circumstances which led to this most unhappy estrangement. The customer was "every inch a lady;" the grocer, though he never wore a stovepipe hat, was in other essentials a gentleman.

They met at the grocer's counter, and this is the conversation that placed between them a great, yawning chasm:

"Are those eggs fresh?" she asked.

"Yes marm," replied the grocer.

"You are quite sure?"

"No doubt about it, marm."

"Now, if there is any doubt about it I shouldn't care to buy any."

"You can depend on it, marm. I wouldn't say they were fresh if they wasn't."

"There were three rotten ones in those I bought the other day."

"You won't find none of these that way."

"Now, you say you are positive these are perfectly fresh?"

"That's what I said, marm."

"You'll take back the bad ones if I find any, won't you?"

"You've got to take them just as they come."

"You'll warrant that there are no bad ones among them, won't you?"

"No, I won't. I warranted them when you came in, but they've grown old since then. You can't expect eggs to last forever, marm, and another thing——"

But the slamming of the door as the lady flounced out lost to the world the verbal pearls that continued to come from between the grocer's celluloid filled teeth.

May Men Shed Tears?

"Sooner mayst thou trust thy purse to a professional pickpocket than give loyal friendship to the man who boasts of eyes to which the heart never mounts in dew. Only when man weeps he should be alone—not because tears are weak, but because they should be sacred."—Bulwer Lytton.

"Tears spring from no weak and woman source, but flow from the loftiest fountain of emotion. Tears befit a warrior when his troops desert him—a patriot when his countrymen rush to their doom—a father when his children rebel against his love."—Lytton.

"There is a sacredness in tears. They are not the mark of weakness, but of power. They speak more eloquently than ten thousand tongues. They are messengers of overwhelming grief, of deep contrition and of unspeakable love."—Washington Irving.

THE CHEAPENING OF BOOKS.

A False Business System Has Prevailed Many Years to Keep Up Prices.

The announcement that booksellers will meet the prices of the department stores in the sale of books marks the end of a long and foolish struggle artificially to maintain an outworn trade system. It also marks the beginning of a period in which the public are to share the advantage of cheapened paper and book making processes.

In the days before railroads, fast mails and cheap telegraphy the local booksellers all over the country were a necessary part of the machinery of book distribution. The march of improvement rendered their service unnecessary nearly a generation ago, or if not unnecessary at least less necessary than before, When it became possible and easy for the dweller in any remote town to order his books of the publisher and get them within two or three days the local bookseller ceased to be a necessity. His stock could never compare in completeness with that which publishers' catalogues, with the aid of fast mails, offered to every book buyer to select from. To increase sales publishers began to broaden the scope of their discounts until nearly all buyers found that they could do better by ordering their books by mail.

Then a great "conference" was held at Put-in-Bay to devise means of "protecting" the retail book trade—that is to say, compelling book buyers to support middlemen for whose services they had no use. Rigid rulss were adopted, only to be broken, because they deserved to be broken. Every publisher fixed a false price on his books. He gave the retailer a discount of 40 per cent., and an additional discount of 10 per cent. for cash. That is to say he sold $1 books for 54 cents to the retailer.

Naturally a good many publishers began to seek a retail trade by giving discounts to direct buyers. There was more money in selling a dollar book to the reader for 75 cents than in selling it to the retailer for 54 cents and permitting him to collect a dollar for it.

The system broke down, as it deserved to do. Then the dry goods stores saw their opportunity. They could buy books at 54 cents on the dollar of retail price and by sharing this excessive profit with the ultimate buyer they could undersell the retail bookseller.

They were stigmatized as "book butchers" and by other opprobrious names, but their business was perfectly legitimate. They were merely selling goods at a fair price which had been sold at an excessive price. They were carrying out the sound principle of "large sales and small profits."

The whole thing is very simple. Under an artificial system the price of books has been kept up, while the cost of making books has enormously declined. At last the public is to have the advantage of the cheapening, as it ought long ago to have had.

The result will be to benefit publishers, authors, booksellers and book buyers alike. At lower prices more books will be sold. The profits of publishers and the royalties of authors will be increased. The people will get more for their money. The reading habit will be greatly stimulated. Popular culture will be advanced. And if here and there a bookseller in some obscure town has to go out of the business, the loss will not compare with the great gain.

We are at the beginning of the universal reading age.

THE ALLADIN OVEN.

A Maximum of Heat for Domestic Purposes From a Minimum of Fuel.

The most complete application of the principle of boxing up heat and applying it at at a moderate degree has been accomplished by Professor Booker T. Washington, of the Tuskegee Colored Institute of Alabama, where there are 650 adults, men and women, fed every day. Beginning in a small way a year ago, he has lately constructed a very large oven of pine planks plastered inside on wire lathing, with three-quarters of an inch mortar. It is heated with five or six Bradley & Hubbard lamps. In that oven the tough, stringy Southern beef and mutton are made tender, succulent, appetizing and nutritious. Two hundred and fifty pounds of beef are put in every night and are cooked, without any attention after the oven is charged, with vegetables, oatmeal or cornmeal or other food in proportion. A varied nutrition from the products of the country has been attained. The cost of the oven without lamps was $18. A full description of this apparatus with all the details is about to be printed in the fourth edition of Edward Atkinson's book, 'Science of Nutrition,' published by Damrell & Upham, Boston. Any ordinary mechanic can make an oven.

Railroads of America.

At the beginning of 1892 there were 171,048 miles of railway in this country, which had cost nearly $10,000,000,000, representing the growth of a little over sixty years, and about four-fifths of it that of thirty years. In the year 1890, while our railways covered 162,500 miles, those of all Europe did not reach 145,000 miles. In the single year 1887 nearly as many miles were built here as the entire amount in operation in England and Wales.

The number of passengers carried that year was 492,430,865, and the number of tons of freight, 636,541,617. It is further stated that the average journey per passenger was 24.06 miles, and of freight 119.72 miles; that the average railway travel of the inhabitants was 190 miles each in the year, showing a great use of railroads, while for each inhabitant ten tons of freight were moved about 120 miles. Of the earnings 29.41 per cent. was derived from passengers and 68.23 per cent. from freight traffic, the small remainder being charged otherwise.

The most precious goods are done up in the smallest parcels. The women's bonnets are becoming microscopically small, and meantime the price grows steeper.

LOOK IN THE CLOSET

SEE if you can't find some old clothes that you have put aside because of the worn-out look they have, or some clothes that are badly spotted.

We want you to bring any old clothes of that sort to us—or better yet—we'll send for them.

We propose to clean those clothes—or to dye them for you—either way to make them wearable. This is an economical suggestion.

We take out grease spots so they stay out, or we dye clothes with a color that wears. We charge as little as poasible for the work.

Just a dollar or two—and you'll have a lot of new clothes.

CHAPTER IV.—THE MURDER BY THE WATERSIDE.

It was no more than an hour after day when I was surprised by the coming of the young man Philip Standsfield to my chamber door. He came in without knocking, and leaned upon the bedfoot. There he weeped and cried, and though I cannot say that I had any opinion of his qualities before I was somewhat affected by his penitence. Indeed, I could not but suppose that, even thus late, my words of rebuke had taken effect upon the hardened and indurate heart of this heinous sinner.

With this comforting thought upon me, I asked of him when the grace of repentance had been given to him, and told him that I had had a visioon during the night of demons that had wrestled for his soul, but which by my watchfulness and prayer had fled away baffled and vanquished. For, very clearly, I saw the meaning of it all now. I had of a surety been sent to the New Milns to deliver the soul of this young man.

At last Philip Standsfield ceased his sighing and grieving, and I looked for some words of grace. But he said: "Alas! Mr. Bell, Sir James, my dear father, has left his chamber during the night and wandered abroad, so that we fear he has done himself a mischief."

But I comforted him saying that belike Sir James had been disturbed by the same noise of demons which I had heard, and had gone abroad to see more of then, even as I had done myself.

At this Philip looked somewhat strangely at me, and so went his way for that time, so that I was left alone. Then I dressed me in my better-most clothes, being the Sabbath day, and went downstairs to go abroad. As I passed through the gate and went along the causeway that leads to the manufactory, one came running to say that they had found Sir James lying frozen in the water with his face down, and all the breath gone out of his body. Thither I hasted with great lament for my kind friend and patron, remembering all his kindliness and hospitality to me in past days, and grieved to think that all was at an end.

When I got to the place there was already a great crowd, and Philip Standsfield standing by ordering them to have him taken out. Sir James lay with his face down, frozen in firmly on either side, with little on, but a great thick coat of blue done about him. And when they drew him to the side, he lay on the bank so dismal a sight to behold that my heart bled for him, and my tears ran freely down upon the ground.

At this moment I got a sudden surprise, for as it had been the thought of a demon Philip Standsfield came and caught me by the sleeve, crying out, "Here stands the murderer of my father. He it was that enticed him hither, and hath, for his own wicked ends, choked and worried him to death and flung him into the river!"

Then certain that were in Philip's faction, George Johnston, whom I heard them call "the devil's tailor," and one Nichols, came and caught me, pushing me rudely, and riving the good black clothes off my back, crying out all the while, "It is the murderer! It is the murderer! See his countenance! He cannot find speech to deny it."

And of a verity speech had departed from me, as well it might from one that is suddenly accused of the death of his best friend, from whom he parted in all love and amity only the night before.

So they hauled me along the path, and making me touch the body they declared that blood came from it, which was manifestly false, for none was to be seen, save where the glass of the window had cut my own hand in returning during the night.

"It is God's ordinary mode of discovering crime," said Philip Standsfield, and he wiped his own hands on his sleeve, for he had been standing beside me.

So they took me, along with the body of my late beloved friend, into the waukmill; and there, saying that they had caught me red-hand in the act, Philip Standsfield was for straightway hanging me, by virtue of his warrant as a magistrate of the county, having been chamberlain and deputy sheriff to his father. But this others debated upon as doing things with a high hand, and without color of law.

SO THEY TOOK ME.

Then, so wonderful are the ways of the the evidence of things and circumstances, that they found one of my shoes down by the waterside where I had stood behind the tree. This they asked of me to explain, a dozen crying at once, "Did I deny having been during the night near to where the dead body had been found?"

I told them that I did not deny the truth. But I begged of them to listen while I told them how that evil spirits, to my knowledge and in my sight, had dragged a burden down to the water edge and set it afloat on the river.

But at this they all laughed aloud. Even those that were not ill-affected to me were shaken in their belief by my rambling words, which seemed to them to bear guilt on the face of them.

I cried and protested that they should never think so base a thing possible, as that I should murder my well-loved friend, and that wholly without reason. But they went and pointed out the double track of my feet to the water side, and again with one shoe gone from my right foot, back again to the window.

"I will have his life, for a black-hearted rogue and the murderer of my father!" cried Philip Standsfield. And he bade bring a rope, which put me in great fear when I saw Nichols run off to do his will. For they took me out to the dule-tree, and Garred read a kind of warrant about finding me red-hand in the act, while I stood on a wooden tub that was used for washing, with the rope about my neck, and the other end rove over a branch. I was in much tumult and perturbation of spirit when I thought that in another moment I should find myself in Abraham's bosom, for which, in my present state, I knew I was desperately ill-fitted.

Presently, standing thus with my thoughts whirling about me, I heard a voice I knew speaking loud and angry at the outside of the throng. It was the voice of Umphray Spurway, the Englishman. And that was small comfort to me, for the man had never liked me. Indeed, Englishmen, for common, have small kindness for ministers. So that I looked for no pause or mercy. Nevertheless, I cried to the man that I asked for trial with color of law. And I took all that were there present to witness, that it should lie upon him, that was a man of substance and responsibility, if he should allow mine enemy to shed my blood without trial.

Then the Englishman, who had been trained, as they all are, to fine instinct of law-abiding, cried out among them all.

"Let the man be taken to prison. Let him be kept close till he have fair trial. A man is surely innocent till he be proved guilty, in every country save in this uncouth land of the Scots, where they set a man to a hedge and shoot him, or string him to a tree and try him as he dangles. Give the man to my hand, and I will keep him safe in mine own house, and produce him upon warrant, for which I shall be surety to the whole extent of my goods."

So in spite of Philip Standsfield and his cabal, I was let go with Umphray Spurway, for he was an urgent man, and imperious, so that very few dared say no to him in all that country side. So as soon as I got him alone in his own house I began to tell him all the tale of the demons, at which relation, first of all, he cried "Pshaw!" and "Clotted nonsense," with other expressions I cannot repeat, being unseemly to be written down by a minister.

But after he had thought a little, he bade me repeat it all again from the beginning, and indeed several times over, questioning me of what I had seen, till now I said to him, "Ah, Mr. Spurway, bide a little, and you will come to believe in the demons."

"Tut! gull-head," he said very rudely to me, that am a minister (though till lately without charge). "I will find your demons for you when my good friend the commissary comes from Edinburgh."

Then he told me how it had been resolved to hush the matter up now that Philip and his clan had been balked in the immediate killing of me for the fact but that he, Umphray Spurway, had taken it upon him to write to one Mr. George Hume, merchant in Edinburgh, who was great with my Lord Advocate Dalrymple, to have him order a public examination.

"Then it will go hard if I grip not your devils for you, minister, as readily as a herd that grips sheep at a narrow slap in a stone dyke."

These things I set down as he said them, for that was his strange and immodest way of speech. But I deny not that the man treated me well enough all the time that I abode in his house by the cloth manufactory, to which he went and came at stated hours, as regular as the clock, which is the use and wont of Yorkshire men.

It was about twelve that night of the Sabbath—the strangest I have ever seen, and God and the angels keep me from seeing any stranger—that Umphray Spurway waked me out of sleep. He stood by my bedside, with William Bowman, his servant. I feared he had come to tell me that I was to go to prison. But instead he asked me to rise, and be a witness of a strange transaction.

So soon as we came out of the house and the door was shut behind us, we saw a great many flitting lights at the door of the place of New Miln. As we went nearer we heard also the trampling of horses and a concourse of people.

By the way we met a man hurrying greatly. He would have passed us by without speech, but William Bowman tripped him up, being a Cumberland man and skilled in such plays.

I heard Umphray Spurway say to him, "William Robinson, whither way so fast? What goes forward with so great a concourse at the house of Sir James Standsfield?"

Then the man, being held fast at either side, muttered that Philip had given orders for the bringing out of the body. And they were burying it secretly in Morham Kirk that night. "For," said Philip Standsfield, "if my father was not murdered by the rogue of a minister that set him against me and played tale-pyet to my doings—why, then, he made away with himself, and, having died like a dog, he shall be buried like a dog."

"We will e'en go our ways down," said Umphray Spurway, and I mind that his beard was red as fire where the pitch-pine lights caught it as we followed the procession to the kirk.

It was a gruesome sight we saw when we got there. Two women went dancing before with torches in their hands. One of them I knew not, but the other was the buxom besom Janet Johnston whom we had seen with Philip Standsfield in the changehouse. Then came the corpse, white-sheeted and coffinless, looking twice the ordinary length of a man, borne upon the shoulders of six men, and with the head not stiff but wagging from side to side like a twig with a broken top. It was a memory for a man to carry to his grave. And a thousand times when I sleep alone I wish that I had never seen it.

Then the unseemly procession went into the kirk-yard with jest and levity, stumbling over graveyard stones, being most of them well touched with drink. Cursing and swearing they went, like men that are not in love with their job, and would take out their anger upon the dumb stones among their feet.

(To be concluded.)

GRANT'S DAUGHTER NELLIE.

A Beautiful Story Illustrating the General's Attachment for Her.

The rumored engagement of Nellie Grant Sartoris to Gen. Kyd Douglas recalls to the public mind the beautifully tender attachment which General Grant manifested for his daughter. The union with Sartoris was opposed to the limit by the young lady's parents; subsequent events prove all too clearly that the old folk's estimate of Sartoris' character had been correct. Sartoris was a drunkard, and there is probably no language adequate to portray the misery and humiliation to which he subjected his wife. To add to the wretchedness of her life, the family of the drunken husband utterly declined to receive the young wife or to accord her that recognition to which, as the daughter of Gen. Grant, she had been accustomed and was entitled. Mrs. Sartoris may have kept silent: her womanly pride probably prevented her from telling her parents of the dreadful mistake she had made. But rumors of her misery came from over the sea, and they caused Gen. Grant constant solicitude.

One time Hugh Hastings went down to Long Branch to visit the Grants. He was told that the general was sitting on the rocks overlooking the sea, and surely enough he presently discovered Grant perched on the rocks and gazing in apparent abstraction over the waters. Hastings stole softly up and put his hands over Grant's eyes, saying:

"Now, guess who it is!"

But Hastings drew his hands back almost immediately; they were wet with tears; Grant was weeping.

Hastings was too surprised to say anything. Grant looked up.

"Hullo, Hughy," said Grant kindly.

"You are crying, general! What has happened? What is the matter?" demanded Hastings.

Grant came pretty near breaking down, but by a heroic effort he pulled himself together.

"We get bad news from England," said he. "Nellie is unhappy, and I can't help thinking about it—thinking about it all the time! I am in trouble, Hughy, the greatest trouble of my life!"

It were difficult, perhaps impossible, to fancy a more beautifully pathetic picture than that of this foremost man of his time stealing away by himself and communing with his love for that daughter so many, very many leagues away. It appeals more directly and it means more to humanity than a thousand Vicksburgs, a thousand Corinths, a thousand Appomattoxes!—Chicago Herald.

Why the Zunis Bar the Rainbow.

Capt. Trevitt W. Okey, of Los Angeles, Cal., for many years stationed in Arizona and New Mexico with the regular army, told about the myths and superstitions of the Zunis Indians to a group of friends the other evening.

"In the Zuni mind," said he, "the rainbow has ever been a deified animal, having the attributes of a human being and also the body and some of the functions of a measuring worm. Obviously the striped back and arched attitude of the measuring worm, its sudden appearance and disappearance among the leaves of the plants which it inhabits are the analogies upon which this personification is based. As the measuring worm consumes the herbage of the plants and causes them to dry up, so the rainbow, which appears only after the rain, is supposed by the simple minded Indians to cause a cessation of rain, and consequently to be the originator of droughts, under the influence of which plants wither away, as they do under the ravages of the measuring worm.

"It will be seen that the visible phenomenon called the rainbow gets by analogy the personality of the measuring worm, while from the worm in turn the rainbow gets its function as a god. Of this the cessation of the rain on the appearance of the rainbow is adduced as proof. The fading of the flowers is attributed to the rainbow, which, consuming their imperceptible existences, thus derives its brilliant coloring, just as it is believed that the measuring worm gets its green, yellow and red stripes from the leaves and flowers which it devours."—Chicago Times-Herald.

BUILT AN OPERA HOUSE IN A DAY.

The Brick Structure All Finished in Time for the Evening Performance.

The Spokane Spokesman tells the following tale of Northwestern energy: For some months past the people of Colfax have heard wild rumors of the intention of the band to erect an opera house some time in the near future, but no three persons outside of that organization suspected until yesterday morning that there had been any definite shape to their many plans; but now the institution is an astonishing reality and one of which the city will be proud for many years.

Soon after it got thoroughly dark Wednesday night a force of about 75 men were brought in from Spokane on a freight train, and, unloading near the Colfax Main street bridge, armed with hods and trowels, marched to the place and silently began the work of laying the brick upon the new building. As that side of the street was obstructed and the night a dark one no one passed near the building and the ruse was not discovered. Stealthily the men passed up and down and along the walls and rapidly they sprang upward through the night. By daylight the ontside walls were finished, and before any one was astir on the streets yesterday morning the scaffolding was taken down, and there stood in magnificent elegance the proudest opera house in the Northwest.

Men, women and children thronged down the street dumb with astonishment and admiration. It seemed that nothing short of magic could have erected such a structure without causing suspicion of what was going on.

Just before daylight the masons finished their work and silently departed, while their places were filled with as many carpenters, plumbers, decorators, painters, etc., and all day the work went noiselessly on inside the walls. The heavily curtained windows and closely fastened doors were besieged all day by anxious people, but revealed nothing. At 10 o'clock a bill poster, armed with a paste brush, came down the street, and stopping in front of the building put up bills announcing that the Colfax Dramatic Company would star their old time favorites, George J. Joyce, W. J. Bryant and C. E. Irwin, in the drama "Hick'ry Farm," at the Colfax Opera House. The good news spread like wildfire, and when, at 7:30 last night, the building was thrown open, the streets were crowded from the Colfax Hotel to the Court House.

Marshal Mackay had to call out his entire force of one other man beside himself to maintain order. The jam at the box office was almost suffocating, but the crowd was served and seated in the beautiful and capacious auditorium by 8:30, and the curtain rose amid thundering applause, which was repeated at intervals all through the evening. When the curtain had fallen on the last act, and the villain was finally and securely dead, the audience would not be pacified until the act had been thrice repeated.

DEFENDERS OF THE FLAG.

How the Boys of Kingsbridge Grammar School Salute Old Glory.

In Grammar School, No. 66, in Albany avenue, Kingsbridge, the opening exercises of the school are attended with considerable military pomp and ceremony. This school boasts of having the best drum corps of any school, and this corps takes no inconsiderable part in the morning opening exercises. The corps is composed of twenty boys. They have won distinction on more than one public occasion.

Physical instruction always has been one of the features of this school, so that the introduction of a regular military organization found the pupils well prepared for it. The girls are regularly drilled in calisthenics, while the boys are trained in the "setting up" drill of the soldier. In fact, military drill is the only exercise that is regularly prescribed for the boys, and its results are seen in the decidedly martial "strut" and bearing of the youngsters.

The following is the military routine followed every schoolday in the school: At 8:48 a. m. the drum corps sounds the assembly, upon which the pupils promptly fall in on the color line, as a company is "faced" and "dressed" by the sergeant. At the command, "right hand salute!" every right hand touches the peak of the owner's cap. At this moment the American flag is run up on the flagstaff in the boy's yard by the color sergeant. When this is done the company marches into the assembly room for the opening exercises of the day. At 10:45 the drill call is sounded and the boys fall in by companies and go through the setting up drill with their respected officers. At 12:48 p. m. every day there is a dress parade.

Wednesdays are reserved for the glory of the drum corps. On this day of the week the corps gets in heavy marching order, with knapsack, blanket rolled, haversack and canteens and leggings. Thus accoutred, they present a soldierly appearance and parade during the "sound off" before the entire battalion, standing at parade rest.

A Good Guess.

The gripman of a Third avenue car and the driver of a big two horse truck became involved over the delicate question of social precedence, and travel on the avenue was temporarily suspended.

The driver descended from his lofty perch, and the gripman, who wouldn't take a dare from any one, jumped over the rail of the front platform and enthusiastically sailed into him.

A Bowery crowd rapidly collected and cheerfully urged the combatants on with pointed and impartial advice.

While the excitement was at its height, and the two men were rolling about in the mud and slush, pummeling away at each other for dear life, gallant Officer O'Reilly arrived on the scene of action.

He pushed his way through the crowd until he obtained an uninterrupted view of the arena and the desperate struggles of the two infuriated men.

After a prolonged and silent inspection, he turned to a bystander.

"Phwat is it?" he observed, with lan guid interest. "Is it a scrap?"—Puck.

TEACHING JENNY TO PLAY.

Paderewski Writes of the Faults of Parents and of Teachers.

It may seem strange, but when it happens that a teacher of pianoforte playing does understand that profession thoroughly and is most anxious to faithfully and conscientiously discharge his entire duty to his pupils, his patrons, as I have been told by many teachers, entertain such peculiar ideas of the divine art of music in general and of the manner in which pianoforte playing should be imparted to young ladies in particular, that they present powerful obstacles to his doing so. The majority of parents who employ music—or, more properly speaking, pianoforte—teachers for their daughters, are entirely ignorant of music themselves.

The mother, perhaps, may have played the piano a little in her girlhood, but she has given it up years ago, as most ladies do after marriage, and she has entirely forgotten what little she ever knew. The father in most cases has no perception of music, and only consents to the employment of a teacher of the pianoforte for his female offspring because he knows that it is the correct thing for girls to "play," and that it is customary for them to take "music lessons," and because his wife tells him that if Jennie doesn't "take" she will never be able to hold her own in "society" against their neighbors' daughters. Prof. Schwigzebeer is engaged and Jennie takes her first quarter.

Now, it may chance that the professor is a scholarly and conscientious instructor, young in his profession, and he is resolved to teach his pupils correctly, and to make them skillful players and thorough musicians if possible.

He keeps Jennie hammering away at scales and exercises all through the first three months. She is a bright girl and has splendid musical ability, and Schwigzebeer congratulates himself on having a pupil who will one day be a really fine pianist.

But Jennie's mamma is by no means satisfied. "I begin to think that Schwigzebeer is no teacher at all," she exclaims to her husband. "Our Jennie has been taking of him for a whole quarter and she can't play a tune yet, while there's Sallie Smith, next door, has only taken six lessons from Prof. Pretzle and she can play the 'Racket Galop' just too lovely for anything."

"Very well," said pater familias, "I shall have to speak to Schwigzebeer about it."

And, sure enough, when poor Schwigzebeer comes the next day he is given to understand that unless Miss Jennie is forthwith taught to play "a piece" he will be minus a pupil. Poor fellow! What is he to do? He has so few scholars that he cannot possibly afford to lose one. No; love of his art, conscience, duty to his pupil's best interests, all must be sacrificed to bread and butter.

The next time he comes he brings with him a simplified copy of the "Racket Galop," and, having marked with a lead pencil the fingering of all the notes, he stands over Jennie while she tries to "drum it out," teaching it to her just as a parrot is taught to say "Pretty Polly."

The result is that Jennie's musical talent is never cultivated, her ambition is destroyed, she begins to pick out tunes by ear, and probably never touches the piano half a dozen times in her life after she gives up taking lessons.

In teaching the pianoforte great care should be taken never to tire the pupil. Especially does this apply to very young scholars. In teaching a very young child, for example, it should be your constant aim to make his lessons pleasant and attractive to him, and never let them seem like an irksome task. If you can make them seem like play, all the better.

I once heard of an excellent and thoroughly capable lady teacher who had some very juvenile pupils, and who interested them deeply in the most intricate scales by telling them stories about her different fingers as they traversed the keyboard. For instance she would say: "Now, the fingers of my right hand and of my left are members of contending armies. One has put the other to rout and is chasing it, eager to secure prisoners and spoil. The forefinger of each hand is the leader of the army, so he will run ahead and lead all the others. Look out, now, off they go!" and away would dash the nimble fingers up and down the keyboard, while the little pupil, with her interest aroused to the utmost, and no longer regarding her pianoforte lessons as an irksome task, looks on enthusiastically, eager to see whether the right or the left hand army will win in the contest, and determines to practice unceasingly till she can play such a "splendid game all by herself."

CELEBRATED AFTER THE WAR

A FOURTH OF JULY THIRTY YEARS AGO IN THIS CITY.

Names and Incidents That Will Bring Back to Memory a Great Event in the Minds of Many.

The celebration of July Fourth, 1865, was undoubtedly the most unique and grotesque that ever occurred in Plainfield. There were no policemen here in those days and the town was truly rural and the boys did about as they pleased. On the eve of the Fourth all night long a big bonfire would blaze away in the street opposite Somerset on Front, surrounded by the youths of the town. That continued at the same old stand until the town became incorporated in 1869.

The writer of this celebration thirty years ago was only nine years of age at that time and if his memory is in any way remiss it is in regard to the forgetfulness of some of the names of some of the participants, and not as to any of the events that occurred on that day.

It is easy to recall the sons of Capt. Reguer, Joe and Lon, who lived up in Washington Valley, riding the mules that their father brought home from Virginia; Capt. "Ed" P. Thorn and Lon Townley, Col. Craig Spencer, the late William Dunn, Russell Johnston, John Chandler, Chris Pope, Jake Naylor, Bill and Dave Linbarger, Tom Terry, Aaron and Connett (both dead), Andrew Webster, Frazee Connett, Marshal and Dave Pangborn, Wm. B. Ayers, Albert Runyon, Wm. Paine, and others.

The war had closed in April, 1865, and all the boys who had left their homes in Plainfield to fight in the country's defense, and had not been among the missing, with the few weeks among their families here made them, that is, the younger element, crave for a devil-may-care-kind-of-a-time and the Fourth of July was selected for the blow-out. The line was formed on Front street, right resting on Cherry street, now Park avenue. The line of march took in all the streets and a more woe begone looking gathering never appeared in parade.

The parade was on the calathumpian order and many were the unique and odd characters that were represented. An aged citizen from up over the hills whose name was Isaac Winans, and who has long since passed away drove a team of oxen attached to a hay-rigging that was full of characters. The old gentleman himself wore a long claw from a lobster over his nose and walking beside his oxen was a sight in itself.

The parade stopped at the residence of Hon. Joseph W. Yates, on Seventh street and were entertained, the crowd all entering into the yard where refreshments were passed. They also stopped at the Mansion House and Laing's Hotel, and also at the residence of H. P. Bronk, the old Seminary building, on Front street opposite the First Baptist church, and were royally entertained.

Ed. P. Thorn and ex-Marshal William Pangborn were seated in an old-time open carriage that belonged to Mr. Thorn's father. The wagon was a sight. Every kind and color of paint they could procure, was on the vehicle. The animal, an old bony litle pony that belonged to Patrick Muldoon, the then junk man, furnished the motive power. Modesty made them make the poor beast wear a pair of drawers on his fore feet.

H. N. Spencer, the marshal of the day, wore a large pair of pants that belonged to a citizen, now deceased, who weighed nearly four hundred ponnds. They were stuffed with hay to fit the occasion.

One of the bands, who rode in a hammer-and-tongs, consisted of Larry O'Neal, John Bangham and Joseph all deceased, and Amos Moffett, who is still with us.

Of course the Frazee family were in the parade, as nothing ever happened in those days unless they took part. There was Augustus, Samuel, and the late Abraham Frazee, and on the evening of the Fourth there was high old times at the Beuna Vista hotel, which was located on Front street and kept by their father, and the site was opposite where Harry Werner now keeps his clothing store.

There was a large number of army mules in the parade ridden by different ones. Some of the mules belonged to Capt. Hand, who purchased them in Virginia, and afterwards used them in opening up Grove and different streets hereabouts.

Some of the riders on the mule went so far as to ride them into a beer saloon, on the corner of Chatham and Somerset streets, kept by Charles Smith's father.

After the parade, in fact all the later part of that day, mules could be seen wandering aimlessly about the streets. The riders immediately dismounted, on arriving in the vicinity of where the crowd congregated, leaving the animals to find their homes as best they could.

She Will Be Dean of the Women's College in Chicago.

Miss Julia E. Bulkley, who is gratefully remembered in Plainfield as teacher and principal for twenty years in the High School, will come back to her native land in September, and in October will begin her responsible duties as dean of the Women's College in connection with the University of Chicago. Miss Bulkley has for three years been a student in the University of Zurich, where her course of study will be finished in July. In a recent letter to a friend in Plainfield she says: "I expect to be in Jena in August, then may study in the British Museum until I sail for America in September, when I will visit Plainfield for a few days." The many friends of Miss Bulkley will give her a warm welcome, and will follow her future career in the University of Chicago with interest and pride.

Break of a Live Wire.

Front street had its little share of excitement yesterday morning, when a live electric light wire in front of R. G. Shaw's drug store suddenly broke in two from too great tension and fell to the ground. The noise of the break was a most peculiar one, and startled everyone in the vicinity. No damage was done, however, and the linemen soon repaired it.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mrs. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else, then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottle at Randolph's drug store. A JAPANESE TEA.

Warren Chapel the Scene of a Unique and Enjoyable Affair.

Warren chapel looked like a veritable Japanese bower, last evening, on the occasion of the Japanese tea held there. Owing to the thunder storm, the attendance was much less than it would have been, but as it was over one hundred were present.

The programme opened with a tableaux, representing a Japanese house. Mrs. F. J. Bach next favored the audience with a recitation. "A social call" was the next of the Japanese tableaux, and was followed by a tenor solo by Robert Clark. The third tableaux was "A lady's carriage." A recitation by Miss Haberly was greatly enjoyed. "A bedroom" was the scene of the fourth tableaux, and was followed by another recitation by Mrs. F. J. Bach. "A flower garden of Japan" was very pretty, and after the applause for that had died away, Mrs. Bach gave another recitation. The gramme ended with the "Japanese March."

Tea, cake, and rice were then served in Japanese fashion, and all enjoyed a social time in good old English.

The committee in charge of the entertainment was J. F. Watts, chairman, Miss Dunlap, Miss Wilson, Miss De Seader, Miss Bolsterlie, and W. Mullen, and they all deserve great credit for the pleasing manner in which the whole entertainment came off.

THE LAST SCHOOL TO CLOSE.

ENTERTAINING EXERCISES AT THE PAROCHIAL SCHOOL LAST MIGHT.

A Delightful Little Sketch Presented by the Scholars, Who Evinced Thorugh Training—Other Exercises.

Even the pouring rain could not dampen the enthusiasm of those who attended the closing exercises of St. Mary's School last evening. Had it been a pleasant evening the hall would have been crowded to its fullest capacity and, as it was, a good-sized audience comfortably filled the room.

The programme opened with a selection by a chorus of girls entitled "Gently Fall the Dews of Eve," which was quite suggestive, considering that the rain was falling in torrents outside. The chorus was composed of about twenty-five young girls costumed in white and formed a very pretty picture, while their singing was excellent.

The principal part of the evening's entertainment consisted of a drama entitled "Kathleen; or, The Cost of a promise. The cast was as follows:

Kathleen.....Miss E. Day
Mrs. Connors, (Her Mother), an Invalid. Miss M. Smith
Granny Gilligen, Old Apple-Woman. Miss M. Fosbre
Mrs. Royalton, Wealthy Sister of Mrs. Connors.....Miss A. M'Intyre
Ethel Royalton and Lucille Royalton, Nieces of the Late Mr. Royalton—Miss L. Flanagan and Miss K. Walsh.
Madame Felice, French Attendant to Mrs. Royalton.....Miss A. O'Keeffe
Topsy, Maid to Ethel and Lucille. Miss J. Murphy
Magistrate.....Master E. Flynn
Guards.....{ Master J. Burks, { Master J. Daley
Messenger.....Master J. Berry
Loda, Zola } Gypsies.....{ Miss K. Honan, { Miss E. Walsh

CHILDREN PLAYING IN THE PARK.

Olive.....Miss M. McCann
Selina.....Miss K. Roach
Annie.....Miss M. Carty
Frances.....Miss M. Doll
Maggie.....Miss M. Shannon
Josie.....Miss L. Rafferty
Nellie.....Miss L. Corrigan
Gertrude.....Miss J. Lutz
Genevra.....Miss L. O'Keeffe
Helen.....Miss E. Barelle
Susie.....Miss S. Lynch
Mary.....Miss M. Callahan

The plot was quite interesting. The first scene showed a room in Mr. Connor's cottage; Mrs. Connor was dying, and called her daughter to her side and told her of her past history, and how she had been defrauded from her inheritance by an older sister, now Mrs. Royalton, and made Kathleen promise that she would try to recover it by some fair means. The second scene was in a public park, and Granny soliloquizes on various subjects. After her disappearance, two gypsies entered and danced most prettily in which they were soon joined by the children, and when in the midst of it, they beat a hasty retreat at the sight of Granny, the applewoman. In this scene it is learned that one of the gypsies is not a real one, but was picked up by the other when almost drowned in Italy. The Royalton House is where the next scene is laid, which opens with a soliloquy by Mrs. Royalton in which she mourns over the death of her child who was drowned in Italy, and the treatment of a younger sister. The scheming neices appear and try to be as loving as possible. They learn that Mrs. Royalton is taking a fancy to Kathleen who comes to play the zither for her, and fearing her influence decide to get rid of her, by putting a bracelet in her bag and then charging her with stealing. But Topsy, the colored maid, overhears all their plotting. In the fourth scene Kathleen is brought before a magistrate and the bracelet discovered in her bag, but Topsy testifies and she is released and, in the last scene, restored to her real position. The litlte gypsy is found to be the lost child, and all ends happily.

To give the names of those who did the best, would be to name the players again, but everything showed that some master-hand governed them all. The arranging of the stage also reflects great credit on those in charge. The rest of the programme was as follows:

Concerts Recitation....."The Flag and Cross" Boys of the Preparatory Class.
Chorus—"The Flower Gatherers".....Glover
A Picture Chorus—"Hide and Seek".....Blake The "Tots."
Solo and Chorus—"The Ship I Love" Glennon William Lawler.
Vocal Solo—"What Would You Take for Me, Papa?".....Westendorf Miss Mary McCarthy.
Chorus—"When Daylight's Going." LaSomnambula
Instrumental—"American National Airs," Knight
Piano—Misses K. Quinn and E. Kelly. Organ—Miss St. Leger. Violin—Miss A. Quinn.
Finale—Tableaux, representing Goddess of Liberty and States.

The drills and tableaux were certainly very beautiful and showed that Mme. Elizabetta Menzelli had been most successful.

The final tableaux was a fitting end to a most excellent entertainment. Miss Catherine Cooley as Goddess of Liberty was surronded by forty-eight girls, each dressed to represent one state, while J. Daly as Uncle Sam smiled benignly upon them. Just at the close G. Thorn took a flash light picture of the group.

The exercises will be continued tonight with a different programme.

TABB-DANIEL NUPTIALS.

Another Plainfield Belle Carried Away by an Outsider.

Another of Plainfield's belles was carried away by an outsider, when Miss Grace Daniel and Albert Tabb, of Brooklyn, were united in wedlock at the home of the bride on the corner of Plainfield avenue and West Eighth street, yesterday afternoon at half past five o'clock.

The marriage was a very quiet affair, only relatives and a few near friends being present. Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards performed the ceremony. The bride was dressed in full bridal costume, white silk dress, tule veil and orange blossoms. Miss Genevieve Daniel, the maid of honor, looked pretty in white with pink bouquet, while the three bridesmaids, Miss Estelle Daniel, sister of the bride, Miss Skidmore, of New York, and Miss Farwell, of Montreal, were all dressed in pink, and carried pink bouquets Irving Daniel was the best man.

The decorations were, besides the palms and greens, entirely pink, arranged in a most artistic manner. P. Ludwig Conde, on the violin, assisted by a harpist, furnished the enjoyable music, playing before the marriage the well-known Lohengrin wedding march. During the ceremony the Angel's Serenade was played very softly, but after it was concluded the grand strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march were spiritedly rendered. Afterwards a varied programme of select music was rendered.

The newly married couple left last night on their wedding tour.

STRUCK BY THE TROLLEY.

A Horse Knocked Down on West Front Street.

Yesterday afternoon, between three four o'clock, Max Wiertz was preparing to deliver some goods at the residence of William Underwood. The wagon was filled with silver and China ware, and the young man in charge of the rig came out the driveway on West Front street, crossing the street railway tracks. Just then a car came along, making fast time. It struck the horse knocking him down and cutting him severely. The harness broke, and the horse managed to get up, and then ran into the yard.

After considerable effort he was captured and placed in the stable.

Mr. Wiertz at once secured another horse from Blair's livery stable.

It will be some time before the injured horse can be used.

Married at St. Joseph's.

The marriage of Miss Bridget Hopkins and Richard Lorton was solemnized yesterday afternoon in St. Joseph's church. Father Miller performed the ceremony. Miss Winnie Harrington was bridesmaid, and Patrick Regan the best man. The bride and bridesmaid were dressed alike in blue, trimmed with white lace. The newly married couple will take no wedding tour, but take possession immediately of their new home at 74 Elm place.

Assigned to Help Mr. Marsh.

Lawyer T. M. Kelly, of Elizabeth, was yesterday morning assigned by Judge McCormick to assist Craig A. Marsh, corporation counsel of Plainfield, in the defence of Frank Freehill, the tramp who is to be tried November 17 for the murder of Health Inspector Alfred E. Jewell, of Rahway.

—Nineteen dollars and seventy-five cents was cleared at the festival on the lawn of Mr. and Mrs. S. Van-Fleet's residence on Wednesday afternoon and evening.

A BRILLIANT MARRIAGE.

DAVIS-UNDERWOOD NUPTIALS A BIG SOCIETY EVENT.

Crescent Avenue Church Elaborately Decorated—Ceremony Performed By Rev. Dr. Brett—The Bridal Party.

An audience that represented the wealth, beauty and culture of Plainfield assembled at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church last evening and witnessed one of the prettiest June weddings. The front part of the church was decorated with Nature's fairest products, forming an immense bank of palms, cut rushes, pinks, white pinks, purple pinks, and gracefully entwining was broad pink and white satin ribbon, reaching to the top where it was neatly joined in two very handsome bows, while half way down the church in each aisle were handsome bouquets of pink and white roses tied with pink satin ribbon.

The contracting parties were Miss Florence Allison Underwood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Underwood, of 138 Crescent avenue, and Seward Davis, of Jersey City.

While the expectant throng were awaiting the arrival of the bridal party Miss Jessie Utter seated at the organ gave delightful renditions from Rossini, Wagoner and Gregh.

It was past the hour, eight o'clock, when the first notes of Lohengrin's wedding march were heard, and as the favorite bridal march was being played, entering on the left from the front were the flower girls, Helen Underwood and Alice Parrott, of Elizabeth, dressed in white and carrying baskets of pink and white carnations. Then came the first bridesmaid, Miss Eleanor A. Underwood, sister of the bride, gowned in white, carrying a French cane at the top of which was a beautiful bouquet of pink carnations tied with pink ribbon.

She was followed by two additional bridesmaids gowned in green silk, trimmed with velvet ribbons of a darker shade. They carried French canes with bouquets of migonettes, tied with white ribbon. They then proceeded down the aisle to the left of the centre to the rear of the church. Here they met the maid of honor, Miss Laura Underwood, sister of the bride, gowned in pink silk and carrying a bouquet of white carnations, and the bride, wearing a beautiful gown of white satin, trimmed with duchesse lace. She also wore a mulle veil, pinned with a diamond crescent, the gift of the groom. A shower bouquet of white bridal roses and lilies of the valley was carried gracefully by the bride.

The ushers leading, followed by the bridesmaids, flower girls, maid of honor, and the bride, leaning on her father's arm, returned to the front of the church, where they were met by the groom, and best man, Mr. Knox, of New York, and Rev. Dr. Brett, pastor of the Dutch Reformed church, of Jersey City Heights, and Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, pastor of the Crescent Avenue church.

The party gracefully formed around the altar, when Dr. Brett performed the ceremony, which was the Episcopal service, assisted by Dr. Richards. While the nuptial knot was being consummated, the intermezzo from Cavalier de Rusticana was rendered in delightful manner by Miss Utter.

In leaving the church the bride and groom preheded the rest of the party, she carrying an ivory bound prayer book, given her by the officiating clergyman. Then followed the maid of honor and best man, flower girls, bridesmaids and ushers. While they were retiring, Mendelssohn's wedding march was perfectly rendered in every detail.

The ushers were S. V. Parrott, of Buffalo, N. Y., Mahlon Apgar, Mr. Strang, George Fielder, of Jersey City, L. A. Underwood and Julius Erickson, of Plainfield.

A reception followed at the residence of the bride's parents at 138 Crescent avenue. The rooms were choicely decorated with smilax and roses. In the parlor was arranged a large fan of smilax, drooping from which were choice roses.

Music was by Isler of Newark and Max Wiertz was the caterer.

Mr. and Mrs. Davis were the recipients of many costly and handsome presents. During the evening they left on a bridal tour.

Miss Minnie Wilson, as one of the bride'smaids was particularly favored in securing the bride's ring.

Mr. and Mrs. Davis will reside at Jersey City on their return from the bridal tour.

Eight hundred invitations were issued for the wedding and five hundred for the reception but owing to the stormy weather and the inability of the Plainfield people to secure carriages, very few were able to be present.

TO RACE AGAINST TIME

Columbia To Be Given a Long Voyage Test.

To Be Brought Home from Southampton Under Full Boiler Power—She Is Not in Racing Condition and Too Much Must Not Be Expected of Her.

Washington, June 28.—The cruiser Columbia is to race against time from Southampton to New York under instructions from Secretary Herbert. She will not, however, be driven at her highest speed, the effort being limited to determine what the famous triple screw flyer can do under actual service conditions without subjecting her to strain.

Will Use Full Boiler Power.

After coaling at Southampton she will follow the transatlantic line course, using full boiler power without forced draught. When the Columbia was sent to Kiel under the regulations she was limited to three-quarters full power, as are all vessels under ordinary cruising orders, and it took her over eight days to make the voyage to Southampton. She used only six of her eight boilers and averaged 15.4 knots for the trip.

Not in Racing Condition.

It is not expected that she will make more than 18 or 19 knots returning, as she is not in prime condition for record making. At 19 knots for so long a run as 2,700 miles, however, she will be doing better than the best ships of other nations. The Columbia was docked last March 4, and her immersed hull after nearly four months spent in various harbors is very unclean.

Only a Partial Test.

It has been Capt. Sumner's desire ever since he was placed in command of the Columbia to have an opportunity to speed the ship fresh from a navy yard to some port two or three thousand miles away, but the department has denied the permission, Secretary Herbert having allowed the run home from Southampton at this time as a partial test of the ship.

Too Much Must Not Be Expected.

It is pointed out by naval officers that it is improper to expect too much speed on this run and unfair to compare the performance with that of ocean liners which make their voyages without restriction. And it is also to be remembered that the Minneapolis and not the Columbia is the fastest warship in the navy. The Columbia's best four-hours on trial trip was at the rate of 22.8 knots, while the Minneapolis', not forced nearly so hard, was 23 knots, and it is claimed that she can surpass that easily now.

The Minneapolis is a Flyer.

The Minneapolis ran away from Admiral Meade's fleet every day in the West Indies, and did not seem able to keep down her pace to that of the Columbia. No doubt at all is felt at the navy department that the Minneapolis can make Southampton in several hours less than five days from Sandy Hook, if permitted to run at her best.

DALY SUES FOR DIVORCE.

Father Bill Files a Countercharge to His Wife's Suit.

New York, June 28.—An application has been made and granted in the supreme court, Brooklyn, for an order to serve by publication a summons and complaint in an action brought by William C. Daly, who is known as Father Bill Daly, the race owner, against his wife Lizzie Daly, for divorce. The allegations in the complaint state the couple were married in Hartford, Conn., on February 4, 1877. The couple separated some months ago, and Mrs. Daly brought an action for divorce against her husband. She named a young society woman of Brooklyn as corespondent. Mr. Daly denied the charges. In the present action Daly names George Pierce as corespondent. He alleges other offences, but does not specify dates and places.

DISSOLUTION OF PARLIAMENT.

July 8 Mentioned by Lord Salisbury —No Policy Announced.

London, June 28.—In the house of lords the premier, the Marquis of Salisbury, announced that he hoped to obtain the queen's consent to the dissolution of parliament on July 8. Lord Salisbury said that the time had not yet arrived for making a declaration of policy in behalf of the conservative party. The latter only had one policy at present, and that was to dissolve parliament as soon as possible. Lord Rosebery expressed surprise at the government declining to disclose its policy.

FOUGHT A DUEL WITH CLUBS.

One Man Will Die and the Other Will Never Look Right.

Shamokin, Pa., June 28.—Anthony Paelis and John Tursick, who were rivals for a girl's affections, fought a duel with clubs at Green Ridge, yesterday afternoon, and Paelis' head was so frightfully battered that he will die. Tursick, although badly injured, crawled to some underbrush and escaped.

THE DINNER TO WILLIAM II.

Cheers for President Cleveland Proposed by the Kaiser.

Kiel, June 28.—The dinner given by Admiral Kirkland and the officers of the United States cruiser New York to Emperor William was a very successful affair. In addition to the emperor, Prince Henry of Prussia, Admirals von Knorr, Koester, Valois, Senden, Plueddeman and Captains Evans, Sumner Shepard and O'Neill were present. Captain Evans had previously been authorized to name the fastest racing boat of the New York the Victoria Louise, after the daughter of the emperor and empress of Germany, the Priness Victoria Louise, who was born September 13, 1892.

Exchanges of Taffy.

The arrival of Emperor William and his party on board the New York was the signal for vociferous cheering for the princess and the emperor. Admiral Kirkland proposed a toast to the emperor, and in so doing thanked him for the reception accorded to the United States warships at Kiel. In reply, the emperor requested Admiral Kirkland to convey his thanks to President Cleveland for sending the United States squadron to take part in the celebrations in honor of the opening of the Kaiser Wilhelm canal, and expressed himself as being highly gratified at the fact that the Americans were pleased with their visit. In concluding his remarks the emperor called for cheers for President Cleveland.

Delighted With Our Tars' Work.

After the dinner given to Emperor William, Admiral Kirkland, at midnight, ordered the ship's crew to collision quarters. The emperor was delighted at the promptness displayed in closing the water-tight doors. The manoeuvre was affected in less than 4 minutes. A brilliant reception, followed by a ball, was given on board the New York. Many notables attended.

THE CASE OF WOODWARD.

His Release Will Be Asked for by the State Department.

Washington, June 28.—Complaint was received at the state department that an American newspaper correspondent named Woodward had been arrested in Cuba on suspicion of being an insurgent. This matter has been previously referred to in press dispatches. Woodward was apprehended on arriving in a Cuban town, riding a worn and jaded horse and being very much worn and jaded himself. His condition attracted attention and it was charged that he had visited a camp of the insurgents. The state department will make inquiry by telegraph of Mr. Springer, our acting consul general at Havana, and request Woodward's release. The request will probably be complied with.

FITZS' PREDICAMENT.

The District Attorney Said To Have a Strong Case Against Him.

Syracuse, N. Y., June 28.—To-day will undoubtedly see the beginning of the trial proper of Bob Fitzsimmons for the killing of Con Riordan. When court opened this morning only one juror was lacking. Fitzsimmons is still in a cheerful mood, and, although he appreciates the gravity of the situation, seems to have no doubt that the outcome of the case will clear him of the blame for the death of his sparring partner. Some sensational developments may be expected, however, as it is said that District Attorney Shove has a strong case prepared to present on behalf of the people.

CAMPOS WANTS MORE TROOPS.

He Says 14,000 Fresh Men Are Necessary in Cuba.

Madrid, June 28.—At a meeting of the cabinet yesterday Senor Canovas del Castillo, the prime minister, read a dispatch from Martinez Campos, captain general of Cuba, stating that 14,000 fresh troops would be necessary to prosecute an offensive campaign against the insurgents after the rainy season shall have ended.

Corbett, Joe Choynski, Steve O'Donnell, Peter Maher, Frank Erne, George Dixon, "Mysterious" Billy Smith, Tommy Ryan, Jack Everhardt, Jim Hall, Stanton Abbott and Kid McCoy.

San Francisco, June 28.—Volcano disturbances are again reported in the Cocopah country of Lower California. Geo. Neal, a mining man, has just returned from that region and says that Sunday he saw smoke ascending from the central peak of three mountains that rise several hundred feet above the desert.

IN BUCHANAN'S BEHALF

Efforts To Stay the Electrocution Resumed.

The Same Old Procedure, But the Attorney General Has Directed the Warden To Go Ahead with the Execution—Gov. Flower Refuses To Hear Mrs. Buchanan's Appeal.

Sing Sing, N. Y., June 28.—Although it was given out that Buchanan's lawyers had given up the attempt to longer save him from the death chair, and that the condemned murderer had abandoned all hope of further delay in his case, it was made apparent last night that the technicalities of the law are again to be resorted to in an effort to defeat justice.

New Move for a Respite.

Warden Sage of Sing Sing was notified last night that pending the action of the United States supreme court in the case of Dr. Robert W. Buchanan the latter cannot be executed. If the lawyer who served it is right in his view this will be the fourth time that the condemned wife-murderer has secured respite.

The Grounds for Appeal.

This new phase in the situation is the outcome of an application made yesterday by Arthur C. Butts before Judge Lacombe, of the United States circuit court, for a writ of habeas corpus. The application was made on two grounds: First, that Dr. Buchanan did not have a fair and impartial trial by a competent jury when before the court of general sessions of New York city. That on April 29 last an application was made for a writ of habeas corpus from Judge Brown of the United States district court; that the application was denied; that an appeal was taken from Judge Brown's decision to the supreme court of the United States, and that that appeal operates as a stay of proceedings in all the edicts of the state courts of New York. Judge Lacombe denied the application and Mr. Butts gave notice of appeal.

A Muddled Situation.

The notice of appeal will place the case within the jurisdiction of the United States courts, and stay the execution, it is asserted, but lawyers are contemplating a legal muddle until the case has been carried through to the federal court of last resort, when they say the execution must occur. None would give an opinion on the legal status of the case now that it rests between the court of appeals of New York state and the federal courts. Mr. Butts, however, will take advantage of the complications, and has notified Warden Sage at Sing Sing that Buchanan must not be executed until he has further orders.

The Governor Will Not Interfere.

Albany, June 28.—Under instructions from the governor, Private Secretary Cole has informed Mrs. Anna Buchanan, in reply to her letter asking for an interview, that the governor must decline to hear any further appeals for clemency in behalf of Dr. Robert W. Buchanan, now under sentence of death at Sing Sing prison.

Instructed To Electrocute Him.

Albany, June 28.—Attorney General Hancock said last night that he had advised Warden Sage, of Sing Sing prison, to go ahead and electrocute Dr. Buchanan on Monday, in case no new proceeding law such as has not already been disposed of arises.

Warden Sage Seeks Advice.

Warden Sage called on Attorney General Hancock yesterday and asked how he should proceed in the legal proceedings being taken by Buchanan's counsel. Mr. Hancock advised Mr. Sage to execute Buchanan. Mr. Sage secured no written opinion from the attorney general, but was told either Mr. Hancock or one of his deputies would remain at the state attorney's department here until after the electrocution. In the event of any legal technicalities arising the warden will be able to consult the attorney general at any time by telephone.

Same Old Proceedings.

Attorney General Hancock left for New York city last night. Before going he said that so far as he has been able to learn the proceedings in behalf of Buchanan before Judge Lacombe was the same as a similar one heretofore brought in behalf of Buchanan and which was decided against him. If this is so the attorney general would advise Warden Sage to proceed with the electrocution.

Criticised for Employing Democrats.

Albany, June 28.—The new capitol construction commission met yesterday afternoon and made eight additional appointments to the working force. There was criticism on account of Commissioner Perry employing a number of democratic foremen and time keepers until the work was under way. It turned out that Lieutenant Governor Saxton authorized Commissioner Perry to employ the men temporarily.

Demands His Victim's Insurance.

Minneapolis, Minn., June 28.—Harry T. Hayward, the condemned murderer of Catherine Ging, has formally applied to the New York Life and Travellers' Insurance companies for $10,000 carried by his victim. It is presumed this action was taken so as to make an appearance of being consistent in his claims of innocence.

Not a Filibustering Schooner.

Tampa, Fla., June 28.—Dr. J. L. Edgar, owner of the schooner Harry Stanbury, says that there is no foundation for the surmise, as stated in a dispatch from Gloucester, Massachusetts, on June 21, that the schooner is to be employed in filibustering. Dr. Edgar says he will put the vessel in the fruit business.

CITY WASTE PROBLEM

An Interesting Paper by Col. Waring.

His Experience in the Care of the Streets of New York—How the Refuse May Be Turned to a Profit—A Big Sum Already Realized for Permission To Trim the Ash Barges.

New York, June 28.—Col. G. E. Waring, commissioner of street cleaning of the city of New York, makes a most important statement on the subject of "How to dispose of city waste" in the North American Review. Col. Waring declares that all efforts that have been made to get back the value of sewage have been unsuccessful—great sums having been lost in that way in England within the past thirty years.

To Much Water in the Waste.

Experience shows that the very small amount of manure and the very large amount of water in sewage cannot be separated at a profit. The class of waste which seems to give fair promise of profitable use is that which is not diluted with great volumes of water. In dealing with waste of this description—garbage, ashes, street-sweepings, etc.—the experience of the city of New York has been very significant.

Big Sums Paid for Garbage.

Up to about 1878 its removal cost the city a considerable amount of money, the street cleaning department having to pay $10.50 a week for each man working on the scows. After that, until 1882, no charge was made for labor—the recovered matter being taken as an equivalent. Then the privilege of scow trimming brought the city a money compensation of from $75.00 to $90.00 a week.

$1,795 Paid a Week.

In 1887 the compensation reached $320 a week, in 1889 $1,000 a week, and the payment gradually increased until in 1893 it was $1,795 a week. So that for some years the city has annually received over $50,000 worth of labor and about $90,000 in cash for the privilege of cleaning from scows.

Would Pay All Street Expenses.

Speaking of New York, Colonel Waring estimates that under such conditions "there might be recovered in cash one cent per diem for each member of the population beyond the cost of collection and sale. This would amount annually to over seven million dollars—enough to pay all the cost of street cleaning and street sprinkling, and in addition thereto to repave the whole city within a very few years, so far as this is needed, and to keep the pavements in repair perpetually."

To Separate the Waste.

Colonel Waring thinks that if the complete separation of paper and other light rubbish, street sweepings, garbage and ashes, can be effected (as he believes it can) the whole problem is practically solved. The cardinal features in the plan which Colonel Waring suggests for the most satisfactory treatment of this matter is that the public authorities should take the control of the whole business of the collection of rubbish. No one should be permitted to sell any of the wastes of domestic life at the door. Licenses should be granted for dealing in these matters (paper, rags and rubbish) only to men who have fixed places of business, and who carried on their traffic only at those places.

To Collect from Within the Houses.

Everything of too low a grade to be sold at these establishments should be collected, not from the streets, but from within the houses, by the city's own agency; and all would be carried to local centres where valuable matters would be classified and separated for sale, and everything without value would be carted to suitable crematories. Under these circumstances street sweepings could be got rid of inoffensively and without much cost.

Investigating Grease Extractors.

The street cleaning department is now investigating the actual working and business conditions of certain patented processes by which grease is extracted from garbage, and a salable fertilizer made of the residue; and it is believed that before autumn enough will be known as to these to indicate clearly what should be done. Already one responsible concern is willing to make a contract to take the entire output of garbage and to pay a substantial price for it.

Concrete from Ashes and Garbage.

If the ashes can be separated from all extraneous matters there will be no longer occasion for dumping at sea. Various uses can be found for them, such as the manufacture of cheap fire proofing blocks. Indeed, the department has been experimenting with ashes containing some garbage, just as it is hauled to the dump, with the result of making a concrete admirably suited for the foundation of stone-block, asphalt or other pavement.

HOME FROM HONOLULU.

Admiral Beardsley Arrives in 'Frisco on Board the Philadelphia.

Washington, June 28.—Admiral Beardsley telegraphed to the navy department last night from San Francisco announcing his return on board the flagship Philadelphia from Honolulu where she has been stationed since the latter part of January. The Bennington, which was sent to relieve the Philadelphia reached Honolulu the fifth instant, but the flagship did not leave until some days later. The Philadelphia will undergo repairs at the Mare Island navy yard, continuing as flagship of the Pacific.

To Command the Yantic.

Washington, June 28.—Lieut. Commander C. H. West has been ordered to command the cruiser Yantic on the South Atlantic station, relieving Lieut. Commander Seth M. Ackley.

London, June 28.—A dispatch from Hong Kong says that the Japanese are assembling warships and making preparations to attack the Black Flags at Makung.

Persecution of Christians.

Lyons, France, June 28.—The Catholic missions learn from Shanghai that the persecution of Christians in the province of Szechuen has ceased.

SEVERAL FIREMEN KILLED.

A Destructive and Fatal Midnight Blaze at Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, Minn., June 28.—Fire started at 11 last night in McDonald Bros.' crockery and glassware establishment on First avenue south. The entire establishment was destroyed. Estimated loss $200,000. Several firemen killed. At midnight the fire was under control.

Nine Believed To Be Dead.

The total number of dead is believed to be nine. Three bodies have been identified. There are still five firemen missing and all are supposed to be lying crushed to death under the mass of debris in the fatal alley where the wall fell. No sounds of agonized life can be heard issued from the death dealing mass of bricks and mortar, but heroic efforts are being made by the fire fighters and police to bring the missing men to the surface dead or alive.

Distressing Scenes.

The scenes when the bodies of the dead and injured firemen were carried from the burning debris were distressful in the extreme and were intensified on the arrival of the relatives and friends. Many of the spectators who were too anxious to get a close view of the blazing pile and the attendant scenes of death and suffering were injured by flying embers and brick.

BIG FIRE IN 'FRISCO.

Three Hundred Families Homeless and Several Firemen Injured.

San Francisco, June 28.—The worst fire San Francisco has had in over thirty years started shortly before 6 o'clock last night in the rear of the San Francisco box factory, located at Fifth and Harrison streets. Before the department reached the ground the flames were sweeping through a number of frame buildings on Fourth street which backed into the box factory and leaped across the street to the Southern Pacific hay barns. The second alarm was turned in only to be followed by a third and fourth in rapid succession.

Outside Aid Solicited.

Before one half of the department had connected their lines it was seen that the fire was beyond control. Word was telegraphed across the bay to Oakland and Alameda for assistance. The sister cities quickly responded with two engines each. A strong wind was blowing from the west and fanned the flames across the broad streets, sweeping everything in its path. Shortly after the second alarm was turned in a heavy explosion shook the city, and it is said that four kegs of powder stored in one of the big warehouses of the Southern Pacific had blown up. Heavy embers were whirled through the air for blocks. These lauded on the light frame buildings further east, and in a short time the firemen were practically hemmed in.

Roaring Acres of Flames.

For a time it looked as though the fire would be gotten under control. The wind gradually died down, but the suction of the now roaring acres of inflammable material continued to carry embers three to four feet in length through the air. Shortly after 7 o'clock the wind suddenly changed to the east and drove the flames back over the burning district.

Under Control.

At 9:45 the fire was gotten under control. The high brick wall of the deserted Southern Pacific offices at Fourth and Townsend streets acted as a barrier over which the flames could not work. The water furnished from the bay by the Oakland engines and Southern Pacific pumps soon had the outer edge of the fire subdued.

Several Firemen Injured.

During the progress of the fire all sorts of rumors were current. It was reported that when the powder exploded several persons had been killed, but this is hardly true. Several firemen were injured by falling walls.

300 Families Homeless.

In addition to the destruction of the mills, factories, foundries and hotels, over fifty dwellings were destroyed. Three hundred families are homeless, though some of them managed to save a portion of their goods.

SHOCKING EXECUTION.

M'Donough's Head Nearly Jerked Off by the Fall.

Columbus, O., June 28.—Michael McDonough, the wife murderer was hanged in the state prison here yesterday. There was a shocking scene in the execution room. In his long imprisonment he had grown heavy and his flesh and muscles soft. The drop was a long one, over six feet, and the momentum of the body was such as to pull the head almost entirely from the body. Blood spurted from the neck upon the executioners and spectators and the prison physicians grasping the wrists were as bloody as butchers in a few moments. The drop fell at 12:08 and at 12:19 he was pronounced dead. The guillotine execution was never more bloody than this. McDonough met his death bravely.

DICKINSON REMOVED.

A New Steward for Jersey's State Normal Schools.

Trenton, June 27.—The state board of education has elected William Conover, of this city, as steward and assistant treasurer of the state normal and model schools, displacing Samuel Dickinson, also of Trenton, who has held the position several years, but who admitted recently to the senate investigating committee that he had bought wine liberally for ex-Superintendent Ford, of the state house, after receiving from the latter an order for state house supplies. It was determined by the state board of education at the time of the revelation to allow Dickinson to serve his term out and then remove him.

Filibusters Captured.

Havana, June 28.—The Spanish consul at Kingston, Jamaica, telegraphs to the governor-general that a British cruiser has captured the smack Pearl, having on board eleven boxes of rifles, machetes, catridges and uniforms. It is stated that twenty-five filibusters under Iacret were on board the smack.

SHOT AND BEAT HIM

Inhuman Treatment of a Young Indian.

Wrongfully Accused by the Friends of a Woman, He Is Almost Killed After Being Placed Under Arrest. Chased by Cowboys, Base Ball Players and the Sheriff.

Washington, June 28.—Capt. A. E. Woodson, U. S. A., Indian agent of the Cheyenne and Araphoe Indians in Oklahoma, has forwarded a report to the Indian bureau of the arrest and brutal treatment of a young Indian named Cosah Red Lodge, who was accused by the friends of a white woman in that territory. The particulars of the affair as reported by Captain Woodson are substantially as follows:

Base Ball Game Frightened Him.

There was no jail at Arapahoe. A guard of citizens were detailed by the sheriff to protect the prisoner, pending his preliminary trial before the county judge. The guard took him out to the edge of the town where a game of base ball was in progress. When near the place Red Lodge saw the crowd and became frightened. Thinking that they had collected for the purpose of hanging him he jumped out of the buggy and asked the guard by signs to shoot him, preferring death by shooting to being hung by a mob.

Shockingly Treated.

When the crowd saw him they gave chase. The sheriff being nearest to him opened fire and continued shooting until he emptied his revolver; cowboys with lariats gave pursuit and attempted to hang him. As they approached he ran towards them, making signs, pointing to his head and breast, indicating that he wanted to be shot. He was shot in the abdomen by the sheriff and the citizens beat him horribly, cut him with a knife and otherwise inflicted brutal treatment upon him. He was then taken in an insensible condition to the town where his wounds were dressed.

Troops Quieted the Excitement.

Captain Mackay's troop of the Third cavalry, twenty-five miles distant, was brought to Arapahoe and encamped near the town; the presence of which served to quiet the Indians and to give safety to the citizens of the town, who now were in imminent dread of retaliation on the part of the Indians. Captain Woodson says he cannot too severely condemn the action of the sheriff.

The Prisoner Innocent.

Three days after the shooting an examination was made by the judge of the local court, the wounded prisoner being brought into court on a mattress, which resulted in his discharge, it having been clearly shown that he was innocent of the crime. The woman herself stated that he was not the guilty party. He was then released and taken by his parents to their camp.

CONTESTS FOR THE HOUSE.

Clerk Kerr's Decision Concerning Time for Taking of Testimony.

Washington, June 28.—Clerk Kerr of the house of representatives has announced his decision in the matter of the printing of the testimony in the Alabama contest of Goodwin, pupulist, vs. Cobb, democrat. He excluded from the printed record all the testimony taken after the expiration of the time allowed by law and those of the exhibits which he did not regard as regular. The decision did not appear to be satisfactory to either the contestant or the contestee, though Cobb gained his chief point. There is no present appeal from Mr. Kerr's decision. It only affects the printing, however, as all the testimony, whether printed or not, will be laid before the house committee on elections.

APOLOGY FROM SALISBURY.

The Campbell-Bannerman Incident Brought Up in the House of Lords.

London, June 28.—In the house of lords Lord Rosebery asked for an explanation of the Marquis of Salisbury's strange proceeding in sending to H. Campbell-Bannerman, the secretary of state for war, on Tuesday morning for the seals of the latter's office.

Salisbury Explains.

The Marquis of Salisbury said that Lord Rosebery's statement was incorrect. What occurred, he explained, was that after Friday's vote in the house of commons he, the Marquis of Salisbury, thought it desirable to appoint a new minister of war, and, therefore he sent to Mr. Campbell-Bannerman to ask him if it was convenient for him to deliver his official seals to the sovereign earlier than the other ministers, and if he did not desire the trouble of going to Windsor himself he could deliver them to the private secretary of the Marquis of Salisbury.

Considered the Action Discourteous.

The Earl of Kimberly, late secretary of state for foreign affairs, asserted that the Marquis of Salisbury had sent his secretary to H. Campbell-Bannerman for the seals just as he would send a footman on an errand, and he thought the action of the marquis was extremely discourteous.

Salisbury Expressed Regret.

In reply, the Marquis of Salisbury said that if Mr. Campbell-Bannerman thought he had acted discourteously he begged to express his extreme regret for the occurrence, and felt sorry for it. Lord Rosebery accepted the apology on behalf of the late secretary of state for war, and the house adjourned.

Carlisle at Gray Cables.

Buzzards Bay, Mass., June 28.—Secretary Carlisle came over from Marion yesterday on the lighthouse tender Verbens. His call at this time was purely a social one, but his stay at Gray Gables lasted five hours.

Strikers Refuse Terms Offered.

Lowell, Mass., June 28.—By a vote of 135 to 11 the Talbott mills strikers refused the proposition of the mills and voted to stay out until a satisfactory compromise is reached.

THE THEORY OF DIGESTION OF FOOD

The human stomach is a pear-shaped bag into which all food drops at once when swallowed. Three things happen—the blood rushes into the substance of the stomach (not into its interior) to heat it; thousands of little ducts or pipes pour copiously forth a fluid called the gastric juice; and then the stomach begins a wave-like, churning movement which thoroughly mixes the gastric juice with the food, and by-and-by changes the whole into a gray-looking, semi-liquid paste called cheme. This is digestion as it takes place in health.

But, look you! If the stomach fails to furnish the gastric juice, or fails to furnish enough of it, the food simply lies in the stomach and turns sour, putrefies, ferments—as it would in a warm, moist air out doors. This is indigestion, dyspepsia or gastritis. Having no other way of escape the poisons so engendered pass into the circulation and set up a train of results like these—headache; foul taste in the mouth; loss of appetite and nausea; furred tongue; disordered heart action; nervous weakness and prostration; chills followed by heat flashes; distress and weight in the chest after eating; fugitive muscular pains, followed in time by grave local ailments, etc. All this, bear in mind, comes of a more or less complete failure of the stomach to secrete gastric juice.

Having studied this subject for many years the Shakers of Mt. Lebanon, N. Y., famous as medicinal chemists and herbalists — sought among the plants cultivated by them only for a remedy which should have the distinct and especial effect of stimulating the flow of gastric juice to a normal amount and at the same time of the full, natural digestive strength. No other so-called remedies for dyspepsia have this purpose in view, yet it is the absolutely essential thing. Successful in their efforts, even beyond their hopes, they have placed their discovery on the market under the name of the Shaker Digestive Cordial. Its effects are immediate and radical. Relief is felt at once and a permanent cure soon follows. It is the sure and scientific remedy for indigestion and dyspepsia.

Confident in their work the Shakers offer trial bottles at the nominal price of ten cents. For sale by nearly all druggists.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

GRANT'S DAUGHTER NELLIE.

A Beautiful Story Illustrating the General's Attachment for Her.

The rumored engagement of Nellie Grant Sartoris to Gen. Kyd Douglas recalls to the public mind the beautifully tender attachment which General Grant manifested for his daughter. The union with Sartoris was opposed to the limit by the young lady's parents; subsequent events prove all too clearly that the old folk's estimate of Sartoris' character had been correct. Sartoris was a drunkard, and there is probably no language adequate to portray the misery and humiliation to which he subjected his wife. To add to the wretchedness of her life, the family of the drunken husband utterly declined to receive the young wife or to accord her that recognition to which, as the daughter of Gen. Grant, she had been accustomed and was entitled. Mrs. Sartoris may have kept silent; her womanly pride probably prevented her from telling her parents of the dreadful mistake she had made. But rumors of her misery came from over the sea, and they caused Gen. Grant constant solicitude.

One time Hugh Hastings went down to Long Branch to visit the Grants. He was told that the general was sitting on the rocks overlooking the sea, and surely enough he presently discovered Grant perched on the rocks and gazing in apparent abstraction over the waters. Hastings stole softly up and put his hands over Grant's eyes, saying:

"Now, guess who it is!"

But Hastings drew his hands back almost immediately; they were wet with tears; Grant was weeping.

Hastings was too surprised to say anything. Grant looked up.

"Hullo, Hughy," said Grant kindly.

"You are crying, general! What has happened? What is the matter?" demanded Hastings.

Grant came pretty near breaking down, but by a heroic effort he pulled himself together.

"We get bad news from England," said he. "Nellie is unhappy, and I can't help thinking about it—thinking about it all the time! I am in trouble, Hughy, the greatest trouble of my life!"

It were difficult, perhaps impossible, to fancy a more beautifully pathetic picture than that of this foremost man of his time stealing away by himself and communing with his love for that daughter so many, very many leagues away. It appeals more directly and it means more to humanity than a thousand Vicksburgs, a thousand Corinths, a thousand Appomattoxes!—Chicago Herald.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE.

The Soldier of Fortune Has Found His Destiny.

GRAND ARMY UNDER THE SNOW.

Uprising of the Germanic States Follows the Disaster In Russia—Battles of Lutzen and Bautzen—The Fifth Coalition Allies In Paris—Abdication and Elba.

[Copyright, 1895, by John Clark Ridpath.]

XX.—FROM DRESDEN TO ELBA VIA MOSCOW.

In the early spring of 1812 Napoleon had his court in Dresden. Pageantry could go no further than was witnessed there. He was surrounded with a retinue of veritable kings and princes. The princesses were there also, headed by the mother of the King of Rome. Emile Bayard has painted for posterity one of the Imperial receptions. Fashion and gallantry and royal state could rise no higher. Meissonier has added to his Napoleonic cycle a picture of the "Advance of the Grand Army."

On the 29th of May, the march to the Niemen began. More than a half million of men, gathered from nearly a score of nations, moved forward. The cynical Bourrienne says that sixteen races, like so many chained dogs, advanced on Russia. The military genius of all Central and Western Europe was in the train. Napoleon was backed by all the resources of European civilization. He had his veterans and his marshals. He had his underkings. He had his genius, and the experience of more than fifteen years of warfare. He knew that he was now going into battle with an antagonist second only to England.

As for Russia, she had savage forces, vast domains, an assemblage of barbarous peoples, inaccessible cities, impassable rivers and illimitable steppes. She had also patriotism and physical hardihood. She had the Cossacks. She knew herself; and her enemy knew her not. She had winter—sublime, yellow-black winter, blown out of the hyperborean caverns, unfelt by the men of Western Europe. She had frozen mercury in her thermometers, and soldiers who would not fall when their brains were out!

On the 24th of June, the Grand Army, crossing the Niemen, headed towards Moscow. The advance was but little impeded. The Russians fell back before the resistless invaders. Soon, however, a new commander appeared on the scene—one with whom Napoleon was unfamiliar. It was Field-marshal Nature. Marshal Nature had an army that the Old Guard had never confronted. His commission was probably from God. His herald was frost, and his aide-de-camp was zero. One of his army corps was snow. His bellowing artillery was charged with Lithuanian tempests. Hail was his grape and shrapnel. The Emperor of the French had never studied his tactics—not even in the Alps.

The Russian summer was as midwinter to the soldiers of France and Spain and Italy. The divisions of Jerome and Eugene could hardly advance at all. The howling storms made impassable the ungraded roads; the 1200 guns of the Grand Army sank into the mire. Horse-life and man-life fell and perished in the sleet of the mock-summer that raged along the watershed between the Dwina and the Dnieper.

The Russians under Kutusoff receded during July and the first half of August. On the 16th of that month the first battle was fought at Smolensko. This place the French pounded into ruins and captured with a loss to themselves of nearly 12,000 men. Dorogobourg, Viazma, and Gjatsk fell before the invaders. The Russians durst not stand in the open field. Not until the 7th of September did Kutusoff plant himself on the Moskwa and offer battle to his antagonist. There, at the village of Borodino, was fought out the greatest murder of modern times. A thousand cannon vomited death all day. Under the smoke a quarter of a million of men struggled like tigers. At nightfall the French had the field. But the defeated Russians hung sullenly to the skirts of the bloody arena, where they had left more than 40,000 of their dead and wounded. The French losses were almost equally appalling. "Sire," said Marshal Ney, "we would better withdraw, and reform." "Thou advise a retreat, Michel?" said the marble head, as it turned to the Bulldog of Battles.

Kutusoff abandoned Moscow. Most of the inhabitants receded with him from the city to the great plains eastward. On the 15th of September, Napoleon entered the ancient capital. The streets were as a necropolis. All was silence. The conqueror took up his residence in the old palace of the Czars. He had now performed this act in nearly all the royal places of Europe. He had walked unbidden into Schonbrunn. In the vault at Potsdam he had put his hand on the catafalque of Frederick the Great. He had trod the unwelcoming slabs of the Escurial. He had wintered in Warsaw. Now he slept in the Kremlin.

Moscow promised rest after hardship. Here we will spend the winter in the luxurious quarters of the Muscovite grandees and metropolitans. We will extemporize our theaters, as in Cairo. Beautiful women shall dance before the marshals of the Empire. From this place we will issue our edicts, as from Berlin and Milan. Lo, out of the Bazaar, near the Kremlin, bursts a volume of flame! The surrounding region is lighted with the glare. The equinoctial gale springs up. The city is on fire in a thousand places. Skulkers have remained behind and given us to the flames. The French army tries in vain to quench the conflagration. For five days there is the roar of universal combustion. Then it subsides; but Moscow is in ruins. Napoleon returns to the Kremlin and opens vain negotiations with the Czar. Alexander and Kutusoff will not hear. The French are in the ashes of a burnt-up Russian city.

Already winter was at hand. Snow was falling. The Soldier of Fortune has at last found his destiny. On the 19th of October, he leaves Moscow, and the retreat begins to the Niemen. On every side the Cossacks arise and assail the fugitives. The soldiers of the West and South drop by thousands on the frozen roads. The snows cover them. The ice-darts in their sides are sharper than bayonets. The columns stagger and swing to right and left. A hundred and twenty thousand men roll away across the hostile world. At the Beresina the bridges are broken down under the retreating army. In the following spring, when the ice-gorges go down the river, 12,000 dead Frenchmen shall be washed up from the floods!

There is constant battle on flank and rear. All stragglers perish. The army dwindles. Ney brings up the rear-guard wasted to a handful. At the passage of the Niemen, soiled with dirt, blackened with smoke, without insignia, with only drawn sword and facing backwards towards the hated region, the "Bravest of the Brave" crosses the bridge. He is the last man to save himself from the indescribable horrors of the Campaign of Russia.

The remnants of the Grand Army find refuge in Konigsberg. Napoleon, after Moscow, had taken to a sledge, and had sped across the snow covered wastes of Poland on his way to Paris. He came there unannounced. At four o'clock on the following morning, some one found him in his office at the Tuileries with his war-map of Europe spread before him on the floor!

As soon as it was known that the Grand Army was under the snows of Russia, there were signs of upheaval through all the borders of the West. The Germanic States were first to profit by the disasters of the French. Frederick William gave his hand to the Czar. There was a revolt in Hamburg. The Confederation of the Rhine began to fall to pieces. Alexander sent an army to Berlin; Napoleon must guard his eastern frontier, or perish.

The turmoil of 1813 began on the 2nd of May with the battle of Lutzen. With incredible speed Napoleon had planted his new armies on a line extending from Lubec to Venice. At Lutzen the French were victorious. Frederick William, Alexander, and Napoleon were once more on the same field! On the 21st of May, the Emperor hurled 125,000 men on the allies at Bautzen, and won another victory. Davout retook Hamburg, and terribly punished that place for its defection. Napoleon held Dresden in one hand and routed the allies with the other until his antagonists were glad to accept an armistice. They agreed to convene at Prague for making a treaty of peace.

But secretly, in the interim, the Czar and Frederick William, aided by England, constructed the Fifth Coalition. Austria and Saxony were won over to the league. The father of Maria Louisa perfidiously entered the lists against her husband. On the 26th of August, after the truce had expired, the Emperor met the Prussians and Russians at Dresden, and gained another victory. But his enemies were only beaten—not overwhelmed.

The war in other parts of the field bore hardly on the French. At Grossbeeren the allies defeated Oudinot, and on the 26th of August, the battle of Katsbach was won by Blucher over Macdonald, who suffered heavy losses in men and guns. Bernadotte, who had renounced the Emperor, came down against Ney at Dennewitz, and there, on the 6th of September, disastrously defeated him. The allies concentrated in great force on Leipsic, and on the 16th of October were beaten there by Bonaparte. Vainly he sought to open negotiations. The second battle of Leipsic was fought on the 18th of the month—a terrible conflict in which Napoleon was forced from the field. The city was taken; the bridges blown up; and Poniatowsky drowned in the Elster.

The French, hard-pressed, were obliged to fall back from the frontier of Germany. In November, Napoleon reached Paris. He sought in all possible ways to conclude a peace, but also exerted himself during the winter to prepare for the coming avalanche. Beyond the Rhine the French power was broken up. Hanover was recovered by the allies. Holland proclaimed William I. of Orange. Jerome had to abdicate the throne of Westphalia. The small princes of Germany took back their ancient estates. Norway went to Sweden. Denmark leagued with Great Britain. The Austrians overran the Illyrian provinces. Murat, king of Naples, made a treaty with Austria. Only Eugene, viceroy of Italy, remained loyal in support of the Emperor.

In the beginning of 1814 was begun the so-called Campaign of France. Napoleon everywhere confronted his enemies. All the eastern borders were darkened with the oncoming armies of the Coalition. Wellington, who in the preceding summer had won the great battle of Vittoria, was now in command of the allies on the side of Flanders. Napoleon gave the Pope his liberty, and restored him to his States. All the whales and monsters of the Middle Ages came up from the sea; he threw to this one a bait and to that one a tub. The Austrians under Schwartzenburg crossed the Rhine. Blucher also crossed, at Coblentz. The Russians came by way of Holland. Bernadotte pressed southward with 100,000 men.

The struggle that ensued was without a parallel in history. Napoleon, like King John at Poitiers, warded right and warded left. He fought one battle after another, until both Blucher and Schwartzenburg were crushed, and Austria sued for peace. But the Germanic powers returned to the battle with the powerful support of Russia and Sweden and England; and the French began to recede. It was now seen that the allied generals had learned from the lion many of his own arts of war.

Napoleon, with his usual audacity, plunged into Germany; the allies, instead of following him, pressed on towards Paris, and the Emperor was obliged to return. Arriving at Fontainebleau, he found that Alexander and Frederick William were already in his capital. Europe was in an uproar. The French Empire was sinking to its knees. Such legislative authority as existed in Paris was asserting itself for peace and abdication. On the 11th of April, the Emperor agreed to withdraw in favor of his son; but the triumphant allies would have nothing less than the absolute. The absolute was accepted by the Man of Destiny. To him was given, instead of the Empire of Europe, the island of Elba, with its ninety square miles of petty mountains, its sardines, its crabapples, and its small wine! Besides this, in compensation for the crowns of Caesar and Charlemagne, we will give General Bonaparte a pension of 2,000,000 francs!

THE NATIONAL EMBLEM.

More Than Two Years of Warfare Without a Flag.

A national ensign was not adopted till June, 1777. A glance at the promiscuous banners under which the different American forces campaigned during the first two years of the Revolution will be found of interest at this anniversary of the birth of the nation.

The first regular battle of the war was Bunker Hill. It is not likely that there were any colors carried by the few militiamen who were hastily got together at Concord and Lexington two months before. But after the skirmishes at these places each of the colonies set up its own flag. Unfortunately description of these flags were not preserved, and the information we have is very vague.

The most definite information as to American flags we get is in foreign journals at ports where American ships at that time touched. There is no satisfactory information as to the standard used by the colonists at Bunker Hill, fought on June 17, 1775. Indeed it has never been proved that they had any standards, though one writer says "they were as various as the troops were motley." There is a picture of the battle in the rotunda of the capitol at Washington, painted by Trumbull, the celebrated American artist of that day, in which the Americans are pictured fighting under a red flag having a white canton bearing a green pine tree. Warren is said to have reminded his troops of the motto on their standard, on one side of which was, "Qui transtulit sustinet" (He who brought us here will sustain us), and on the other, "An appeal to heaven." This appears to have been the Connecticut motto. An old lady told Mr. Lossing, the historian, that her father was at the battle and assisted in hoisting the flag. He described it to her. The ground was blue, with one corner quartered by the red cross of St. George, in one section of which was a pine tree.

On July 18, 1775, a standard was presented to Washington bearing the motto, "An Appeal to Heaven." On Oct. 20, 1775, a plan was suggested for a Revolutionary flag, which was a white ground and a tree in the middle bearing the motto, "An Appeal to Heaven." It was the flag of American floating batteries. This was undoubtedly adopted by Massachusetts, and it was used on American ships.

In September, 1775, Colonel Moultrie, in South Carolina, had a flag made which was blue, with a white crescent in the corner. On June 28, 1776, this flag, with the word "Liberty" inscribed upon it, was raised on what is now Fort Moultrie. This was the first American flag displayed in the south.

The colors of the American fleet (July, 1776) were 13 stripes, with a rattlesnake across, bearing the motto, "Don't Tread on Me."

In Paul Jones' flag the stripes were alternate red and blue. The rattlesnake was a favorite device among the colonists. In 1775 an old device used in the French and Indian war was revived, being a rattlesnake cut into parts. It was adopted by the newspapers to represent the separate colonies and with the motto, "Unite or Die."

On the 8th of February, 1776, Colonel Gadsden presented to congress a standard for the commander of the navy. It was a yellow flag, with a rattlesnake in the middle coiled ready to strike, and the motto, "Don't Tread on Me." At the equipping of a fleet a committee was appointed at Cambridge to consider a flag. The result was the union jack, coupled with 13 stripes. This was the close of the year 1775. The flag was hoisted on the 2d of January at the Cambridge camp. At the battle of Long Island, Aug. 26, 1776, the British captured from a small band of Americans a red damask flag, with the motto, "Liberty." At the battle of White Plains, Oct. 28, 1776, the Americans carried a flag with a crossed sword and staff, with a liberty cap on the end of the staff and the motto, "Liberty or Death."

The earliest suggestion of stars in an American flag is in a standard of the Philadelphia Light horse (1774-5), though it is not probable that this influenced the design of the national flag. It was on the 14th of June, 1777, that the American congress decided on a banner. It was on that day resolved "that the flag of the 13 United States be 13 stripes of alternate red and white; that the Union be 13 stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation." This design was at once promulgated, and the vast number of colonial flags bearing rattlesnakes, pine trees, union jacks and other emblems and mottoes disappeared, and the remainder of the war was fought out under the stars and stripes.

CHAPTER V.

Presently they came to an open grave, with the earth piled red about it, and two men leaning upon their spades. The women with the torches stood at head and foot; and when the men came up with their burden Philip Standsfield bade them cast it in and be brisk. But the men were kindlier than he, and very gently laid the poor harried corpse in earth. In a moment the men were filling the kindly soil, while Philip Standsfield stood silent, and the two women at head and foot cursed the dead without stop or ceasing even for a moment.

Then Umphray Spurway stepped forward and bade them stay and mind what they were doing. He declared that he would make such a mutiny as king and parliament would hear about if they thus laid the body away without crowner-law or examination. But Philip Standsfield flashed a paper before his eyes and said, "There, what say ye to that? There is an order to bury from Sir James Dalrymple of Stair, the king's advocate!" At which, much dashed in spirit and astonished, there remained nought for us to do but to betake ourselves homeward.

It was upon the night of the Tuesday that I was again waked out of my sleep—for in these days there were nought but night alarms—by three of the officers of the Government from Edinburgh, who had brought two chirurgions of the most distinguished in the city, together with an order from the privy council for the raising and examining of the body of Sir James.

So right gladly Mr. Spurway and I went our ways with them to be witnesses. The chirurgions and the officers would not permit us to come near when they set about to examine the body, but made us stand at the kirk entrance to keep all else out should any try the door.

It was nigh the breaking of the morning when one of the surgeons suddenly held up his hand and an officer leaped down and out at the door like a shot. Then every one waited, with the candles burning low and the poor body of him that had been my friend again decently covered up. It was dreary work waiting thus, and we heard nothing but the drip of large raindrops on the roof where the damp had seeped through the trees. Then we heard the tramp of feet and the rattle of arms without. Umphray Spurway opened the door and we saw a company of his Majesty's foot-guards at the kirk yett. When they came to our stance, they wheeled right and left with clash of accouterment, and there, fair between the open leaves of the door, stood Philip Standsfield with a king's officer on either side of him.

A little pale-faced man in a wig who had been the keenest about the examination then went into the precentor's desk, and the guard brought the prisoner into the elders' seat. There were a couple of candles, one on either end of the table, and the sharp-faced man had another set on the angle of the desk beside him.

Philip Standsfield stood between his guards as pale as death. Said the little man to him, "What have you to say, Philip Standsfield, why you should not be committed to stand your trial for the unnatural murder of your father?"

"I charge John Bell, minister, with the fact," said he, dowily holding to his former folly.

"John Bell?" said the little man doubtfully, sucking at a pen, for he was not accustomed, as I think, to hear a minister so spoken of, "ye mean Mr. John Bell, minister of Morton—take care how you speak of him."

And that was my first intimation that I was in fact a minister with a settled charge. It was my Lord Advocate Dalrymple who spoke.

"I charge him with the murder!" said Philip Standsfield sullenly.

"Enough of this," said the advocate, "I charge you, Philip Standsfield, with cruel parricide, and these two women here."

With a wave of his hand he caused the guard to bring in the wretched women who had danced at the midnight burial. Now they stood weeping and wringing their hands, calling on heaven to witness their innocence.

"I call you not guilty as this desperate man is guilty," said the advocate, "but I will prove the extent of your guilt out of the mouth of your innocent children, and if ye confess your punishment shall be light."

Then in that kirk of Morham there was a scene to wring tears from hearts of stone. The candles burned dim and low. The light of morning came struggling in, making the white wrapping sheets and mort-cloths very ghastly, the chirurgion's horrid implements lying uncleansed upon them. The two women never ceased to wail and cry, but in the black bitterness of his evil heart Philip Standsfield stood silent with his hands gripped on every side by the armed men of the guard.

"NO!" SAID PHILIP, BLACKLY, "THAT I WILL NOT."

I wondered greatly what they awaited as the light came clearer and clearer. For I was shivering and every one save the little hawk-nosed man in the precentor's desk was blue with cold. But as for him, he made himself a new point to his pen and did it carefully.

Then after we had waited long there were brought into the kirk two children in their night habits, looking tearfully afraid. Nor could I imagine for what cause they were brought out of their warm beds at that time of night. But at the first gliff of them as they came through the doors, the women cast their hands upwards and cried out as in an agony:

"Cruel, cruel," they said, "to make our bairns bear witness against us!"

Then the sharp-faced man took the bairns in hand, being a boy and a girl, questioning them none so unkindly, but rather as one that has suchlike of his own and kenned the lilt of their talk. So the little James Thomson told how that his father and mother came home after being gone a long season. They went to bed and began to talk together, he lying meantime cross the foot. They told how that Philip Standsfield had done the deed, declaring that he should now be laird of all before the morrow's morn, and that then he ride in their skirts that had been ill to him, and how he had promised them great rewards for helping him to cast the body into the water so that it might appear that his father had been drowned.

So the lad spoke, and when his father and mother reproached him, he kneeled down in the kirk there and besought them with tears running down his face to confess, but, being hardened, they would not for all his asking.

It was still more piteous when little Anna Mark, that was daughter to the ill woman Janet Johnston, a bairn of but nine year or thereby, with yellow hair and much of it running every way down her back, came forward. Being so little they had, perforce, to give her a footstool to stand upon.

But all she could say was "Dinna hurt my minnie, braw man, dinna hurt my minnie!"

For it is a strange thing that though the woman was such an ill wretch, she had not been ill to the bairn. But the child loved her and that greatly. And Dalrymple looked upon Anna Mark and said, "No, no, little lass, your mother's life shall not be hurt because of you. But if ye will tell what your mother said when she came home that night she was out late, you may help us muckle and your mother too."

"Are ye sure of that?" said the little one, ceasing her tears and looking up.

"Then my minnie said when she cam' home that it was all done and well done, but not by her. She would yet be a lady and ride in her carriage. And the braw man that gied me the pennies guarded the door with a drawn sword and a pistol in his hand."

At the word I minded that which I had seen at the latch-hole of the door, and my demon was made plain to me.

I was about to rise and tell my tale; but Umphray Spurway dragged me back by the coat tail. For one of the women

"AND I AM A FREE MAN AND FULLY ASSOILIZE?"

suddenly lifted up her hands over her head and fell forward over the seat with the cry, "Oh, God! it is enough. It is true, all true; I confess."

And the other also suddenly gave way in like manner, crying, "It is true, it is true; but my sin is not unto death. Say that my sin is not unto death."

Then the little advocate in the desk took his pen between his teeth and bundled up his papers. As he rose, he said to Philip Standsfield where he stood as gray as a dead man in the light of the morning. "Have ye anything to say? Will ye touch your father for the test of blood?"

"No," said Philip, blackly, "that I will not."

Umphray Spurway came forward.

"My Lord Advocate," said he, "runs it with your will, if the parents of these children are long time confined or banished, that I should bind the lad apprentice to my trade, which is a good one, and adopt the little lass to be as my own child in my home?"

"It is well said, Umphray!" said the Advocate Dalrymple, "and like your good heart. Ye are little likely to be troubled with their forbears, at least till they are marriage-muckle and settled in homes of their own."

"And am I a free man and fully assoilize, my Lord?" said I, making him a bow as he came out of his desk.

He looked at me with a queer smile that I have never yet gotten to the bottom of, and made me an answer that was barely civil.

"Aye, Mr. Bell, ye are a free man, I may say that; but not a man of great wisdom or sense, with your evil spirits and visions. If it had not been for your good friend the Englishman here, ye had worn the hempen collar instead of ministering to the good folks of Morton."

And this I still think to have been a distinctly uncivil speech of Stair's, and when I told Drumlanrig, my patron, he laughed and swore that he thought so too.

But the eyes of the little advocate flashed wildfire as they were turned on Philip Standsfield.

"But as for you, murderer of your father, ye shall die the death, as I am a true man and the king's advocate."

At this Philip Standsfield turned on him the gaze of a fiend. The guard clashed out with him. In an instant the kirk was clear and the king's officers marching up the kirk road with the prisoners in their midst.

At the door stood Umphray Spurway with the bairns in either hand, comforting them. And the sunshine came out and fell on the heads of us all as we stood

And little Anna Mark stood and waved her hand prettily, as a child does to a pageant that passes by with music and banners, when they marched her mother out of sight forever. Doubtless it was best for her. Nevertheless, it brought the water to the eyes of them that saw it, to see the mother looking ever back and the young child smiling and becking and waiving her little hand.

All Are Happy, Glad, and Well.
[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

The theories of physicians in regard to female complaints suffer a "Waterloo" very frequently, when sensible and thinking women take matters into their own hands.

Women are sometimes compelled to act for themselves, because of the suffering forced upon them by incompetent doctors, who are baffled by very simple complaints, because they are not the right sex to comprehend them.

Lydia E. Pinkham, when she gave to the world her Vegetable Compound, lifted women from the darkness into light. She placed within their reach a guaranty, not only of health, but of delicacy and self-respect.

The following letter is a little story where a "dear little boy" was the "Waterloo."

"I have taken three bottles of your Vegetable Compound, one package of Sanative Wash, one box of Liver Pills; and now I have a dear little babe four weeks old, and I am well. I have to thank you for this.

"I have spent $200.00 for doctors' bills without a cure. For my cure I only spent $5.00.

"I was once a victim of female troubles in their worst form. I have suffered untold agonies every month; had to stay in bed, and have poultices applied, and then could not stand the pain.

"My physician told me if I became pregnant I would die. I had bladder trouble, itching, backache, catarrh of the stomach, hysteria, and heart trouble, fainting spells and leucorrhœa. Can you wonder that I sing the praises of a medicine that has cured me of all these ills?" MRS. GEO. C. KIRCHNER, 351 Snediker Ave., Brooklyn, N.Y.

PINNED UNDER AN ENGINE.

Ferry Engineer Liebensberger Bosses His Own Rescue.

Engineer Jacob Liebensburger of the Lehigh Valley freight train that was wrecked on the outskirts of Newark died at the St. Francis Hospital, Jersey City, of contusions received in the back chest and head.

He was one more example of the plucky men that have charge of locomotives. For four hours he lay with one leg pinned between the cab of his engine and a railroad tie and with a fire raging in a huge pile of freight cars within a few feet of him and threatening each moment to reach him. Yet he remained cool and collected all that time in spite of his suffering and directed the work of the men who were striving with might and main to release him. Although his leg was tightly pinned the bone was not crushed.

When the train struck the open switch it was running over thirty miles an hour. As the heavy engine struck the soft earth its drivers sank deep into the soil, and with a lurch it toppled over on its right side. The train of twenty-nine cars, heavily laden with meat, hay and lard, rushed on it, and eleven of them formed a high pile over the tender. There was a rush of scalding steam, the red hot coals of the firebox were scattered through the heap of smashed cars and in a minute they were in flames.

As the engine left the track, Fireman Runyon jumped and escaped with nothing more serious than painful injuries.

Engineer Liebensberger also jumped, but the engine fell over on its side and he was caught fast as he fell. Benjamin Bartholomew, the flagman and a brakeman named Duffner, were in the caboose in the rear and were not hurt.

A train bound from Elizabeth to Newark on the Central Railroad, which crosses the Lehigh just below the place where the wreck was, came along shortly after the accident and Conductor Robert Prall stopped it long enough to send over all the buckets and tools he had on board.

In the mean time the fire was swiftly nearing the engineer. Something had to be done and quickly.

"Keep off the fire, boys," said Leibensberger. "Keep off the fire and get a jack screw and try to lift up the engine a bit so that I can get my leg out."

The men went to work with a will. From all the houses within a mile buckets were brought. An alarm of fire had been sent in and four fire companies started for the wreck, but could not get their apparatus nearer than half a mile owing to the softness of the meadow. They brought their buckets, however, and soon a bucket brigade, 400 strong, was passing water from a nearby ditch to the burning wreck.

The flames went higher and higher, lighting up the flat, wet meadows for miles around, and in the light could be seen the dusky figures of the crowd working with their buckets to save a man's life. In spite of their efforts, every now and then a great volume of flame, fed by the lard, would roll out as if to destroy the men at one stroke. Each time the fire was driven back as if by main force.

A number of men got a light jack screw and tried to raise the huge mass of metal. They might as well have tried to raise a mountain with it.

All this time Leibensberger lay and superintended the work. He was cooler and more collected than any of the men about him.

"Get shovels and picks, boys," he ordered, "and dig this tie from under my leg; then I can get out."

The rescuers seized on the idea and began to work with renewed hope. But fate was against them. The fire got beyond the control of the bucket brigade and drove them away by its intense heat. Again all hands turned to fight the fire and again, after a hard struggle, it was beaten back.

The wreck had occurred at 10:30, and it was now after half past 1. Three hours had passed, quick enough to those at work, but like eternity to the man that was pinned to the earth, who was getting weaker and weaker. Still he kept his wonderful nerve.

"It's no good boys," he said, "get a surgeon and have him cut off my leg. I can't stay here to be burned."

"Brace up, old man," cried men in the crowd cheerily, "we'll have you out before long. The wreckers are due here every minute."

Finally Leibensberger fainted dead away. Dr. Hopkins, a Newark physician gave him stimulants. When he revived, he looked up and said with a little smile:

"I can't stand this much longer. You must hurry."

About 2 o'clock the fire again got the better of the brigade, and it seemed as if the man was doomed. A call was sent in to Newark for more aid, and a fire engine was taken to the railroad and preparations made to put it on a flat car and carry it to the wreck, but before that was done the wrecking train had come and there was no need of it.

It was sharp, short work when the wreckers got there. The tie under Leibensberger's leg was got out, and at 2:30, just four hours after the accident occurred, amid great cheering, the nervy engineer was pulled out.

He was put on a train and taken to Jersey City and put in St. Francis Hospital. His leg was badly marked, but the injuries about the head and chest were so severe that, with the terrible strain he had undergone, they caused his death.

SOMETHING TO WEAR

PREVAILING FASHIONS ARE VARIED IN CUT AND COLOR.

The Fullness of Sleeves and Skirts is Lessening. General Effects Above the Waist Are However, of the Balloon Series.

Fashion, like flowers, unfold in rapid succession as the season advances, and the first warm day brings out the soft light colors of summer attire; but it is the details, rather than the outlines of fashion, that reveal all the elements of novelty in the latest modes.

Skirts and sleeves reached the limit of fulness and stiffness some time ago, and their proportions have been diminishing since the extreme styles of the late winter, so the really new things in fashion are seen in the accessions of dress, that give it variety and chic, and have multiplied into a diversity of styles so bewildering that it is difficult to choose.

The wide collars, ruffs and ruches which are a revival of the Henry IV. period, are a distinct feature of the season's fashions, and the latest fancy in these miniature cape effects is a collar of ecru linen batiste trimmed with applique designs of white lace and cut sailor shape in the back with long points in front arranged to fall loosely.

Nearly all the bodices are in contrast with the skirt and sleeves, which are often alike. Mousseline de soie is as much used as ever, and charming waists or taffeta silk gowns are made of black silk muslin, lined with white chiffon and made in blouse fashion over silk of the plain color, which predominates in the pattern. The white silk muslin under the black makes it the more transparent. Black lace insertion, with an irregular edge, sewn in stripes on black chiffon, which is also lined with white and made over a color, supplies a very pretty waist. Yellow lace is generally used for a finish for this style of bodice. It may be arranged in a frilled band down the front, or, where black muslin is used, plain yellow insertion may be set in crossed—in squares to form a yoke.

Elbow sleeves are the prevailing style for summer dresses, especially for young ladies, and afternoon as well as evening gowns sport this style of sleeve, made with one or two large puffs, as fancy dictates.

The inevitable box plait which appears on so many waists of all kinds seems likely to endure throughout the summer. The latest fad is to cut or fold the plaits so they will round out instead of being flat, and they are often trimmed in some manner, either on the edge with frills of chiffon or lace, or striped the entire width with rows of lace insertion and in some instances the plait is made of plain silk in a contrasting color.

Mohair materials are fast gaining in popularity, and some of the latest and most stylish gowns are made of alpaca. It comes in stripes, self colored spots, and plain colors, and in the better qualities is delightfully smooth and glossy. It looks very much like the kind worn years ago, but it is called alpaca poil de chevre, and gray is a popular color.

Simple gowns for traveling and morning wear are made of black and dark alpaca, with Eton coats and plain full skirts, with only a facing of hair cloth at the bottom.

Openly Admired by Gov. McKinley.

Gov. McKinley has a very pretty custom of doffing his hat to his wife before beginning his day's work at the Capitol, which has elicited many a compliment from men and women who have observed the daily incident. Governor and Mrs. McKinley occupy a suite of rooms in the Neil House, which stands opposite the Capitol. In the morning, when the governor crosses the street, he walks forty or fifty feet to the left of the main walk in the Capitol grounds, and courteously lifting his hat bows reverently to Mrs. McKinley, after which he proceeds slowly to his office. After lunch the same thing is repeated, and this custom has been observed during the entire time Gov. McKinley has been in the State House.—Cleveland Leader.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destored forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

THE IDEAL OF WOMANHOOD.

MISS CASEY'S VALEDICTORY AT THE PAROCHIAL SCHOOL.

Father Murphy Advises the Scholars in an Admirable Address—Names of Those Receiving Honorable Mention

A good entertainment does not always secure a large audience but the closing exercises of St. Mary's Parochial School, last evening, filled the school hall to overflowing with an enthusiastic audience. The exercises were even better than Thursday night, if such a thing were possible, and all were sorry when the curtain fell on the final tableaux.

The programme opened with a selection, Cheerfulness," by a chorus of girls dressed in white. Then followed a selection "Ye Banks and Braes O'Bonnie Doan" a selection by a double quartette composed of the following: Misses C. Cooley and L. Flanagan, sopranos; Misses C. Flynn and A. McIntyre, tenors; Misses M. Smith and E. Kelly, altos; Misses E. Day and K. Walsh, bases. "Come Where the Cowslip Bloweth" was next rendered by the chorus, after which Whittier's well-known "Barbara Frietchie" was given most charmingly by the girls of the senior classes as a part recitation and part song. Miss E. Day next recited "The Legend of Bregenz" in a manner that brought forth great applause. Then came one of the features of the evening, the Roman sabre drill arranged by Mme. Menzelli. It was something entirely novel, but proved most successful. The drilling was done by a number of uniformed young men with swords and shields assisted by a bevey of girls dressed to represent Peace and Victory. Many most beautiful tableaux were the result. A most enjoyable duet, "Pizzicati," was next given by Miss K. Quinn, piano, and Miss A. Quinn, violin.

The attention of all was held by the operetta "Queen Flora's Day Dreams" in which the characters were, Queen Flora, Miss Anna Daley; Stella, Miss Catharine Roach; Bumble Bee, John Madden; Bull-Frog, Charles McCann; besides numberless faries, daisies, roses, butterflies and frogs. Many pretty dances were introduced while the bullfrog dance, led by Charles McCann, sent the audience into roars of laughter. Several beautiful tableaux ended the operetta, which was photo graphed by G. Thorn.

Lawrence Doyle then recited, "Independence Ball" after which a chorus or pretty girls dressed in white, with red and blue sashes, sang The Star Spangled Banner.

The next time the curtain rose it showed the three graduates, Miss Elizabeth Casey, Miss Catherine Flynn, and Miss Catherine Cooley, seated in front with the members of the senior classes behind them.

Father Smyth then came forward and presented each of the graduating young women with a diploma and a gold medal. Father Murphy next announced the following honorable mentions:—Senior Class, Mary Smith, Anna O'Keefe, and Edward Flynn.

First preparatory class—Joseph Murphy, Elizabeth Rafferty, and Elizabeth Flanagan.

Second preparatory class—Catherine O'Keefe, Arwea Ryan, and Joseph Walsh.

Third preparatory class—Michael Owens, Henry Shannon, and Mary Burke.

Fourth preparatory class—Susan Lyneh, Mary Lyness, and Thomas Mack.

First junior class—Thomas O'Keefe, Joseph Whalen, and George Taylor.

Second junior class—Mary Higgins, Loretto Flanagan, and Catharine Muldowney.

Miss Elizabeth Casey, the valedictorian, delivered her essay on "Ideal of Womanhood," which was as follows:

The Old Testament begins with the mournful story of a woman who distrusted God, disobeyed, fell and dragged down with her the whole of our race. The New Testament begins with the history of a woman who trusted God and gave herself up to His Holy will in loving obedience, and rose into His light, and with her lifted up our whole race. Against the sad story of Eve is set the joyful story of Mary. Both parts of the Sacred Scriptures begin with a woman. The first is the sad story of a fall; how this world of ours went wrong, and the heart that drank in the poison which poisoned our whole race was the heart of a woman. The second tells the glorious story of the rising, of the redemption and restoration, and here, too, the lowly and loving heart which received the joyful word of redemption and renewed the world was the heart of a woman. Hence, according to the designs of Divine Prosidence, woman was destined to exert a lasting influence in the world. Whether that influence was to be a baneful or a beneficial one, depended on the world at large and on woman in particular. In the early ages of the world, woman was treated as the slave of man; she was regarded as a being of an inferior order. The Hindoos pronounced her an afterthought of the Deity and the mother of all evil. The historic accounts of old pagan rites give us an idea of the humiliation and degradation of woman in ancient times. The contemptuous opinion entertained of women in the past has found expression not only in literature but also in unjust laws and customs. In marriage she has been a serf, in public instruction she was ignored as though she did not exist. She was the equal of man only when punishment and payment of taxes were in question. In past ages Shakespeare wrote two mottoes, one contradicting the other; the first was an old adage, believed in by the world and quoted generally, "Frailty, they name is woman," and underneath it and unlike it was the other, "The Earth waits for her Queen;" the first described woman as she has been understood in the past, as she has masqueraded in history and as she has, in a certain sense, existed. The other prophesied of that grander type of woman, towards which the whole sex is moving. This grander type of womanhood was shown to the world by God, Himself. For it was not till the dawn of Christianity that woman was exhibited in her true light, or permitted to occupy her proper sphere in the world. Christianity proved that woman, instead of being the "Mother of evil," could and should be the "Mother of good," a "ministering angel" in the world, the queen for whom the earth was waiting. Christianity, by showing forth the true part that woman performed in the redemption of the world, by placing Mary the Madonna in the exalted position which is justly hers, has shown the world that the power and influence of woman, for good, is of the greatest importance. The chivalry of the middle ages, which made of woman something sacred, was but the result of the church's labor in making the world realize the true worth and influence of woman. Woman can make her influence felt in various ways, and in various spheres. She can exact of the world a respect and a deference which none other on earth can exact. She can repress the roughness of human nature, she can soothe and mollify the more violent passions of man, she can make the world better by exerting her influence in the home, in the family and through them over the whole world. Of late it seems to be the fashion among women to appear as much like men as possible; but such is not in accordance with the true ideals of the grace and beauty of womanly nature. It is the true and established sphere of women to influence man and guide him to look to higher ideals and more worthy desires. Many men of rare promise, whose early manhood has glowed with high ambitions, have been made petty and ignoble by their female companions; these through physical weakness, mental paverty and lowness of moral tone, have ruined the progress of their sons, brothers or husbands by lowering their ideals. For this reason women should devote their faculties to the cultivation of all the nobler virtues so as to fit themselves for the state of life in which Providence has placed them. When woman does this; when she fulfils the noble, the exalted destiny that God has marked out for her, when she can say that she has left the world gentler, better than she found it, then she has approached nearer to the true ideal of womanhood. Mary the Madonna shines as a star through the mist of ages, as the highest type of womanhood. Yet it was by devoting herself to the cultivation of the domestic virtues, by her true womanliness, that she reached that exalted position. She is our ideal, and if we, the women of the present age, wish to approach her standard, then we must follow in her steps. Not by trying to occupy the place in the social or political order, destined only for men, will women reach that standard, but by cultivating like Mary the virtues that render women a mighty power on earth.

Father Murphy next made a short address. He said in part:

To instill a noble sentiment into the heart is of far greater value than the teaching of the human mind. This is only brought about by religion. Our system of education embraces the religious and natural sciences. Education means to draw out and to train up, and it must train every faculty. Man is composed of two elements, the material and the spiritual, and the last is the most important. Our system of education develops the spiritual as well as the material, it satisfies the noble ambitions of the soul as well as the ambitions of the mind. An education that does not develop both is not a perfect education. I dot need to refute the calumny that our church favors ignorance. History is my witness. All the learning of the middle ages was stored up by the church to be given out as man should wish. The libraries and art galleries of the Vatican are thrown open today to the students of all religions, and everything is done for the advancement of learning and science.

Let us always go forward, let our motto be "Excelsior." The barbarian is happy in his way, but where is the Christian soul that would return to barbarity. The aim of the Catholic education is to advance, but let us remember the God who made us and from whom all blessings flow.

After a vocal solo, "We Now Must Part," by Miss Catherine Cooley, the exercises closed with a tableau composed of the graduates and the girls of the senior classes.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mrs. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else, then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottle at Randolph's drug store. STANDS WHERE HE STOOD.

MR. HUMBLE STILL OPPOSES WATCHUNG AVENUE EXTENSION.

Ordinance Looking Towards the Opening of Duer Street Is Laid on the Table—Other Borough Council Business.

An adjourned meeting of the North Plainfield Council was held last evening, all the members being present except Mr. Schutt.

A communication was received from Secretary A. E. Kenney, of the Fourth of July Executive Committee inviting the Mayor and Council to review the parade. It was unanimously accepted.

W. J. Buttfield stated in a communication that he had laid a stone walk on the northwest side of Rockview avenue between Magnolia and West End avenues, and he asked that the adjoining property owners be requested to make their walks conform with the ordinance. It was referred to the Street Committee.

A small number of bills were presented and later ordered paid.

Mr. Smith stated that he had seen the surveyor in regard to the grade on Harrison street and as soon as he obtained it they would then be ready to receive bids. He also said that the work on Somerset street was finished, as was also Greenbrook road, and that today the Street Commissioner would commence repairing Wahington avenue, Grove street and several cross streets. The report was received and filed.

The Mayor then stated the object of the meeting was the personal objection of J. P. Humble to the opening of Watchung avenue. Mr. Humble was given an opportunity to state his objections, but he said that he had nothing further to say than that stated in the letter which he sent to the Council.

The Mayor said that the next thing to do was to select a person to treat with the property owners along said proposed new avenue, to see what property can be purchased for, and report to Council. He then appointed Dr. Justus H. Cooley.

Mr. Lounsbury offered a resolution that Duer street be opened, and that the Clerk give the proper notice for all objectors to file their statements at the Council rooms on July 17th, before six o'clock in the evening.

Mr. Valiant thought that the opening of Watchung avenue would be the greatest improvement the borough had ever known, and did not favor the opening of Duer street. He amended the resolution, so to have it lay on the table. The amendment was carried, Mr Lounsbury alone voting against it.

Mr. Smith presented a resolution that the action of the Mayor and Council in drawing $98 in favor of Collector Spencer be ratified. It was carried.

A resolution by Mr. Lounsbury, that Corporation Counsel C. A. Reed draw up an ordinance regulating the size tires to be used on wagons and heavy trucks, was carried.

The Mayor then appointed J. J. Stahl assistant chief of Fire Department and Mr. Peck offered a resolution that the name be confirmed, which was carried. Mr. Valiant offered a similar resolution in regard to Dr. Cooley. That was also adopted.

Mr Smith reported that several weeks ago notice had been served on certain property owners to regard to the laying of sidewalk in front of their property, and that all had complied except one or two and they were preparing to follow out instructions, but one citizen had been complained of because he had not complied. He had seen him and explained wherein he had not complied. Mr. Smith wanted to know if he should have the work done.

The Mayor thought it would be best to give the thirty days notice and then if it was not done, have the Council by resolution authorize Mr. Smith to have it done. Council then ajourned.

Wooden Wedding Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Overland, of 226 Grove street, celebrated their wooden wedding at their home on Wednesday evening. During the evening excellent music was enjoyed, games were played, and a bountiful supply of refreshments were served. There was a large number of Mr. and Mrs. Overland's friends present, who extended hearty congratulations.

A Picnic to the Drive.

Mrs. Waters and Mrs. Thorn, of East Third street, arranged a very enjoyable picnic to Johnston's Drive yesterday. Those who formed the merry party were Jennie and Lillia Thorn, Arthur and Frank Thorn, Loulia Waters, Vernon Waters, Lizzie Stratton, Mrs. Stratton, Mrs. Thorn, and Mrs. Waters. All joined heartily in making the day one of pleasure.

NORTH PLAINFIELD CENSUS.

FIGURES OF BOTH THE BOROUGH AND TOWNSHIP.

The Township Has Fallen Off and the Borough Shows an Increase—Details of the Enumeration.

Assessor Cooley completed the census of the North Plainfield borough and township today. The total inhabitants in borough and township was, in 1890, 4,231, and this year it is 4,879. The detailed report of the enumeration is as follows:

Library Accessions.

Among the collection of books just given to the Free Public Library by Mrs. H. E. Bowen, of 740 Watchung avenue, is the very valuable "Narrative" of Charles Wilkes, U. S. N. This is the account of the U. S. exploring expedition made in 1838-'42, of which he had charge. It is contained in five large volumes, and illustrated with many steel and other engravings, and forms an exceedingly valuable addition to the historical department. Others given by Mrs. Bowen are: Chamberlin's Commercial Law, Headley's Life of Gen. Grant, Savage's Life of President Johnson, Cornwell's Great Fire in Boston, Milman's edition of Gibbon's Rome, in six volumes, etc.

A Young Thief.

For sometime past Thomas Johnson, a colored boy in the employ of Edsall, has been stealing goods from the store. They were missed but it was difficult to detect the person.

Yesterday Mr. Edsall succeded in catching the young thief. It was learned that he had taken neckties, handkerchiefs, jewelry, and money from a pocketbook belonging to one of the clerks. The boy confessed his guilt and was discharged. He took the articles at different times and placed them in a box he had hid back of the building and at night would take them away.

Insurance Money Contest.

The case of Henry Pendleton deceased, against Metropolitan Insurance Company, was tried yesterday morning before Justice Mosher. Lawyer S. S. Swackhamer represented the widow and City Attorney James Connolly, of Elizabeth, the company. The plaintiff claimed fraud in the payment of a death claim of $165, while the defendents claimed that they did not owe the money. The case consumed three hours and Justice Mosher reserved his decision till next Monday.

Annie Pleaded Guilty.

Annie McDonald, the young girl who is charged with stealing a pair of handcuffs from Constable Worsinger, of Roselle, pleaded guilty in the Court of Special Sessions at Elizabeth, yesterday. There is some question now as to whether the charge should be for larceny. The prisoner was remanded for one week, when the Court will pass its judgment.

DYNAMITE AND A HAIRPIN.

A BOY LOSES HIS HAND BY THE COMBINATION.

Picked a Cartridge Until It Exploded With Fearful Results — Found the Disastrous Play Thing in a Tool Chest.

Clarkson Palmer, the twelve-year-old son of Mrs. Forrester, of 1113 West Third street, was the victim of a terrible accident last night between eight and nine o'clock, when a dynamite cartridge exploded in his left hand, completely shattering that member.

Young Palmer has been working for sometime with Michael Udahl, grading streets in the west end near the Irving School. It often became necessary for Mr. Udahl to use dynamite cartridges in removing old stumps of trees and large stones in properly grading the streets, and he always had a supply in his tool chest.

Last night when Palmer stopped work he saw the cartridges in the chest, picked three out and took them home with him. For a few nights past he had been helping a neighbor, Mr. Cashon, to move, but last night he remained at home. A little later his step-father, Charles Forrester, was sent for to help move a stove.

In the hall Palmer, his sister and two smaller brothers were seated. His sister noticed that Clarkson had a cartridge in his hand, but thinking it was an old one paid no particular attention, as he sat there picking at it with a hairpin. They were all close to each other, when without any warning the three cartridges exploded, the one he was picking at effected the others in exploding.

Mrs. Palmer heard the terrific noise and almost fainted, while the sister and two brothers were horrified. The injured boy was frightened beyond description.

Those near him were spattered with blood as was also the walls a distance of some four feet from where he was seated.

He was taken at once to Muhlenburg Hospital, and Drs. Long and Boone were called. They found that the boy's hand was so badly injured that he will have to lose it, and the pieces of flesh and bone left were amputated near the wrist.

Today young Palmer is getting along as well as can be expected and it is not thought that he will be confined to the hospital more than a few days.

His mother is nearly prostrated from the effects of the accident.

That the explosion did not kill those in the group is a mystery.

THE KING'S DAUGHTERS.

Gold Rule Circle Conduct a Profitable Lawn Festival.

Pretty waitresses and good things to eat made the lawn festival of the Golden Rule Circle of King's Daughters, held yesterday afternoon and evening, at 65 Grandview avenue, a great success financially as well as socially. The ice-cream department was carefully managed by Miss Cora VanArsdale, president of the circle, assisted by the Misses Mabel Stevens, Lucetta Clark, Flossie Conroy and Eva Dorringer. The cake table was under the efficient control of Miss Emma Stevens. Lemonade was furnished to the thirsty by Miss May Conroy, while behind a table prettily decorated with pink, the Misses Lydia Pangborn, Bertha Stevens and Lizzie Hoagland, sold candy to the ready purchasers. The popcorn table was cared for by Miss Mary Hoagland.

The entire stock was sold out, and the managers of the festival expect great returns from the sale of tickets. The festival was held for the benefit of the city nurse.

ACTED OUT ADVERTISEMENTS

NEW FORM OF ENTERTAINMENT GIVEN BY THE METHODISTS.

The Last Sociable of the Season Given in the Front Street Church Last Night—Happy Affair All Around.

The last, but by no means the least, of the spring sociables of the Epworth League of the First Methodist Episcopal church was held in Vincent chapel last evening, and thoroughly enjoyed by a goodly number of members and friends.

The programme opened with a Rose Drill by Miss Anna Teale, after which the audience was favored with a selection, "'Blige the Lady," by Plainfield's only George O. Stevens, the applause for which would not cease until he sang another selection. A novel form of entertainment was then tried. Different advertisements were represented and the audience guessed what they were. Miss C. Florence Barnes first represented the well-known picture of "Chocolate Menier." WilburF. Cornwell made a good chef in representing Franco American soups." Miss Teale next gave a selection, "Mohameden Prayer," a pantomime of easter temple service. Miss Lucie Davis next came on the platform in the well-known costume of the "Baker's Chocolate" girl. A table was brought up, and Raymond A. McGee, disguised as a baby with long dress, sat down to the table and tried to cut a pretended pancake. The cake could not be cut, so he attempted to take it whole and then rushed from the platform, while everyone cried "Hecker's Buckwheat;" the toughness was not the cause of the correct guess though. Miss Teale next faced the audience with a pantomime hymn, "Nearer My God to Thee," which was sung by Miss Madge Barnes. The effect was very pretty.

After a little interval for conversation, Miss Grace E. Overton gave the recitation "Old Ace," in her usual excellent manner, holding the close attention of all through the piece.

After the programme was completed, lemonade and cake were served while conversation took possession of the room. The sociable was arranged by the literary and social committees of the Epworth League of which David Dunavan and Miss Elsie Horne are respectively chairmen.

The refreshments were under the special charge of Miss Sharp, Miss Jackson, Miss Roberts and Miss Van-Middlesworth.

In City Court.

One Rip VanWinkle-like specimen named H. Halet was brought before Judge Coddington this morning for being drunk and disorderly in the Boulevard last night. The Judge suspended sentence and ordered him to leave tawn at once.

Mrs. Freeman, colored, complained against Mrs. Henderson, colored, both of West Fourth street, for disorderly conduct. Mrs. Henderson was bound over for $200 to keep the peace for one year.

Virgil Sherrill pleaded guilty to the charge of Policeman McCue of riding on the sidewalk on East Front street. Sentence was suspended.

Contracts for Bank Improvements.

Pearson & Gale will do the carpenter work, J. P. Emmons the masonry work, and Marsh, Ayres & Co., the painting on the new First National Bank building. The entire present structure will be taken down. The bank will endeavor to move into the old postoffice building, opposite the City National Bank, next Saturday after closing hours. The bank will rent two large fireproof safes to store their papers, books and currency during the changes. The contractors will commence work on the building as soon as it is empty.

The County Election Boards.

Governor Werts has approved the lists of men submitted by the Republican and Democratic State Executive Committees as nominees for members of the County Boards of Election. The Democratic list was handed in by Allan McDermott, Chairman of the State Committee, yesterday. His recommendations for this county were the same as last year, Dr. David Schleimer of this city, and Elmer D. Moffett of Plainfield. The Republicans are E. C. Woodruff of this city, and William Chamberlain of Rahway.

Take It Away.

The large tool chest on Watchung avenue betweeu Second street and North avenue, belonging to Honan & Son, the sewer contractors, is becoming an eyesore to the residents in the neighborhood. It should be removed, since the sewer on that thoroughfare has been completed for over a week.

CROKER MAKES DENIAL

Says Simms Did Not Drive a Horse to Death.

Believes the Animal Died from Lockjaw Caused by Striking His Hoof on a Flint—Talk of Arresting the ex-Tammany Leader and His Jockey for Cruelty to an Animal.

London, June 29.—William Simms, Richard Croker's colored jockey, is likely to be arrested and severely punished as a result of driving a horse on Monday, June 17, from Newmarket to Cambridge and return within an hour, a distance of twenty-six miles, on a wager. An investigation into the affair by the officers of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals began last evening.

May Arrest Croker Also.

A special officer of the society was sent to Newmarket with instructions to investigate the story, and if the cruelty is proved a warrant for the jockey's arrest will be issued. The officer has also been instructed to find out whether the companion of Simms in his drive was Richard Croker, and if this should turn out to be the case there may be serious trouble in store for Croker as well as for Simms.

Labouchere's Severe Denunciation.

The action of the society was due to Jerome K. Jerome and Henry Labouchere. The latter says, in Truth: "After reading an account of the performance I expected to announce that Simms had brought an action for libel or had been fined the heaviest penalty for such diabolical conduct. No punishment is too bad for a man who would flog a horse to death, and I would cheerfully see Simms flogged along the high road and made to run until he dropped dead."

Mr. Croker's Story.

A representative of the United Press interviewed Richard Croker in connection with the story about Jockey Simms. Mr. Croker said he was not aware of any projected arrest or of any legal proceedings. He gave the following account of the affair: "About ten days ago I, in company with Simms, drove from the Newmarket stables two horses, Billy A and Shea Wilkes, to Cambridge in an hour and ten minutes. The distance is thirteen miles. No wager of any sort depended on the drive. Near Cambridge Billy A caste a shoe and was taken to a smith's shop. Arriving at Cambridge I took a train to London.

The Horse Was Walked Home.

"I sent Shea Wilkes home in charge of Simms. Billy A was consigned to the care of a groom named Dick Dame, with orders to walk him home. This, I am told, was done, but the horse died when nearly home. A veterinary surgeon was called, but he could not state definitely the cause of death. I expect that after losing the shoe the horse trod on a flint and got lockjaw or something of the kind. Both horses were as fresh as could be expected after the drive to Cambridge."

FOR RESCUING ARNO'S CREW.

The Normannia's Seamen Will Get Nearly $5,000.

London, June 29.—The admiralty court has made the following awards for salvage of the British ship Arno, which was abandoned at sea in April last, and subsequently picked up and towed to port with her cargo: To the Hamburg-American line steamship Normannia, which saved the Arno's crew, £1,020; to the British steamship Merrimac, which picked up and towed the ship, after putting a prize crew on board, £6,440, and to the British tug Telephone, which relieved the Merrimac of her prize and towed her safely into port, £350. Of the sum awarded to the Normannia the court assigns £600 to the owners and £420 to the crew; but the Hamburg-American company has asked that all the Normannia's award be divided among the crew, except £90 to cover expenses actually incurred by the owners.

Serious Result of a Religious Quarrel in Spain.

Madrid, June 29.—During a religious procession at San Matteo, near Ferrol, a seaport and one of the principal arsenals of Spain, a dispute arose as to who should carry the picture of the patron saint. The crowd fought with knives, sticks and revolvers, and the conflict resulted in forty being injured, including the parish priest.

New York, June 29.—The Kings county grand jury for June has dismissed the complaints made by George F. Elliott, president of the Law Enforcement society of Brooklyn, against the Brooklyn and Coney Island Jockey club. He charged the club with violating the law in permitting pool selling and betting on its tracks.

Ruined by Bikes and Trolleys.

Morristown, Pa., June 29.—The advent of the trolley cars and the craze for bicycles injured the business of P. W. Jost, a leading liveryman here to such an extent that he has made an assignment. His liabilities are $10,000; assets, $4,000.

Prize Fighters Let Go.

YALE'S VICTORY.

Harvard's 'Varsity Eight No Match for the Blues.

New London, Conn., June 29.—The last and most brilliant jewel in Yale's athletic diadem was placed with true blue settings in the New Haven boys' crown by unwilling Harvard on the Thames late yesterday. It was Yale's fourth consecutive victory and her eighth in nine years, and the presence of 200 yards of open water between the shells robs the triumph of a keen sportsman-like flavor. Yesterday's time also marks the conclusion of the five years Yale-Harvard agreement, and much doubt exists regarding a renewal of the contract, in view of the cordiality of the athletic relations at present existing between Harvard and Cornell.

Harvard's Work Not Meritorious.

Critically judged, Harvard's exhibition was not meritorious. The stroke was slow when it should have been sharp, speedy when it was needless, but ragged continually. The coxswain's errors, too, were atrocious. They caused Harvard to lose the benfit of the current where the "trade winds" might have counted, ran the Harvard shell into the heavy swash of one steamer and jammed its prow alongside into a rowboat at the finish.

Only One Record Broken.

A single record was broken, the two-mile distance in a four-mile competition. The chamion 1888 crew of Capt. Stevenson covered the distance in 10m. 35s. Yesterday Capt Armstrong's men made it in 10m. 21s. Yale gave the spectators as fine an exhibition of rowing as has been seen on the Thames. There was little enthusiasm, and even the Yale men neglected to cheer their crew as they drew away from Harvard.

Time by Miles.

The time by miles was as follows, official: One mile—Yale, 5m. 4s.; Harvard, 5m. 20s. Two miles—Yale, 10m. 21s.; Harvard, 10m. 39s. Three miles—Yale, 15m. 59s.; Harvard, 16m. 21s. Four miles—Yale, 21m. 30s.; Harvard, 22m. 5s. Yale's stroke throughout was 33. Harvard's was unsteady, varying from 32 to 36.

RUSSIA AND JAPAN.

The Shanghai Report of Pending Hostilities Discredited.

Washington, June 29.—Mr. Stevens, who is in charge of the Japanese legation during the absence of Minister Kurino, says that the reports of war between Russia and Japan are merely the revival of the vague speculation current some time ago, and that all the information reaching the legation indicates that the entente cordiale between Russia and Japan has been restored. The Russian fleet was withdrawn from Japanese waters after the settlement was made as to the Liao Tung peninsula, since which time there has been no evidence of friction.

LONDON BICYCLE SENSATION.

Body of Mrs. Scott-Campbell To Be Disinterred.

London, June 29.—A sensation has been created by the issuance of an order from the office of the home secretary for the exhumation of the body of Mrs. Scott-Campbell, widow of the army captain of that name, who died suddenly on June 18 at her home in a fashionable quarter of the city near Grosvenor square. The lady was out riding on a bicycle on June 16, and appeared to be in the best of health. The utmost secrecy is being observed in regard to the reasons for issuing the order for the disinterment of the body.

Against the Pope's Letter.

London, June 29.—The church association has issued a strongly-worded declaration concerning the pope's recent letter to the English people. FREAKS OF LICHTNING Peculiar Experience of a Boy Near Lancaster, Pa.

His Chin and Neck Scorched While Standing in a Hallway, But He Felt No Pain—Others with Him Uninjured—Two Men and a Woman Killed by the Bolts.

Lancaster, Pa., June 29.—Dr. E. O. Lyle, principal of the Millersville State Normal school, and his two sons Louis M., aged 8 years, and Joshua, aged 4, had a narrow escape from death by lightning during the storm Thursday evening. They were standing in a hallway in a draft, close together, when there was a flash of lightning, and the elder boy, putting his hand to his face, said he was burned.

Struck in the Face.

The lightning had struck him at the base of the lower lip, ran to the turn of the chin, and, making a jump of an inch, struck him on the throat, dividing into two branches, from which other minor lines diverged. Each of the main stems were about an inch long, and appear to have been broken up by the numerous radiations.

Experienced No Pain.

The flesh was scorched, but not blistered or burned, and the boy experienced very little pain, and to-day is apparently none the worse for his experience. Dr. Lyle was standing in front of the boy at the time, looking at him, and saw the discoloration appear on his face. Electricians who have been spoken to in regard to this freak of lightning, cannot explain it.

Lightning's Peculiar Work.

Glassboro, N. J., June 29.—Robert Dunn, living near Clayton, got a load of hay into his barn during a thunder storm Thursday night. A flash of lightning struck Dunn, threw him fifty feet and killed him instantly. One of the horses of his team was killed and the other was uninjured. Dunn's son, who was with him, was unhurt. The barn did not catch fire.

Man and Wife Killed.

Lowell, Mass., June 29.—During a heavy thunder storm yesterday lightning struck the house of Thomas Perier, at Tewksbury, instantly killing Mr. and Mrs. Perier, who were in the kitchen, and wrecking part of the building.

HANGED HIM IN EFFIGY.

Hot-Headed Quay County Advocates Vent Their Wrath on Gov. Hastings.

Hazelton, Pa., June 29.—The more hot-headed among the advocates of the bill for the creation of Quay county out of part of Luzerne and Schuylkill counties and which was vetoed by Governor Hastings are venting their indignation against the governor in a very outspoken way. At Freeland, about 9 miles from here, preparations were being made last night to burn Governor Hastings in effigy, but the town authorities removed the figure before the torch was applied to it. When early risers passed the corner of Broad and Wyoming streets in this city they saw an effigy purporting to represent the governor hanging from a pole. A placard on the figure bore an offensive inscription. The figure hung until 11 o'clock when it was cut down by the authorities. Several prominent citizens of Hazelton are said to have sent messages to Governor Hastings censuring him for vetoing the Quay county bill and the newspapers speak of the governor in the harshest terms.

Sickness * In Summer
is always most serious. The patient, due to the heat, is unable to absorb into the system sufficient nourishment to effect convalescence
Bovinine
in all such cases is indispensable, the greatest amount of nourishment in the least bulk. The act of digestion is in itself heating. Hence the benefit of obtaining nourishment with the least effort.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destored forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

OUTLOOK OF BUSINESS

The Week Just Closing Showed No Break.

Crop Prospects, However, Not So Encouraging as Last Week—Decrease in Business Failures—Enormous Wool Sales and Big Shipments of Boots and Shoes.

New York, June 29.—Dun's report for the week just closing will say to-day: The half yearly report of failures next week will include about 6,900 against 7,039 for the first half of last year, and liabilities of about $88,000,000 against $101,578,152 last year. But for the Cordage concern, the aggregate would be nearly 23 per cent. less than last year, and the manufacturing liabilities will be about $40,000,000 against $41,376,102 last year, and the trading $45,000,000 against $52,345,978 last year, while miscellaneous liabilities were only $2,700,000 against $7,836,072 last year. The liabilities for the second quarter will be about $41,000,000 against $47,813,683 for the first quarter this year, but $37,595,973 for the second quarter of 1894.

Crop Outlook Not So Favorable.

Business is better, although the crop outlook, affecting prospects beyond the near future, is a little less distinct. There is more ground for doubt about winter wheat and cotton than a week ago, and threshing receipts are comparatively low, though the prospects for spring wheat are exceedingly good. The price, a quarter of a cent lower for the week, is beyond mistake too low, if the latest impressions of injury to winter wheat are correct, and receipts for the week are relatively small. Cotton has fallen three-sixteenths to 7 cents, in spite of reports of serious injury by rains in Texas and Louisiana.

Enormous Wool Sales.

Speculation has even spread to the wool market, and with an advance of about one cent in prices the sales have been the largest ever known for any week—14,067,900 pounds, against 6,835,600 in 1892. A growing belief that the domestic clip is short, and an idea that the coming London sales, beginning July 2, will show higher prices, have been more potent than a little increase in the manufacturing demand, and the price has risen at all markets.

Boot and Shoe Trade.

Shipments of boots and shoes from the east for four weeks have been 389,836 cases against 342,509 for the same weeks last year, which was the largest record for that month, but the fact shows how imperfectly the number of cases reflects the general conditon. The prevailing preference is still for low priced goods, while the demand is good for season, leather continues strong, and hides, in spite of large imports, do not decline.

Encouraging Outlook.

The volume of business represented by exchanges through the principal clearing houses is, for the past week, 30.8 per cent. larger than last year, a really surprising gain, and only .7 of 1 per cent. less than in 1892, while the average for the month is 28.8 per cent. larger than last year, and 7.1 per cent less than in 1892. The return is highly encouraging, in spite of the comparative magnitude of speculative operations. There is strong reason for hope that the business of the coming year will be eminently satisfactory in volume, and owing to recent advances in prices and wages, more satisfactory to producers than could have been anticipated a few months ago.

INSANE FROM RELIGION.

Doyle Is the Worst Case the Asylum Attendants Ever Saw.

Port Jervis, N. Y., June 29.—Charles W. Doyle, a resident of French Woods, near Hancock, has been committed to the Binghamton insane asylum, excessive religious excitement having unbalanced his mined. Doyle was converted at the revival meetings last winter which were conducted by Miss E. M. White, an eloquent and handsome young woman exhorter. When three attendants from the asylum came for Doyle a terrible battle ensued before they were able to secure him. The frenzied man kicked and bit his captors and raved incessantly of religion and Miss White, the evangelist. The asylum authorities say it is the worst case they ever knew.

Oarsman Thompson in Poor Form.

London, June 29.—The Sportsman says that F. H. Thompson, the Canadian oarsman, is still much above proper weight, but that this hardly accounts for the moderate form he shows. At present he does not appear likely to be a dangerous antagonist to the holder of the diamond sculls.

They Are High Schools Now.

Albany, June 29.—The schools in the following places having met the requirements of the new system of graduating have been authorized by the regents to hereafter use the name high school: Central Square, North Tonawanda, Pittsford, South Side and Niagarn Falls.

TURKEY AND THE POWERS.

A Reply from the Sultan Likely To Be Demanded.

Constantinople, June 29.—The representatives of the powers are continuing their efforts to induce the Turkish government to give an explicit reply to their note outlining the reforms demanded for Armenia, and the foreign envoys are indignant at the delay. The Turkish minister for foreign affairs claims to be unable to furnish the envoys with information as to which portion of the plans of the powers the Turkish government is desirous further to discuss.

Must Reply in a Fixed Time.

It is thought probable that this dilatory course may result in causing the powers to address another note to the Turkish government in which they will request a definite reply within a fixed time to the demands already made. The British Mediterranean squadron left Alexandretta on Tuesday and steamed north. The Turkish government has received news of the defeat of two rebel bands in Macedonia. Steps have been taken by the porte to suppress attempts at revolt, but it is feared that the rebellion will spread to all parts of Macedonia, and eventually cause action upon the part of the powers.

MISS DODGE REMOVED.

Taken to Her Home Yesterday Afternoon in a Special Car.

Washington, June 29.—Miss Mary A. Dodge left Washington yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock for her home in Salam, Mass. She was taken to the station in an ambulance and made very comfortable in a special car attached to the regular train. Dr. Johnson found his patient so much better that it was unnecessary for him to make the journey with her. Miss Dodge was accompanied only by one of the trained nurses who have been with her since her attack of paralysis about two months ago. She was very bright, ate heartily and expressed her gratification at being able to finally get away from Washington. The Blaine family, with the exception of James G. Blaine, Jr., left two weeks ago for Augusta, Me., it being then apparent that Miss Dodge would soon be able to make the trip.

COLIMA WAS SEAWORTHY.

The Inspectors Unable To Decide the Cause of the Disaster.

San Francisco, June 29.—The United States local inspectors of steam vessels, Talbot and Phillips, have given their decision upon the loss of the Pacific mail steamship Colima. The decision finds that the Colima was staunch and seaworthy; that no danger was anticipated until five or ten minutes before the ship went down; that good discipline was maintained on board, and that without the reports of Capt. Taylor, his first officer and chief engineer it is impossible to decide the true cause of the disaster.

HIGHWAYMAN ROBBED THEM.

Another Hold-Up of the Ager Stage in Oregon.

Klamath Falls, Ore., June 29.—Another hold-up of the Klamath Falls and Ager stage occurred last night, making the fifth within three months. The robbery was committed by a lone highwayman near Topsy Grade, where the other robberies were executed. The north and southbound stages pass each other there, and the highwayman held one stage two hours pending the arrival of the other. He rifled the mail pouches of the registered matter and relieved the only passger, H. V. Gates, of $2.

TO EXONERATE CRISPI.

A Decree To Be Issued by Humbert Concerning the Herz Charges.

Rome, June 29.—It is announced that King Humbert will soon issue a decree exonerating Premier Crispi from the charges of having been connected with Dr Cornelius Herz, the Panama canal lobbyist, who has been under the surveillance of detectives for a long time past while awaiting extradition proceedings upon the part of the French goverument.

Goggin, who is known throughout the state as a trap shooter, conducts a concert garden. The trial has excited the greatest public interest here since the Shea trail.

Was Prince Henry Murdered?

COTTLE IS RETICENT

He May Be Forced To Tell His Story.

Buffalo's District Attorney Says He Must Appear Before the Grand Jury—Strange Conduct of the Lawyer Who Was Kidnapped and Imprisoned in a Cellar.

Buffalo, June 29.—There are no new developments in the Cottle kidnapping case. Edmund P. Cottle has not yet told the police all the incidents his interviews with John C. Emery at Fort Erie, but he has told enough to satisfy them that a large sum of money was paid to Emery, and that he was holding out for more. This was further corroborated by the fact that on Tuesday morning Edmund Cottle tried to negotiate a note at the Farmers and Mechanics' bank for a large amount of and was refused. The bank officials would not disclose the face value of the note, but it is said to have been $5,000. It is supposed Mr. Cottle succeeded in negotiating the note at some other bank and that Emory got the entire sum.

Will Force Him To Appear.

The strange actions and extreme reticence of the Cottles' is another phase of the case which puzzles the authorities. The police stated that Mr. Cottle had agreed positively to confer with District Attorney Kenefick at his office yesterday forenoon and to go before the grand jury for the purpose of furnishing information with which to secure an indictment against Emery and Allen. In spite of his promise Cottle failed to appear, sending word that he was too ill. The officials say now if Mr. Cottle does not appear to-day he will be taken by force before the grand jury, if he is physically able to be out.

TRIAL OF THE ST. LOUIS.

The American Liner Will Be Speeded in English Waters.

Washington, June 29.—Secretary Herbert has designated Capt. Royal B. Bradford and Lieut. Richard T. Mulligan a board to conduct a speed trial of the American line steamer St. Louis, in accordance with the provisions of the ocean mail subsidy act. These officers, who were selected because of their familiarity with such matters, will leave New York on board the St. Louis Aug. 7. Arriving at Southampton the ship will be docked and cleaned, ready for the trial, which will take place in the English channel between Aug. 14 and 24, the St. Louis being scheduled to sail for home on the latter date. The two naval officers will lay off a course measuring 100 miles in the channel and the St. Louis will be speeded repeatedly over this carefully measured course to determine whether she complies with the requirements of the postal law, calling for a maintained speed of twenty knots per hour for four hours. No doubt is expressed that the St. Louis will show her ability to fill these conditions with relative ease, but great interest will centre in the trial, as it is thought the officials of the American company will give the ship free rein, and perhaps develop a phenomenal burst of speed.

RAINMAKING A HUMBUG.

Frank Melbourne Admits That He Deceived the Public.

Cleveland, O., June 29.—Frank Melbourne, whose services were in urgent demand in the west two or three years ago as a rainmaker, is now in the city. In speaking of his experience as a rainmaker, Melbourne admitted that the whole thing was a humbug, and that he never possessed any more power to bring rain than any other man. He says the American people like to be humbugged, and the greater the fake the easier it is to work it. Melbourne made a fortune in the business.

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

While at Peekskill, N. Y., Mr. J. A. Scriven, a prominent manufacturer of New York City, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Such good results were obtained from its use that he sent back to the druggist from whom he had obtained it for two more bottles of the same remedy. When you have a cough or cold give this preparation a trial and like Mr. Scriven you will want it when again in need of such a medicine. It is a remedy of great worth and merit. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

While in Topeka last March, E. T. Barber, a prominent newspaper man of La Cygne, Kansas, was taken with cholera morbus very severely. The night clerk at the hotel where he was stopping happened to have a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and gave him three doses which relieved him and he thinks saved his life. Every family should keep this remedy in their home at all times. No one can tell how soon it may be needed. It costs but a trifle and may be the means of saving much suffering and perhaps the life of some member of the family. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

A MODEL COTTAGE FOR $550.

Plans for the Erection of a Cheap and Pretty Suburban Home.

(Copyright 1895 by the Co-operative Building Plan Association.)

It is one of the primary principles of political economy that the happiness and prosperity of a country is gauged by the general thrift of the inhabitants, and not by the abundance of the few. That would be the model community in which each head of the family owned, in the derisive words of the British statesman, "An acre and a cow," even if not a single individual had much greater possession than that.

"Landlordism" is responsible for much of the misery which exists in cities. Happily there is a growing disposition in this country for wage earners to become householders. It is not difficult for the laboring man and the small artisan to render themselves independent of landlords. The suburbs of our cities have abundant room for growth, and the land is not all in the possession of a few families. Every day it is proven possible for a man with shrewd management, prudence and a little self-denial to build and own a house for himself, with scarcely more of a weekly outlay than he was called upon to expend in rent. A dollar or two more a month for a few years is not difficult to manage, when it means in the end such a neat and attractive home as is pictured herewith, instead of a mere memory of shelter and fat profits in the pocket of a landlord.

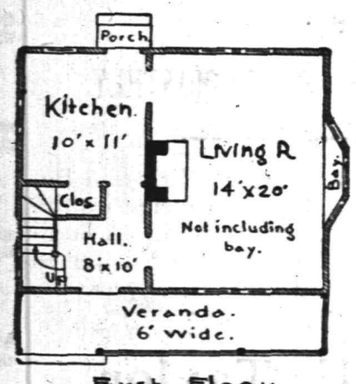
This little cottage, which is capable of various modifications to suit individual tastes, can be built, according to the most careful and reliable estimates, for $550. Its width, including bay, is 27 feet; depth, including veranda, 17 feet; height of first story, 8 feet 6 inches; second story, 8 feet.



First Floor.

Exterior materials: Foundation, posts or piers; first story, clapboards; bay-window, gables, dormers and roofs, shingles.

Interior finish: Two coat plaster, soft wood flooring, trim and staircase. Interior woodwork finished in hard oil.

Colors: Body, all clapboards and shingles of bay window, terra cotta; trim, Pompeiian red; shingles in gables and sides of dormers treated with burnt sienna and oil; roof, shingles, dark red; sashes, bronze green; blinds, terra cotta; veranda floor and ceilings, oiled.

The principal rooms and their sizes, closets, etc., are shown by the floor plans. Open fireplace in the living room and cheerful bay window. Front door glazed handsomely. A circular cellar may be added in which vegetables may not freeze. The living room may be divided in half with a smaller bay window in the front room, and the back used as a dining-room, with open fireplace which heats upstairs, economizing the expenditure of the coal. A few extra dollars will build a one-story extension at the rear, used as a store-house or woodshed, and in the summer as a laundry when the heat of the kitchen range would be oppressive.

The finished neatness of this design, its economical arrangement of rooms and the low cost for which it can be built, appeals directly to the mechanic and the laboring man. Nor is it a hard matter to figure how so small a sum be made to represent a weekly or monthly payment scarcely in excess of the rent of a room or two in the crowded city tenement.

An Up-to-Date Donation Party.

The Rochester Herald says the Rev. A. W. Hayes of Asbury Methodist Church, is the happy owner of a brand new bicycle. It was presented to him the other night by the members of the church. The young people and many of the older members of the congregation assembled in the church parlor to participate in a "poor man's social," and incidentally the wheel was pushed out from behind the curtains and given to Mr. Hayes.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

A DRAMATIC EVENING
BY
John Seymour Wood

(Copyright, 1895, by Irving Bacheller.)

BEFORE THE PERFORMANCE.

"The man that I admire—he is quite impossible!" She laughed, "he must be infinitely clever, infinitely unselfish, infinitely energetic, infinitely capable, cool, reliant, brave—and a gentleman!"

The words rang in his memory. They had been spoken at a crowded reception, in a flower scented drawing room, amid the terrible buzz of a hundred high-pitched voices. They had been spoken by a glorious young woman, her chin up, her eyes flashing, her face radiant, the whole intensity of her nature in each cadenced word. They had been spoken at the end of a short, half-flippant conversation—and, indeed, had suddenly ended it—for the girl had burst away, as it were, from the narrowness of flippancy, and given him a sudden flash of her soul. It was quite impossible to do more than look his admiration at her radiant face. Her eyes dropped from his ardent gaze. Another man came up with several well-dressed ladies. Harold Burnett quietly left the room and took his departure from the crowded function, then at its height.

He had met Eleanor Armitage only a few weeks before. In his capacity as dramatic critic on a great New York daily, he had bestowed a few words of discriminating praise on the young English actress who had taken the town by storm, in her fresh and beautiful interpretation of Camille. She had sent for him at her hotel and thanked him. He had called once or twice since. He had met her brother—a curious, flabby, pale Englishman. This afternoon he saw her at a fashionable reception, where her English beauty shone amid the flower garden of the pretty American girls.

He saw, and he realized that he saw—with the eyes of a lover. It amused him to perceive a thrill of delight when, in the crush at the door, he overheard a handsome, impulsive girl say to another, "Eleanor Armitage, the actress, is perfectly ideal—she is lovelier off the stage than on. * * * She is good!" And the anger he felt as he took his hat and stick from a servant, to overhear an elderly gentleman say to another, "Oh, she's English and she's pretty and wears good clothes—and so New York has gone crazy over her, of course. It's a way New York has!"

He strode off, down the avenue to his club and dined alone, with a mild pint of warm Burgundy—so that he should not be disturbed in his silent contemplation of her—the girl who seemed, but, ah, so high, so pure, so cold, so above the "depravity of love!" The one woman who filled his dreams, night and day; the magnet of his thoughts—he loved her! Ah, that he could show it worthily, earn her gratitude still further as he had begun to do by praise in the face of the critics. To praise her now was to join in the ruck—no credit in her blue eyes! no, nor in his own grey ones! Ah, that he could show himself a man, and perform some deed of heroic effort for her!

"A perfect woman—nobly planned,"

After dinner he avoided his friends, and strolled out into the starry night before the performance, to be alone with his cigar—and thoughts of her. And then it was that the phantasm of her cool, smooth, fat, yet dissipated looking brother seemed to make himself particularly obnoxious. At every call he had made on her after that first visit, the brother had obtruded his fat face between them. Miss Armitage had betrayed a slight feeling of loathing for this same "brother," he thought—he had detected a look of pain in her face as he entered. Ah, this brother, this brother!—how could such a sot have had the same parentage as his goddess? Then he remembered Cain and Abel, and laughed, threw away his cigar, and drew near the well-lighted theater where his goddess was playing.

AT THE PERFORMANCE

Shakespeare says that "Life's a poor player that struts and frets his hour upon the stage!" "All the world's a stage," he adds, "and men and women are but players," etc. These glittering generalities are only partly true. The life play, if a play, is Chinese, not modern. It is long drawn out—vague, purposeless, unwieldy. It has no beginning, no middle, no end, no art. It has incidents, escapades, formless bits of incident, sometimes it has plots—but plots and villains are growing uncommon in our well ordered communities. "There may, too, be a play within a play," said Burnett, as he entered the lobby and nodded to one or two newspaper men he knew. "For example," he said aloud, turning to the manager, a sad little man with a nervous manner, who was standing near the box office.

"For example? Well?" answered the manager, impatiently. "Burnett—you are a good friend to us these days. You seem to find some new charm in Miss Armitage every day."

"As I was saying," said Burnett stiffly. "To whom? I should say, Burnett, if I didn't know you to be an incorrigible woman hater—you were in love. Your wits are so often wool gathering lately."

Burnett straightened himself up quickly. "For example, Mr. Manager, there are several dozen plays in progress every night at your theater, while the fictitious one is going through its three or four acts. I saw last night while the curtain was up and the lights were down, that Mrs. Lightfoot and her escort (a handsome young chap), did not see Mr. Lightfoot grinning down at them with a decidedly satanic leer from the balcony. When the entr' acte arrived and the lights went up, they caught sight of his severely bald head. As he distinctly left home that day for Boston—we have the true incident of comedy, the note of which is always surprise—as Mr. Lightfoot, for some reason, hates his wife's handsome young cavalier, and has forbidden him the house. The first act was already over and was out of the theater; for the second act, Mr. Lightfoot came down and greeted them freezingly, and Madame went suddenly home with her husband. The third act occurred, you see, at the "palatial" home of the Lightfoots—a stormy scene, I believe, tears recriminations, reconciliation—finale!"

"Ugh," growled the manager. "It makes me tired to think of any more plays—one's enough!"

Burnett turned absently toward a row of Miss Eleanor Armitage's photographs in a gilded frame.

A blissful thing, indeed, to love an actress—and as one runs to read the postered features of one's beloved in every shop and bar room! To see one's sweetheart staring from every fence and street corner—and how infinitely galling to see her—the "inimitable she"—daubed with a moustache, by some infamous street gamin, or treated in some barbarous fashion by some local wit! A sensitive "star" will, at the time of an engagement, keep severely within doors (how many do so!) The star's lover will best remain in obscurity also, and avoid shocking his sensitive soul!

Harold Burnett, who had the run of the theaters, for he was the prince of critics, the maker or marrer of theatrical fame, nodded to the doorkeeper, and strolled listlessly in to a seat, given him by the usher, in front. He heard the orchestra play with a feverish sense of anticipation. He saw the curtain rise. He saw Miss Armitage enter with that loping, graceful step of hers, and say to Nannine, in a stilled house:

"Tell them to have supper ready; Olympe and Saint Gaudens are coming. I met them at the opera. (To DeVarville) So, you are here, eh?"

Then he was in another dream world—and his heart gnawed itself with jealousy of the Paris-rural Armand, the ardent "French true lover." Gentle reader, pray pity the wretched lover of an actress. How much his nerves are called on to endure!

THE FIRST ENTR' ACTE.

As the curtain descended at the end of the first act he found himself behind the scenes.

Miss Eleanor Armitage hurried off the stage (an elegantly set drawing-room scene), where now, for the twentieth time, she had so admirably fainted in the dance with Armand (Mr. Wickersham). She was dressed in one of Worth's most charming creations—a white costume du bal—her diamonds, though chiefly paste, gave none the less brilliancy to her appearance. As she stepped into the wings, her maid quickly adjusted about her shoulders a light cloak, which, of some dark material, enveloped her to her feet, and changed her from a laughing courtesan to a nun.

"NO! FROM DEARER THAN A BROTHER."

At the same moment Burnett made his bow, and a call boy delivered a telegram into her hand. It was marked "Rush." She opened it quickly.

Barnett was rather a fine-looking fellow, tall, athletic, an ex-college oarsman. His face was intelligent and kindly—at the same time full of decision. He looked especially well in evening dress. As it was rather warm, he hung his light overcoat over his arm. He watched Miss Armitage's face light up with pleasure as she read the dispatch, which she immediately crumpled in the palm of her gloved hand. He stood pulling at the ends of his dark mustache, vaguely wondering from whom the message had come. She noticed his ill-concealed look of inquiry, and smiled.

"From a man?" he asked, carelessly.

"A man," she nodded, laughing. "Why not?"

He looked into her eyes. There was a girlish espieglerie, an exquisite flavor in what she said and did, which gave her, to him, an irresistible charm. Her hostess at a tea that afternoon had quoted a famous actress who had said, "I felt that I must go on the stage; so I threw my reason to the winds, my modesty to the dogs, all the law and gospels to those that needed them, and plunged!" After the laughter had subsided at this speech Eleanor Armitage had said simply (during a little pause), "I threw away nothing. I—rather—do not think me a prude—I began to study my Bible."

Harold Burnett, who had come down to the city from New England, from one of those white little hamlets which lie with their spires like jewels set in the Green Mountain valleys, turned aside thoughtfully as he heard the remark. It was but another rivet in his love chain! All his intimate knowledge of New York, all his acquaintance with the stage and the people on it—so far, for he was under 30—he had held to his high ideals of womanhood. A favorite sister had died, and lay buried up there in the little cemetery beneath the shadow of the old Vermont mountains. Ah, that sweet, gentle spirit of purity, loyalty and honor—it clung close to Harold Burnett still, in the crowded city wherever he went. It kept him from folly.

He was glad, as he believed that Eleanor Armitage was worthy of his sainted sister. The telegram to-night jarred on this sensitive impression a little. Her manner, too, puzzled him.

"From your brother?" he asked, as her maid brought her bonnet.

She glanced quickly at him.

"No, not from my brother—from one dearer than a brother."

His eyes betrayed eager inquiry, and there was a note of half-amused vexation, as she said hurriedly to the messenger, "Call me a cab instantly, at the stage door."

"I thought, your brother not being here——"

"He does not always come to the theater."

"When he does not come, will you not allow me to take his place?" He spoke very seriously.

She laughed merrily. "You are amusing, my friend. In you there is such a combination of innocence and—and—audacity. Au revoir; I am going to make a call. Can I do it in ten minutes?"

"You can do anything," he laughed, following her down to the stage entrance and putting her into her carriage, which had quickly driven up.

She gave the driver a hasty direction, and the coupe rattled quickly away down the stony street

Burnett lit a cigar, and stood a moment looking after her carriage.

"What an odd caprice," he thought. "She received a dispatch from a man, and it evidently pleased her tremendously. (Puff from his cigar.) She jumps into her carriage, as if in answer to it, and is off, and, I declare, it's all rather queer." Then he laughingly quoted Chimnie Fadden's fine remark, "Everything goes wat Miss Fanny does—see? Wat she does an' says goes—see? Dat's right!" So, with him, he said to himself, "Everything Miss Armitage did must be right."

A moment later he found himself involuntarily walking at a nervously swift pace in the direction her carriage had taken.

WHERE THE CYCLIST COMES IN.

Common Council of Cyclists is Not Improbable, and Then Look Out.

To The Editor of The Daily Press:—

Will you allow me a few remarks suggested by City Judge Coddington's manifesto against the cyclist printed last night, telling of the dreadful peril of the man who dares to wheel after July 5th. I don't wish to refer to the so-called bicycle ordinance because, of course, all such measures are absurb.

While they are about it, too, would it not be well to give us a tip as to how the so-called bicycle ordinance now stands? Some say that a fine for having one's light go out is $10 others say $5 others $2 and even $1 Ditto concerning sidewalk riding when the streets are absolutely impassable.

I should not mind paying one or two dollars once in a while provided the policemen were polite about it, but five or ten is a trifle too strong, and would make one feel almost like a wrong-doer.

If the Common Council must amuse itself monkeying with bicycles, why does it not enact an ordinance to send up the idiots who throw bottles and tacks in the public streets, or who, without looking where they are going cross at points other than corners, and to electrocute the careless children permitted to run wild in the middle of the thoroughfares? If a cyclist knowing his business is not to be allowed to use the sidewalks when it is utterly impossible for him to ride anywhere else, it would seem only fair that the large percentage of brainless pedestrians who do not know how to take care of themselves, should be kept from the roadways.

It will be well for the Council to consider that in a very short time the wheelmen will be the majority everywhere and that it will soon be a matter of duty to look after the cyclist first and be very civil about election time. Some day we will elect a Council of wheelmen, and have some light upon the subject.

Meanwhile we must just whoop it up till July 5th, and then lay low.

FOREMAN CHARLES ROLFE.

Superintendent of One of the Biggest Composing Rooms in America.

Up in the top story of The Globe building, where the typesetting and other machines do everything but talk, says the Boston Globe, there is a pleasant-faced, clear-skinned, light-complexioned man of 52, who has been with The Globe ever since the birthday of that great paper. He is the night foreman of the composing room, and looks fully 15 years younger than he really is. His name is Mr. Charles Rolfe.

Nervous headaches that well-nigh drove him to distraction first introduced him to Paine's celery compound. That was five years ago, and until that time he was one of tue most pronounced opponents of prepared remedies to be found in the city.

Just how Paine's celery compound was first brought to his attention he does not remember, but it has done him so much good that the compound has no more enthusiastic champion living. He is as happy as any on in the enjoyment of good health could be, and for that happiness he gives full credit to Paine's celery compound. Read what he has to say about the medicine:

"I am always ready to recommend Paine's celery compound when I hear of a case similar to my own. Some five years ago I was suffering from headaches which were sometimes so severe during working hours of the night that I would clasp my hands over my head to "hold the top on," the pain being excruciating. These attacks would occur sometimes as often as three times a week. Sleep was out of the question, the pillow seeming but a block of wood.

"Just at the time I was suffering most I bought a bottle of Paine's celery compound, began at once to take it, and before a week had passed the headaches began to disappear. I felt almost a new man before the bottle was empty. I purchased more, and for two years kept it in the house for use whenever I felt a return of the old pains. It never failed in giving me relief. The other members of my family also began to take it—my wife for a feeling of general weakness, she being at that time much "run down" and never feeling well enough to perform the work of the home. Within a week she was, as she expressed it, "as well as ever in her life," and similar reports came from all our friends to whom we had recommended it.

"I feel confident that in nervous headaches and a 'run down' system the compound will be beneficial every time, if not a perfect cure.

"In some instances we have not only recommended it, but furnished it to very aged friends, and the effect of one bottle has seemed marvelous, one particular old friend of mine telling me that before one bottle had been used he the felt at least ten years younger, and certainly had not felt as good for ten years.

During the last five years I have used a great many bottles of the compound—that is, in my home. I am positive that it is a sure cure for nervous headaches and a broken-down feeling, especially in the case of elderly persons.

"There is one case in particular I call to mind, in which Paine's celery compound asserted its good qualities. We had a young married lady friend, who was nursing her four-months-old child, and found that she could not perform her household duties on account of the weak condition she seemed always to be in. On the recommendation of my wife and myself she took one bottle of the compound, and before two weeks had passed was able to do her own washing even, in addition to housework. About three bottles were used. I have yet to hear from any friend to whom I recommended it other than the most favorable results."
